With threats of a 35-gallon-per-month limit on gasoline in the air, Shelby County commuters are beginning to look around for alternatives to the private car for transportation.

The Reporter researched public transportation this week and found some helpful and interesting information.

While many people do not realize it, the big bus lines are still running several bus routes through the county. And a surprising number of county residents depend upon the local taxi cabs for all of their transportation needs. Car pools could solve the problems of quite a few commuters. Motorcycles are easing the gasoline shortage for some workers. For those who live near their place of work, bicycling and walking are options in pleasant weather.

Greyhound Bus Lines have not been affected by the fuel crisis, according to assistant superintendent Upchurch of their Birmingham office. Neither their scheduled times nor the number of bus trips has been altered significantly, he added in a telephone interview with the Reporter. Upchurch stated that their office is allocated the same amount of gas from their headquarters as they received in 1972 and 1973.

The Greyhound line operates on Highway 31 in Shelby County with bus stops in Alabaster at Nash Rexall Drug, and in Calera at Cowart Drug. Five round trips through the county are scheduled daily. A northbound bus from Alabaster leaves at 6:35 a.m., 10:15 a.m., 3:55 p.m., 8:50 p.m., and 11:45 p.m. The southbound buses arrive in Alabaster from Birmingham at 9:25 a.m., 12:10 p.m., 3:10 p.m., 6:05 p.m., and 11:40 p.m. Buses going north leave Calera fifteen to thirty minutes earlier, and arrive about the same amount of time later on the way south. The bus fare from Alabaster to Birmingham is $1.55.

Continental Trailways covers the Highway 280 portion of the county near Leeds, Sterrett, Dunnavant, Westover, Harpersville and vicinity. Several "local" buses make stops all along the route, while there are also non- stop "express" buses through the 280 area. The bus makes stops in the Harpersville area on six trips to Birmingham: 2 a.m., 8 a.m., and noon, 1:30 p.m., 8:00 p.m., and 8:30. The bus stops at its various stations along 280 on its trip from Birmingham on seven runs: 4:00 a.m., 8:30 a.m., 1:30 p.m., 3:00 p.m., 4:30 p.m., 7:00 p.m., and 11:30 p.m.

Trailways' Birmingham manager, Mr. Johnson, told the Reporter that the fuel shortage has not affected the bus line, and that "if rationing begins, we'll have to play it by ear." He predicted that rationing could raise bus fares slightly, but it is still too early to be sure.

Henry Young of the Calera Cab Company says that the fuel shortage will not hurt the cab business, but neither will it help them. Young says that there is 17% less gas available for taxi cabs this year compared to last year.

The Public Service Commission approved fare increases for several of the county's cab companies, effective December 20, 1973. The new rate going into effect varies from town to town.

Some of the cab companies are still operating under the old rate, and until their individual rate hike petitions are approved it is illegal for them to charge a fare equal to the new rate of local competitors.

If a cab company charges more than the rate painted on their car and posted in the cab, it can lose its license to operate. Most cabs can legally operate in a 25- mile radius

Storm victims recover

By Rick Moore

Seven months have come and gone since the destructive tornado swept across Shelby County on May 27. One person was killed and hundreds of county residents suffered personal injury and loss of property.

Many who lost their homes moved in with relatives and friends. the HUD disaster program provided aid for many, providing temporary housing to strieken families.

Now, months later, what has happened to these disaster victims? How are they recovering from their personal loss -- and in some cases, bodily injury?

As a beginning, the Reporter contacted Teresa and Donna Jones of Calera, who were both injured that night in May when the tornadic winds blew across Alabama. The two girls, the daughters of Winfred Jones of Calera, live in a temporary HUD trailer on highway 31 north in Calera. Their bright intelligent faces and their family's clean, neat home are a testament to the Jones's stamina in recovering from the disaster.

Teresa, the youngest sister, received injuries to her right eye, suffered a broken arm, two broken legs and a broken hip. She spent two months in the hospital recovering from these multiple injuries. Even though Teresa still has to use crutches to get around, she cheerfully attests that she is well and fine.

Donna, who suffered from a borken jaw, collar bone, and pelvic bone, was knocked unconscious for about four weeks she says. Donna stayed in the hospital one and a half months before she was able to come home.

Teresa tells of their ordeal the night of the tornado.

"I was at my grandmother's house," she says, "When my sister called me to come home. The wind was blowing real bad, and she had heard of the tornado warning."

Teresa says that after going to her house, the wind started to rise, and the two girls could hear rocks blowing against the house. They hid between the bed and a wall when the storm hit.

"I heard my sister yelling," Teresa continued. "I wanted to Southern tracks get facelifting

The mechanical clanking of machinery, the sounds of gasoline engines and the occasional squawk of a two-way radio have replaced the rhythmic chant of human voices as a 44 man work crew makes its way across Shelby County, resurfacing and improving the road bed of the Southern Railway between Wilton and Talladega.

Gone is the chant of "I've been Working on the Railroad" -- instead an observer can hear the hum of highly sophisticated equipment spreading and leveling ballast.

No longer do you hear "one, two, three, heave -- one two three heave". Instead there is the rhythmic clank of metal against metal as machinery positions cross-ties at right angles to rails.

Some of the romance of the rails is gone, but efficiency and economy are evident as the crew moves out at one and a half miles per day, rain or shine.

The current project in Shelby County is a regular part of the railway's cycle- maintenance program, according to F.R. Myers, Division Engineer with the Southern.

Myers told the Reporter that the roadbed receives a thorough resurfacing every five years.

The maintenance project includes rebuilding grade crossings where streets, roads and highways cross the railroad tracks, replacing cross-ties, timbering where necessary and bringing the road bed to proper levels and elevations.

"Railroad crews do all the work except the rebuilding of grade crossings," Myers, said. C.E. Waters Construction Company of Selma is the firm employed to rebuild the crossings.

Although not necessarily most important to the railroad, the condition of the crossings is most evident to the general public. The current project will not only include new cross-ties at intersections, but also new asphalt. An effort is being made to make the crossings as smooth as possible for passenger cars and trucks.

The familiar railroad cross-tie is one of the most important products involved in the improvement project.

The standard cross-tie measures eight feet six inches in length. It is seven inches high and nine inches wide. The typical cross-tie is pressure creosoted white oak, and is grown and produced in the south. The Southern buys ties in carload lots of 350 to 400 ties per carload and pays slightly more than $7 per tie.

Ties are placed at 20 inch-on- center, intervals and the project under way calls for replacing some 865 ties per mile.

Special requirements such as switches, junctions and spurs call for varying tie lengths. Some are as long as sixteen and a half feet.

Myers told the Reporter that many of the highly specialized pieces of maintenance equipment were developed on this Shelby County segment of

Alabaster Board moves to new office

The Alabaster Water and Gas Board moved into its new offices Wednesday, December 19. Located adjacent to the Alabaster city hall, the new office building will separate the Water and Gas Board employees from those of the City of Alabaster, and relieve the formerly crowded offices in the city hall building.

The spacious new offices of the Water and Gas Board will add to the efficiency in administering utility service to the residents of Alabaster, city spokesmen say.

The new building has a spacious lobby, large main office space, a separate billing room for the water and gas accounts, two private offices, a kitchenette, and a conference room. In addition, the basement of the building will offer about 2800 feet of storage space for the utility board's equipment.

Alabaster mayor Harold Davenport, who also serves as chairman of the Water and Gas Board, told the Reporter that the cost of constructing the building has run less than originally expected. Davenport explained that the lowest bid for the job submitted by a private contractor was $89,000. Instead of awarding the contract, the Board supervised the job by sub-contracting the work. By doing this, the cost of the new offices

LAKE OVERFLOWS - - Gary Penhale of Helena unclogs debris from the top of an overflow drain in Helena's Tucker Park Lake. Last w eek's heavy rains filled the new lake before it was ready. When the overflow pipes stopped up, the flood waters flowed over the two spillways at the top of the dam creating the lake. Mayor Charles Penhale explained that the lake bed is still under construction. The water must be drained out so that workmen may complete the construction. The park is scheduled to open next spring.

Herold dies in Louisiana

Herman Herold of Calera, administrator of Shelby Memorial Hospital from 1959 to 1967, died on December 29. He was 60 years old.

His death was attributed to complications from a broken hip and a severe diabetic condition.

Mr. Herold had been a patient at Brookwood Hospital in Birmingham. He was flown to Shrevesport, La. last Friday, where his brother is a physician specializing in diabetes.

Graveside services were held at Greenwood Cemetery in Shrevesport Sunday morning.

Mr. Herold is survived by his wife, Opal Herold; brothers, Dr. Arthur Herold, Jr. and Simon Herold both of Shrevesport; and a sister, Mrs. Myron Lasher of Little Rock.

MOVE TO NEW QUARTERS - - Members of the Alabaster Water and Gas Board are all smiles this week as they move into their new offices. Although the new building lacks a few finishing touches, it is now open to serve the residents of Alabaster. More good than bad in welfare career

By Marcia M. Sears

"I want to see you walk one more time, instead of run," is what Mrs. Melville Harlin's husband told her when she was considering retiring from her twenty year career with the Department of Pensions and Securities.

And Mrs. Harlin, who has been running all those years seeing after the welfare of children throughout Shelby County, decided to make her retirement official last Friday.

During her career as a child welfare worker, she has supervised the placing of more than 120 children for adoption. " 'I've never had one that didn't work out well", she told the Reporter, "The adoptive parents love the children so much."

She has placed hundreds of children in foster home care when circumstances prevented their natural parents from providing homes for them.

When she began traveling the back roads and highways of the county, very few of them were paved. "The roads were low and would get under water. If you were one foot off the main road, you were stuck. Now I rarely get off a paved road. I don't believe any other county in the state has so many paved roads.

She recalls going to Sterrett on the Dunnavant Road in the early 1950's. "The road was so narrow, if you met another car, you couldn't pass."

"There were no telephones there, either", she recalls in listing some of the difficulties of trying to help families and children in trouble, who lived in isolated places. "There was one telephone in Chelsea and only two in Vincent."

On the subject of changing family attitudes, Mrs. Harlin says, "One thing I never understood was the terrible battles fathers got into with their sons over the subject of long hair."

In looking back over her career in the turbulent field of family problems, Mrs. Harlin insists, "I have seen more good than bad." She notes the kindness and warmth of foster home parents, civic clubs, churches and individuals who have extended generous help whenever called upon to help local youngsters in trouble.

Mrs. Harlin was honored at a tea last Thursday that was attended by co-workers, friends and many adults whom she had placed in foster and adoptive homes when they were children.

Next week: Mrs. Harlin gives her views on drugs, child abuse, adoptions, foster homes, and the most pressing needs of Shelby County today in the field of child welfare.

Rains, winds lash county

The last day of 1973 finished up a year of extreme weather for Shelby County as tornadoes, electrical storms, and flash floods hit on December 31. The various municipalities of the county reported flooded streets, overflowing streams, and assorted wind and water damage.

A tornado hit the Sterrett and Dunnavant areas early Monday morning, overturning trailers and damaging several structures. Isbell's barn in the Bear Creek area of Sterrett was hit by the tornado. The twister touched down in several places in the area, passing close to the Mountain View Lunber Company.

Flood waters were a problem in several towns, with reports of high waters in Wilsonville, Calera, and Columbiana. Several inches of rain fell in a few hours around the county, rising into houses and businesses in several places.

Flood waters soon abated, leaving streets open but with damage to the interior of homes and stores.

Saturday, December 29 had also been a stormy day, with rain and stormy weather. There are several unconfirmed reports of a tornado passing over the Columbiana area. Some damage occurred then, as the carport of Bolton- Brown Funeral Home was demolished by fierce winds. No tornadoes were spotted on radar on Saturday according to weather reports, but a home on the Chelsea road was ruined bythe storm.

Columbiana P. D. faces shake-up

All but two members of the Columbiana police department resigned Friday night after a new work schedule was posted.

According to police commissioner Frank Owen, three regular policemen and two auxiliary officers turned in their resignations rather than follow the new schedule.

Police officer Howell Horn and officer John Gaydon stayed at their posts, Owen said.

Although the work schedule was given as the immediate reason for the resignations, there had apparently been dissatisfaction within the department for some time.

Owen said that temporary arrangements were made to provide police protection in Columbiana until the city council can make new permanent arrangements.

Million dollar tax paid

Southern Electric Generating Company paid Shelby County tax collector Fay Quick the sum of $755,088.70 as its share of real and personal property taxes for the year 1973.

Alabama Power Company wrote a check for $408,420.40 to the county tax collector for its share of the ad valorem taxes for 1973.

Property valuations at SEGCO have been slowly dropping, while valuations of the APC have been steadily increasing in recent years.

Last year, for example, SEGCO paid $30,000 more in taxes than it paid this year. But the Power Company's tax bill jumped by $218,850 this year, more than doubling the tax it paid in 1972.

The two firms have long been the number one and two taxpayers in Shelby County. SEGCO's tremendous installation at Wilsonville at one time was worth more than the total valuation of all the rest of Shelby County. However, depreciation is beginning to reduce their tax load.

The Power Company expansion throughout the county is responsible for the increased taxes it now pays.

Bringing the checks to Mrs. Quick on December 31 were N. L. Hardin, district manager of the Alabama Power Company and W. L. Sanders, Jr., treasurer of Southern Electric Generating Company.

The two checks totaled $1,163,509.

Alabaster hears 19 new cases

Sixty-two cases were brought before the Alabaster municipal court during its last court session on Tuesday, December 18. Broken down, this figure represented 19 new cases, 14 continued cases, and 29 alias cases.

Of these, two were paid, three were noll prossed, 21 were continued, and 7 new alias warrants were issued.

tell her to be quiet, but I knew she couldn't hear me over the noise. That's about all I remember -- I blacked out after that."

The Joneses now have a new house under construction on their lot next to the HUD trailer. The story of the Jones girls is one of many that show how well people have coped with adversity.

The Shelby County Reporter will search out other stories to present in forthcoming issues.

1973 news highlights in Shelby County

Compiled from the pages of the Shelby County Reporter - 1973

Another news-filled year has just passed in Shelby County, with action on all fronts. Continuing growth of population, housing, business, and industry was the spur that kept news breaking fast in 1973.

The political battle waged by Sheriff C. P. "Red" Walker for control of Shelby County was clearly the most important news story of 1973.

But Probate Judge Conrad Fowler not only survived attacks for the first six months of the year, but emerged as the clear victor, firmly in command of the county commission.

The people rallied to his side, sending 2,000 signatures to Senator Obie Littleton to kill a bill which would have removed the probate judge from the commission.

Representative Tom Stubbs started action on May 24 to remove Fowler from the commission and to name W. E. Morris to replace him. The proposed legislation would not have allowed the people to vote on the change in government structure, and this point caused considerable outrage, even among supporters of Stubbs and Walker. After Senator Littleton announced that he would not go along with it, the attacks against Fowler diminished, and the county commission finished out the year with peaceful meetings.

EDUCATION

Education received several boosts this year. A school bond issue provided nearly $4 million to county schools. The county school board hired 36 additional teachers and raised the wages across the board for other teachers. In January it was announced that a high school would be built in the Pelham- Helena area, and 40 acres were bought for the school site on Bearden's Road. Construction of the new school is going well, with the building expected to be finished in time for the '74-'75 school year.

Both Vincent Elementary School and Montevallo Elementary School received accreditation this year by meeting standards of the State Department of Education and the Southern Association.

At the University of Montevallo, the renovation of King House and Calkins Administration Building was completed, and work was begun on refurbishing Reynolds Hall. The university started on an advance semester system which enabled students to end first semester work this December.

BUSINESS

Business was big in 1973, with continuing growth around the county. Many businesses changed owners and several corporations opened branches in the county.

A number of businesses and industries changed ownership this year. Montevallo's Strand Theatre was sold to Bowie Theatres and renamed the Falcon. Reeves Brothers' Siluria mill was bought by Canton Mills of Georgia and named Siluria Textiles. Buck Creek Industries including Columbiana's Valley Mills, was absorbed by S & H of Green Stamps fame. Saginaw's Longview Lime became a part of Southern Industries.

The Ben Franklin Store in Montevallo was sold to Charles and Danny Monk by Mr. and Mrs. Denson Elliott.

Many industries already located in the county announced expansion plans during the year. The Alabama Power Company completed a new warehouse in Montevallo. Martin Marietta Cement boosted their output, and installed pollution control devices. The First National Bank of Columbiana opened a new branch in Cahaba Valley. Electrical Specialties Products of Pelham announced plans to build a new plant in Montevallo. Century Services opened a new real estate office in Pelham. The last week in the year, Olympic Mills opened a store in Alabaster.

The county also saw many new industries bloom during 1973. JET Industries of Calera opened this fall for the monument-making business. Fletcher Properties continued working on its new residential area in north Shelby County, with apartments, condiminiums, and single homes. Helena gained a new industrial park this summer. Housing Components opened a plant at Elliottsville for building supports for houses.

The public services were increased in the county. Southern Bell opened a new business office in Alabaster to handle local telephone calls. In April, Bell announced it would build a new plant work center in Alabaster and Western Electric announced plans to build a distribution center on Valleydale Road.

Both Liberty National Insurance and Alabama Power have dedicated new offices in the area.

As 1973 closed, a number of businesses were moving in, with work underway in various stages of completion. The new Pelham Plaza was almost complete. Chain stores in the grocery and drug store field, plus other retail outlets were planning to occupy the buildings.

Vanity Fair Industries conducted a labor survey and studied locations for a new textile plant for the area. Templin's IGA Discount foods supermarket is opening in Columbiana.

Alabama Power Company announced a $14 million complex and started construction on a 318 acre site east of the county airport.

Owners of 35 businesses that were open on Sundays were arrested on Blue Law violations on January 28. However, action on the cases was postponed for the legislature to re-consider the entire Blue Law structure in the state.

HIGHWAYS

New highway construction brought cheers as well as groans this year. Highway 119 in front of Thompson High School was widened and repaved. Several county roads are in the works around about, with interstate highways under construction. Interstate 65 near Alabaster is being extended three miles, requiring a detour around its junction with Highway 31.

A new county highway between Helena and Alabaster is now open at Ninth Avenue in Alabaster.

Work finally began December 10 on four laning a section of state highway 280 between Chelsea and Harpersville, a year and two months after it was originally scheduled.

ACCIDENTS, FATALITIES, DISASTERS

Shelby County had more than its share of accidents and near-tragedy this year with tornadoes, house fires, car wrecks, and various dire events.

In January a train derailed near Brantleyville, with no injuries. Another train derailed near Calera in April when it tried to avoid hitting a drunk on the railroad tracks. When it braked the train jack-knifed and left the tracks. There were no injuries. In Pelham, two people were killed and one injured in a car-train collision. A car-carrier vehicle was demolished by a train at a crossing in Alabaster when the long carrier lodged itself on the steep crossing. There were no injuries.

Tornadoes were bad enough even before the May 27 twister catastrophe. On March 16, a tornado skipped through Fungo Hollow and the Oak Mountain area to hit the Pelham Mall Shopping Center. Over $150,000 damage resulted from the storm. The next month the story was much the same as a tornado struck the Kingdom Community near Wilsonville. Two trailers were overturned, a barn was destroyed, and electric power was off for a time. The same storm uprooted trees at Smith's Camp on the Coosa River.

The two earlier tornadoes were mild compared to The Big One -- May 27, 1973, Black Sunday. On that fearful night the killer storm ripped through the county leaving a path of horror and destruction. Wilton . . . Calera . . . Columbiana . . . Wilsonville . . . the storm plowed through them, leaving one dead, and an unknown number injured. Later estimates counted at least 281 homes damaged by the twister in its mad dash up Highway 25. Shelby County will bear scars from this storm for years to come.

Following the May tornado federal help was sent to the county by way of the Office of Emergency Preparedness, the Small Business Administration, and the office of Housing and Urban Development. Later in the year funds were set aside for three county landowners to clear timber from forest land destroyed by the tornado.

Death and disaster continued, but nothing on the scale of the tornado. Automobile accidents accounted for great numbers of injuries and several fatalities. Fires destroyed several mobile homes and other homes. A fire hit Montevallo Clay Refractory Co., with two butane tanks exploding before the blaze was under control. There were no injuries.

The various rescue units were kept busy in the county this year, as some searches turned out happily and as others ended indeath. In May a five-day search for 84-year -old Carl Haigler of Coalmont ended when his body was found by searchers. Police, National Guard, friends, and rescue squads joined forces in the manhunt. During the same month rescuers found two children, Richard and Tricia Rice, who had wandered away from their grandparents' home. A July search for Shelby resident John Skinner ended after an extensive manhunt. His body was found where he had drowned in Lay Lake. The rescue of Bozeman Daniels, 82, ended successfully when the man was found in good health on Double Oak Mountain. Two Dunnavant youths, Larry Skelton and Willie Rae Wright, were found by rescue units in the Sterrett - Dunnavant area where the two teenagers had gone hunting.

HEALTH

In 1973 health facilities experienced a great deal of growth. Shelby Memorial Hospital and Briarcliff Nursing Home both started expanding with new additions to the buildings. Shelby Memorial added a department of nuclear medicine in February to aid in diagnostic work. The hospital also graduated a number of people in its emergency medical technician training program.

Sewer systems were a matter of considerable planning in the county. Alabaster received a large sum from the Environmental Protection Agency for its sewerage plan. Helena is moving ahead with its sewer works, with construction to begin soon. A sewage disposal system for the north Shelby County area continues to be under discussion, with plans to cooperate with Jefferson County sewer authorities.

A number of other improvements and modernizations took place in the county this year. Improved water service was one such area, as Calera extended city water to the outlying communities of Dargin and Pineville. Bethel and the Sterrett-Vandiver areas also received improved water service. In November state and national ambulance laws made mandatory changes in vehicles and service in order to better serve the public.

Several groups took an interest in the health of county residents. The Heart Fund suprassed its $6,000 goal by $700. A Mental Health Board was organized in the county by a group of doctors, technicians, and other interested parties.

GOVERNMENT

The county adopted a $3.5 million budget for the fiscal year beginning October 1. Plans were announced that a new county jail will be built in the near future. The county bought a new bookmobile and retired the old vehicle.

The various municipalities made news this year with a number of varied projects. Pelham became the third largest city in the county following a special census. Following annexation and population growth, the city's census had tripled since the 1970 population figures were taken. Pelham also began a new municipal building on the site of the old Pelham Grammar School.

Montevallo was in the news with a number of projects, especially the dedication of a new municipal park, and the relocation of the old Southern Railway depot to the park. Expansion of the city fire department was also prominent in Montevallo council business.

Columbiana announced plans to build a new city hall across from the post office.

Vincent and Harpersville received a $376,000 grant from HUD for housing.

Helena made progress on its municipal sewerage plan, and work progressed on the town's Joe Tucker Park. Helena and Pelham both passed city zoning measures.

Alabaster began work on a new building for its water and gas board. The council met delay after delay on its municipal sewerage plan.

Pea Ridge began organization of a fire department for that community.

Calera, Alabaster, and Pelham met failure in elections concerning annexation of adjacent areas. Smith's Camp voted for annexation to Wilsonville.

ECOLOGY

The year 1973 saw several developments in the field of ecology, both positive and negative. The county was beset by animal pests, Coosa River oil spills, an air pollution alert, as well as the energy crisis.

County agencies declared war on beavers this year. Thirty people attended a meeting planned to clear up area farmers' beaver problem. A beaver bounty hunter from Michigan was hired to track down the animals.

Aerial warfare was waged against fire ants. Using kite-like devices, exterminators dropped mirex poison to kill the dangerous insects.

Dam-building on the Cahaba River was a source of conflict: developers tried to build dams to raise property values while environmentalists said this would kill the fish further down the river. Judge James Sharbutt gave the go-ahead for dam-building on the river in a February court decision. Later in the year hearings were held to change the Cahaba's classification from "fish and wildlife" to "swimming and water sports."

A massive county clean-up drive won the county an award from the National Association of Counties.

Public and private high schools closed for one day to allow students to walk the highways, picking up trash. School buses were used, and the county and state highway departments provided trucks and personnel. George Starcher created "Kitti-Klean" as a symbol of the drive. Bumper stickers and cartoons featuring Kitti-Klean appeared throughout the county to encourage the continuing effort to keep Shelby County clean.

University of Montevallo groups organized clean up drives on highways and at Falling Rock.

Industry showed a new concern for the environment by installing anti-pollution devices. Plantation Pipeline in Helena installed pollution safeguards and safety measures.

Southern Electric Generating Company added new pollution filters on the smokestacks of its Wilsonville plant; the new smoke-collectors are part of a $15 million anit-pollution project at SEGCO.

Filtering equipment at a Montevallo lime plant made Shoal Creek run clear for the first time in years. Alabama Power Company announced that it is joining other companies in financing research to produce a "clean coal" which hopefully will reduce pollution from smoke. Construction of a plant for this research proceeded rapidly at Wilsonville, with the company name, Catalytic, Inc.

The gasoline crisis which developed late in the year began to affect commuters as well as county school buses.

SPORTS

Athletic teams with home bases in Shelby County brought recognition to local sports fans during 1973.

On the college level, the University of Montevallo Falcons advanced to the semi-finals in the Southern States Conference basketball playoffs.

In high school basketball, Montevallo's Bulldogs, playing in the One A category, took Area Six and Region Three honors and finished third in the state.

In football, four teams from Shelby County were involved in post season contests. Chelsea, a One A team; Thompson a Three A team; and Shelby Academy and Coosa Valley Academy were invited to participate in after-season games.

Chelsea finished the season with a perfect record but was eliminated in the state playoffs by Houston Academy.

Thompson posted a nine win, one loss regular season record, and went to the state playoffs.

Shelby Academy enjoyed a top ten ranking throughout the season and advanced to the semi finals of the state playoffs for private academies.

Boating, fishing and hunting continued to be popular with Shelby County residents.

CRIME

Crime was in the news this year, with charges ranging from murder, to robbery, arson, burglary, and vandalism.

Montevallo High School's science lab was the target of arsonists in mid-January. Between $12,000 and $15,000 damage resulted from the fire started by molotov cocktails. Two non-students, Sammy Ray Burnett and Tommy Calhoun of Montevallo, were convicted and received six and seven year sentences for the crime.

Two Alabaster men were arrested for the murder of Saginaw resident Mike Haynes, age 27.

In November, University of Montevallo coed Karen Ann Jones was found dead in an abandoned house near the campus. Richard Bradley was arrested in the case.

Two men were accidentally electrocuted in Calera where they were apparently stealing the copper wire used in electric power lines.

Burglaries plagued a number of communities in the county, including Calera, Montevallo, and Indian Springs. The Indian Springs burglary ring was broken by tracing down a set of stolen football tickets.

The crime scene ran the gamut from armed robbery of a store in Harpersville, to vandalism at the county airport, to cattle rustling around the farms of Shelby County.

Perhaps the most widespread offense was the deliberate arson of forest lands. During the year, well over 100 woods fires were reported around the county, destroying trees and wildlife. During almost every month the county had spurts of blazes well above the number expected for accidental fires.

OTHER

The overburdened Helena Rt. 1 postal route was partly taken over as Route 13, Birmingham. The new change of address affected families in Beat 12 as far south as Valleydale Road.

Columbiana POW Lt. Rick McDow returned home in April, from a Viet Cong prison camp. He was captured on June 27, 1972 when his Air Force F-4 fighter-bomber was shot down 70 miles southwest of Hanoi. He was flown in to Maxwell Air Force Base in Montgomery where his wife, parents and hundreds of friends greeted him. On his return to Columbiana, he was given the key to the city in a spcial ceremony honoring him, where hundreds again turned out.

Case involving special interests could spur legislative reform

By Don Wasson

The conviction of six Alabama trade and business associations for violation of the state's Corrupt Practices Act, if upheld on appeal, could mean a new day in the transaction of business in the state, particularly in regard to legislative action.

The convictions came on charges that these associations had formed a committee to "front" for their collective activities against passage of the Constitution Amendment in 1972 which would have established annual session of the legislature.

There was no doubt at all that these organizations contributed to the defeat of the amendment. They felt they should not be held guilty of doing what many, many other organizations and groups have done for years, ever since the Corrupt Practices Act went into effect.

Those who hope to bring about legislative reform are hoping, however, that the case will have the effect of alarming the public and causing some concern over the question of how much control special interest groups such as the six organizations in this case exercise over state government and the legislative process.

It was pointed out here during the campaign to adopt the amendment that opposition was coming from a "blind" committee and that the committee was being financed by some of the largest lobbying organizations.

It was also pointed out that their opposition stems from the simple fact that they feel they have more control over what happens in biennial sessions of the legislature than they would have in annual sessions.

This is true because biennial sessions usually produce such a glut of legislation that members of the two houses cannot keep up with each bill, nor to know the real intent of a lot of legislation.

Much of this legislation is inspired by the special interests and by exerting pressure in a few places, they can manage to pass laws helpful to their interests without too much trouble. If the lawmakers had time to examine these bills carefully, some of them would certainly not pass.

Conversely, when there is a bill or two that one of the special interests doesn't want passed, it is easier to kill such legislation in a legislative session that is trying to cope with thousands of bills.

Every administration has the problem of trying to get remedial legislation passes which would require the special interests of the state to pay a fair and equitable share of the cost of government, which would properly control their production or manufacture for the better interests of the consuming public, and so on.

Small wonder, then, that the special interests fought the annual sessions bill in the 1972 session of the legislature and then fought the passage of the amendment once it was on the ballot.

Now that the suit, brought by Atty. Gen. Bill Baxley, has been aired in court, perhaps the public will be more aware of the behind -the- scenes maneuvering these special interests will participate in for their own welfare.

And perhaps if another annual sessions bill gets through the next legislature, the public will be more inclined to approve the constitutional amendment making annual sessions possible.

MRS. MILLICENT WILLIAMS

Former county resident wants more obituaries

Letter to Editor:

We think you have the most improved weekly of the several Alabama papers that we receive.

As a former resident of Shelby County, we urge that you add an "Obituary Column" to your paper.

All out of town subscribers are more interested in the deaths of people we knew than any other news.

Thank you,
T. A. Mims
P.O. Box 9374
Tulsa, Oklahoma.

Dear Mr. Mims:

Thank you for your kind letter, your renewal check and your suggestion. This gives us the opportunity to describe the difficulties we often have in obtaining obituary notices of Shelby County residents.

In most cases, we depend upon the families of the deceased to notify us and to provide the information they want included in the obituary. Yet very often, the families assume that funeral homes or friends have notified us when actually, neither has done so.

On other occasions, families do not want mention made of the death and for that reason, we do not normally call the funeral homes for a list of deaths. (The funeral homes are always helpful, but often the families do not provide the funeral homes with much information, either.)

Then too, the county is so big, and the towns so scattered, that families often use funeral homes in adjoining counties, particularly if they have family ties there.

We are always striving to improve our newspaper with news of interest to everyone, and we will make a renewed effort to increase our obituary notices.

Youth Aid Bureau adds new counselor

Millicent Williams has been hired as a new counselor for the Shelby County Youth Aid Bureau in Alabaster. She will fill a position created by the death of Clarence Cook.

Mrs. Williams holds a bachelor of science degree in social science from Birmingham- Southern College. She has also had experience as a social worker at University Hospital in Birmingham and with the Jefferson County Community Service Council. She was youth coordinator at the McCoy Methodist Church in Birmingham, and has done volunteer work with the Birmingham Family Court, the Red Cross, and the Florence Park and Recreation Board.

Mrs. Williams will do both field and office counseling at the Youth Aid Bureau.

Wayne Smith, executive director of the bureau, explained that the bureau works on referrals from schools, police, families, neighbors etc. The bureau has 21 stated goals Williams explained. It gives counseling to young people about the many problems that they may have and tries to prevent those problems -- drugs and juvenile delinquency for example -- before they reach a point where a young person finds himself in court.

Smith reports that in its first six months of operation, the bureau has received 148 referrals and opened 131 social work cases at an average of one every two days. At present 74 still remain active.

The bureau works with the whole family and not just with an individual young man or woman, Smith said. So far, the Youth Aid Bureau has counseled over 500 family members.

Eighty percent of all the bureau's cases are handled in its offices, Smith continued. The other 20 percent are referred to more specialized agencies.

In addition to the youth counseling Smith told the Reporter that the Shelby County Youth Aid Bureau is compiling a catalog of social service agencies and charities that residents of Shelby County may use. These include service and youth organizations. Smith requested that any such organization that has not been contacted by the bureau and wants to be included in the catalog should contact him.

Smith also said that the Youth Aid Bureau is trying to recruit adult volunteers who would like to work with Shelby County young people.

County votes to buy land

The county governing body has voted to purchase property behind the county library for potential expansion.

The property belonged to Mrs. Bertha Motes. The county agreed to pay $4,000 plus attorney and title fees for the purchase.

Newspapers used as texts in Illinois elementary school

We see by the papers that a little Illinois elementary school has become part of a first-of-its-kind educational experiment in which the world itself is their textbook and the youngsters love it.

In this new program, we read about, only 15 percent of total classroom instruction is based on standardized textbooks. The remainder comes from newspapers and that goes for special education classes also.

For instance, arithmetic lessons come in news articles about such things as labor contracts; science is studied through the reports on space exploration, discoveries and natural disasters; and the newspaper's editorial page provides information on which to base essays. The principal of the school says: "we are blowing a lot of educational theory to bits -- but the kids are already doing better than before on standardized tests in the school districts".

This desire to explore the unknown in search of progress and by devious ways and means is typical of the spirit of young America. This spirit made us a world leader and it will keep us one as long as we can keep this spirit burning in our hearts. Americans fear not the unknown!

Beauty tips for you from Carlene Barefoot

A good habit to acquire after washing your hands, is to push the nail cuticles back with your towel every time. At leisure times, or while telephoning, applying cuticle oils, and using an orange stick to remove excess and loose cuticle help keep your hands looking appealing between visits to your manicurist. As for filing in between your visits, you should keep on hand a good flexible "diamond cut" file. Even those with the most sensitive nails will find this type of file good for them.

Radiate the good life

By Mildred White Wallace

Were we asked to offer a plea which - if we daily practiced, would bring that ever elusive inner joy and happiness to the human heart we would probably choose the prayer of Elbert Hubbard as a worthy creed to follow and an example assuring a satisfactory day by day life to live, and a more joyous existence to the individual who followed and would, at the same time, make the world a far happier place in which to live. So, we reprint it for your scrapbooks for 1974. Mr. Hubbard says:

"The supreme prayer of my heart, is not to be learned, rich, famous, powerful or even good, but simply to be radiant. I desire to radiate health, cheerfulness, calm, courage and goodwill.

"I wish to live without hate, whim, jealousy, envy, fear, I wish to be simple, honest, frank, natural, clean in mind and body, unaffected to say 'I don't know' - if it be so, and to meet all men on an absolute equality, to face any obstacles and meet every difficulty unabashed and unafraid.

"I wish others to live their lives, too, up to their highest, fullest and best. To that end I pray that I never meddle, interfere, dictate, give advice that is not wanted, or assist when my services are not needed. If I can help people I will do it by giving them a chance to help themselves; and if I can uplift or inspire, let it by by example, inference and suggestions -- rather than by injunction and dictation. That is to say, I desire to be radiant - to Radiate Life!"

Westover news

By Elsie Jones

The old year, 1973, has finally blown itself out leaving its path of death and destruction on the landmarks of our county and state. Thanks to God our Westover was not included in the tornadoes on December 31 as was continuously reported by the different news media all day long. We extend our sympathy to those persons who were affected by the storms. We did get our share of winds, rain, and hail.

The holidays brought many visitors to our homes. I believe the Rev. A.C. Acton family drew the largest number of relatives and friends. I asked Beth how they accommodated so many guests and she said they still knew how to put the pallets over the floors. Only one member of this large family was unable to be with them, and that was Larry and his wife and three children w ho are missionaries in Columbia, South America.

Present for this family gathering were: Mr. and Mrs. Jean Acton, with 4 children, from Dadeville; Mr. and Mrs. Ty Acton, with 4 children; Mr. and Mrs. Wade Acton, with 2 children; Mr. and Mrs. Don Acton, with 4 children; Mr. and Mrs. Roddy Cahoon, with 2 children and John Wayne Raley; Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth Acton, of Jackson, Miss.; Miss Beth Acton, and two great-grandchildren -- Allen Rich and Tracy Acton.

The spacious home of the Byron Boggans was also filled with holiday guests. They were: Mr. and Mrs. S.D. Newby, of Shawmut, Mr. Ned Newby and Mr. and Mrs. Roy Newby, and 2 children, of Jackson, Miss. Mrs. Alice Bonecutter, and Mrs. Mary Ellen McPherson, with 3 children, of Portage, Ind.; Mr. and Mrs. Byron Boggan, Jr., with 2 children; Mr. and Mrs. Sam Boggan, with 1 child; Mr. and Mrs. David Boggan, with 2 children; Mr. and Mrs. Ned Boggan, with 1 child; all of Birmingham; and Mr. Austin Boggan, of Gardendale.

Austin Boggan is a former missionary to Brazil. He is now on leave and is conducting a bus- ministry out of Cullman.

A happy young lady of Westover is Miss Carla Meads who was the recipient of a lovely diamond for Christmas. She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Carl Meads. The young "Santa" is James Bonds, the son of Mrs. Mary Lou Bonds and the late Fred Bonds, of Birmingham. The wedding plans are not com pleted at this time.

The writer erred in reporting the gift of a piano to the Union United Methodist Church by Mrs. Louise Maske. The piano was really given by a number of friends and relatives who contributed to a Memorial Fund for the late Mr. Wade Maske, and which was dedicated as reported.

Friends of Rev. Claud M. Taylor, of Wilsonville United Methodist Church, will be interested to hear that he has successfully come through the first stage of heart surgery at University Hospital.

The Wayne Archer family have moved into their lovely new home on the Westover Road.

* * * *

Mrs. Sherry Mavis Glass age 23, died at University Hospital on Saturday morning, Dec. 29, after a long illness. She is survived by her husband, Carl Glass; two children -- Michael Carl, age 2½ years and Kristy Lee, age one year; parents, Mr. and Mrs. P.M. Tennyson; two sisters -- Mrs. Sandra Champion and Miss Lou Ann Tennyson, and one brother, Pete Tennyson. Her maternal grandparents were the late Mr. and Mrs. Ben Green, all natives of Westover.

Mrs. Glass was a member of Mt. Zion Baptist Church. She was employed by the Western Supermarket in Alabaster, where she resided before her death. Funeral services were conducted by Rev. Frank Standifer and Rev. Jack Douglas at First Assembly Church in Alabaster, at 2 p.m., Monday, December 31, with burial in the Still Cemetery adjoining the Elliottsville Presbyterian Chruch near Alabaster.

the Southern's track.

Myers, whose home is Selma, talked to the Reporter on his last day of work in Alabama. He is being transferred to Raleigh, North Carolina where he will serve as engineer for the Norfolk and Southern Rail Road, a firm that was recently purchased by the Southern Railway System.

The 44 man work crew lives in railway-owned mobile homes that are moved every few days in an effort to keep traveling to and from work at a minimum.

The crew is currently based in Montevallo and will soon move to Calera as the project moves across Shelby County toward Childersburg and Talladega.

Draft board moves to Birmingham

Felix R. Petrey, director of selective service for Alabama, announces that the draft boards for Jefferson and Shelby Counties have been moved to room 9, Federal Building - Courthouse, 1800 - Fifth Ave. North in Birmingham. This includes boards which were previously located in Bessemer, Fairfield, Ensley, Five Points West, 901 South 20th Street, East Lake and Columbiana.

Mr. Petrey stated that several volunteer registrars had been appointed in the area for the convenience of young men required to register at age 18. He further stated that "apparently many young men mistakenly think the draft has ended as many are late in registering." He reminded young men that the selective service law is still on the books and that they have a 60-day period in which to fulfill the requirements of the law. The 60-day period begins 30 days before the 18th birthday, and ends 30 days following the 18th birthday.

In Shelby County registrars are located at the National Guard Armory in Calera and Vincent. Mr. Willis E. Jones, assistant principal of Shelby County High School at Columbiana is also serving as a registrar. Young man may register at the above locations or at the new Birmingham location 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. Monday through Friday.

A.D. Pharmacies support United Cerebral Palsy

In days gone by, neighbors pooled their resources to help a troubled friend get back on his feet. A.D. Pharmacists are proudly carrying on this great tradition. Every month we will support one of the nationally recognized non-profit health related organizations. By the end of this year we will have invested thousands of dollars to these causes.

This month we have chosen the United Cerebral Palsy whose program to eliminate brain damage birth defects has made a significant contribution to the welfare of mankind. It takes money for this research.

So, our check will go to The United Cerebral Palsy Associations, Inc., 66 East 34th St., New York, New York 10016.

You can find out more about United Cerebral Palsy at your A.D. Pharmacy!

Youth bags deer on squirrel hunt

John Phillip Pierson, age 12, of Siluria, went squirrel hunting on December 24 and came home with an eight point deer.

He and his stepfather, Carl D. Blevins, were hunting on Woodward land in Alabaster behind the lime plant, when John spotted the deer and killed it with a .22 rifle.

John's birthday falls on Christmas day, and he said this is the best birthday present he has ever had.

NEW PELHAM CITY HALL - - An artist's drawing shows how the new Pelham City Hall will look to passing motorists along Highway 31 when the building is completed. The Williamsburg-type architecture will provide a blending of 18th century style and the modern efficiency of its offices.

WINS RECOGNITION - - Mrs. Dana H. Moore of Chelsea received the government's Defense Supply Agency Meritorious Service Award for exceptional service in 1973. Mrs. Moore is a contract specialist for the Defense Contract Administration Services in Birmingham. Presentation of the award was made at ceremonies in Atlanta by Major General Robert F. Trimble, US Air Force (left) and J. W. Lipscomb, Jr., Captain, SC. USN, (right). In the Awards Day program, Mrs. Moore was credited with working "untiringly" and "responding cheerfully to numerous work deadlines, regulation changes and branch training requirements." She "worked enthusiastically...and motivates others to exert their best effort."

Alabaster W-G Board will run about $75,000, Davenport said.

The mayor went on to say that prior to the occupation of its new quarters, the Alabaster Gas and Water Board stored its equipment in the basement of the city hall. This vacated space will be used to enlarge the police and fire stations.

Davenport also said that the City of Alabaster has recently constructed a new $17,000 prefabricated building located behind the Triple -J restaurant. This facility is being utilized as a storehouse for city equipment. Before this, Davenport explained, heavy machinery owned by the City of Alabaster had to be left outdoors because of lack of storage space.

from their office, plus within the city limits of municipalities where the company has a privilege license. In areas outside the radius or city limits, the taxi cab company can operate only with a state license.

Thus, anyone who switches from private car to taxi cab should be aware of the cab's legal operating rate, and when it takes effect. It could be helpful to know ahead of time just how far the taxi cab can legally travel.

Car pools may solve gas shortages for many commuters who work in Birmingham. Probably the best bets for county residents would be car pools for people who work together or live in the same area. Several of the larger corporations in Birmingham are planning car pool exchanges for their employees. Many commuters might find it worthwhile to work out plans for riding with others on a rotating basis.

Those who plan to buy bicycles and motorcycles had better buy them while they are still in stock. Many prospective buyers have noted that the prices of two- and three-wheeled vehicles have skyrocketed in recent months. The increased demand as well as the price of steel has jacked up the price on these vehicles. More and more people are seeing bikes as a means of transportation rather just a fun vehicle.

Game officers warn of deer extinction

By Rick Moore

Many people around Shelby County have been asking the question, What's happening to our deer population? Hunters don't jump as many deer as they did a few years ago; motorists don't see as many of them crossing the road; there are fewer deer signs in county forests.

Conservation Officers Doyle Wood and Donald Tuberville are also concerned with this problem and they brought a picture along to the Reporter with them that graphically shows the cause of this county's "Deer genocide," the killing of does and fawns.

The particular incident depicted in the photograph took place on January 1. Conservation officers arrested three county residents hunting in the Saginaw area. The men had killed a doe and a fawn, but were charged with 14 different violations ranging from hunting without a license to shooting the illegal deer.

Woods explained that the deer population is decreasing across Alabama chiefly because of killing does and night hunting. He went on to say that the hunters who care about conserving our wildlife are the ones who can put a stop to these violations and save their sport.

Woods emphasized that there is no way that a few conservation officers can patrol the whole county. It is up to area hunters to help the officers enforce the game laws.

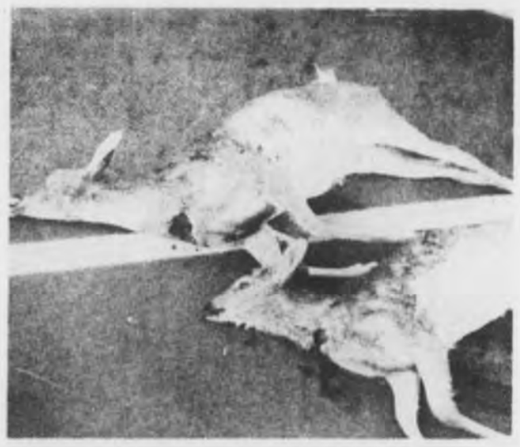
"Many people see hunters loading does onto a truck, but will not turn them in because they don't want to get involved," Woods said.

If individuals would have these lawbreakers arrested and then appear against them in court, these violations would die down, Woods continued.

The conservation officers also urge those genuinely concerned with a "get tough" program against game law violators to talk to the district attorney and the county court judge.

Since October 1, conservation officers have made 113 arrests in Shelby County for violating game laws. The most common of these are hunting without a license, hunting without a permit, hunting within 100 yards of a public road, hunting within 100 yards of a railroad, night hunting, and hunting in a closed season.

The conservation officers said that in some cases people who do not know anything about hunting go into the woods with a gun. They take out their frustrations by shooting trees or anything that runs in front of them, including does and young deer.



Officer Tuberville estimates that the present rate of killing does, the Shelby County deer herd will be gone in two years.

This writer observed the problem while interviewing a tornado victim near Wilsonville last Wednesday.

The family dog came running into the yard bearing the head of a doe.

Apparently hunters had killed the doe and immediately cut off the head so that identification would be more difficult.

Any Shelby County resident knowing anything about illegal hunting activities in this area may call these local conservation officers at the following numbers: Captain Ed Lightsey, 669-7687; Doyle Wood, 669-6943; and Donald Tuberville, 663-6822.

RUINING THE DEER POPULATION - - This doe and fawn were killed by three Shelby County hunters arrested by conservation officers January 1. Conservation officer Donald Tuberville estimates that if hunters continue killing does at the present rate, the Shelby County deer herd will be gone within two years.

READY FOR MARCH OF DIMES - - Helping to kick off the annual Shelby County March of Dimes campaign are Pat Nesmith, Pelham; county poster child Robin Doss, Montevallo; and Jane Ann Swearingen, Alabaster, county chairman. Volunteer campaigners gathered in Alabaster last Friday for a kickoff dinner. The Mother's March will be held January 19 and 20. (Reporter photo by Sally Sears)

Campaign organized for March of Dimes

Shelby County's March of Dimes campaign is underway.

Representatives who will join in leading the campaign gathered in Alabaster Friday night for the annual kickoff dinner.

Presiding at the meeting was Mrs. G.R. Swearingen of Alabaster, county director. Emphasis of the March of Dimes now focuses on the prevention of birth defects.

For the first time in history, Shelby County has its own March of Dimes Poster Child, Miss Robin Doss of Montevallo. The daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Bill Doss, Robin is four years old, and herself the victim of a birth defect.

It was announced that the Mother's March will be held in Shelby County on January 19 and 20, directed by Mrs. Swearingen.

The teen organization is responsible for distributing the dime collecting envelopes in the elementary schools and will show educational films in some of the high schools. Randie Sears of Montevallo is teen chairman for the March this year. Teens have set March 30 as a tentative date for their annual Walk-a- thon.

Garbage pickup set for entire county

The Shelby County Health Department will inaugurate countywide garbage pickup service on or about the first of March this year. This is in accordance with the Alabama Solid Waste Disposal Acts, passed in 1969 and 1971, which require all counties and cities to make solid waste collection and disposal services available to all.

Sanitary landfills have been operated by the Shelby County Commission for many years for solid waste disposal. Now, a sanitarian has been employed by the Shelby County Health Department to oversee the new service and make sure that provisions of the State Law and State Health Department regulations are closely followed.

SEARCH FOR PEOPLE WHO NEED AID - - The Red Cross is cooperating with the Social Security Administration in searching for people eligible for social security benefits who are not now receiving them. At a meeting in Columbiana last Friday, interested county leaders studied the problem, which is brought into current focus with the new system of administering some forms of assistance through Social Security. Seated, Frances Pearson, Thelma Perkins, both Red Cross. Standing, John Clisby and Emily Rabren, both of Red Cross, Claude Smith, county volunteer chairman of the project, and Charles Simon, manager of Social Security office in Bessemer.

Commission hires property appraisers

The gigantic task of appraising all the property in Shelby County will be carried out by the Kirby C. Smith Company of Montgomery.

The Shelby County Commission granted the Montgomery firm the contract at a special meeting called last Friday.

Cost of the re-appraisal will be $656,000. The firm was low bidder of a group of five appraisal companies that bid on the contract.

The work is necessary to meet requirements of the state's property re-evaluation law.

The law was passed as a result of the long held theory that property evaluations in the state tended to favor big landholders. Counties have traditionally had their own boards of equalizations to keep property taxes fair within the county.

However, because property taxes on similar lands varied from county to county, the state is requiring all counties to reappraise their property, contracting with an approved appraisal firm.

The Smith Company will sub-contract with the Jacobs Company of Chicago to do the re-appraisal work in Shelby County.

The project is generating considerable interest locally because of the tremendous changes that have occured in recent years in Shelby County real estate. It is not known, for instance, how many parcels of land now exist in the county, because so much land has been divided and sub-divided in recent years.

It is expected that the total tax revenue will increase considerably when the re-evaluation is completed and taxes go into effect.

All agencies which receive a share of ad valorem taxes will participate in underwriting the cost of the re-appraisal. The County Commission, the Board of Education, Shelby Memorial Hospital, the State of Alabama, and the ten municipalities of the county will help pay for

Hiway department opens Calera office

The state highway department has opened a new district office in Calera. The new office has located here to better serve state highway system in the county.

The new district office employs about thirty people in maintenance, engineering, construction, and administrative capacities. Ten people are working in the district office, and the maintenance crew is operating from a rented building in The Shelby Industrial Park. Also operating with the office are project engineers on the Highway 280, Insterstate 65, and the bridge project at the junction of I-65 and Highway 31.

The new Calera office was created after a recent reorganization of the Alabama Highway Department Formerly Shelby County was in a district with Talladega County. The district office was located in Childersburg. Under that arrangement, complaints had to be made to Childersburg by long- distance telephone calls, making it difficult for the public and highway department officials.

Under the new system, the Shelby County office operates under the central office in Birmingham. With the interdependence of Jefferson and Shelby counties, the new arrangement simplifies matters for all concerned. People who have to report highway problems can call the county crew of the central office in Birmingham without long-distance problems. Moreover the highway projects in Shelby County will have a long-range effect on the Birmingham area. The new county District Engineer, Ray Edwards, says that "the new set-up will better serve the public and the highway department, since it will be easier for us to stay in communication with the home office.

Concerning new developments on the state projects in the county, Edwards told the Reporter what to expect in the coming months. "The I-65 and 280 projects will continue as planned, weather permitting. The Highway 31 bridge project has been contracted, and work should begin in February." The new bridge will be built to cross over Interstate 65 when it is extended northward from Alabaster.

A detour is currently in use there, since a small section of 31 is impossible. For several weeks drivers have been circling around the gap at the present ending of I-65. As work progresses on the interstate highway, other detours will be used on county road 11 between the proposed I-65 route and the present 31 at Alabaster and Pelham.

Besides the construction of the new projects, Edwards added that his office has a crew to take care of resurfacing, care and placement of road signs, and all other areas of maintaining existing state and interstate highways. Any reports of hazardous highway conditions or damage should be reported to the new office at 668-0173.

The district engineer Edwards stated that the new arrangement will increase the efficiency of the highway department in the area. He was formerly in charge of the whole Talladega - Shelby County area. Edwards says that since he was relieved of such a huge area, he can now better serve the county. Previously in charge of 350 miles of roadway, Edwards says that 190 miles of highway are now in his charge in Shelby County. "With less territory to be concerned, it will be easier to serve this county adequately."

CALERA NATIVE RETURNING - - Don Roberts, a native of Calera is returning to Shelby County to become assistant manager of Pelham's new Food World grocery store. The Calera High School graduate told the Reporter yesterday that he is "delighted to be coming back home". Roberts is married to the former Evelyn Sulser of Sylacauga. They have four children, Michael an electrician, and three students at Calera High School, John, David and Donna.

Two stores to open in Pelham Plaza

Buoyed by its success in the Food World and Big "B" operations, the sixth unit of the Food World and twenty-fourth Big "B" will be opening next Wednesday in Pelham.

A ribbon cutting ceremony will be held at 9 a.m. with Mayor Paul Yeager cutting the ribbon. Rev. Jerry Long of the Baptist Bible Church will open the ceremonies with a prayer.

The store manager will be Bob Scott; co-manager, Charles Burgess; assistant manager, Don Roberts; market manager, Charles Horton; head grocery clerk, John Majors; head produce clerk, Carlos Smith; dairy and frozen food manager, Robert Best; head cashier, Dot Gadberry.

Management of the stores describe the Food World with 42,000 square feet, as having "the largest selection of quality brand name foods to be found under one roof in Alabama."

As an example of the variety of food, they cite the meat department as having 21 different kinds of steaks, with only USDA choice meats being offered for sale. The produce department features ten dozen different kinds of fruits and vegetables delivered daily from its hugh produce warehouse.

Food World and Big "B" are the only large discount food and drug operations in Pelham and Shelby County. "What we're offering a housewife is the savings of $5 to $10 each week on her grocery bill, and on brands she knows and quality she insists on", they say. The stores are expected to attract grocery shoppers not only throughout the Shelby County area but Jefferson and Chilton Counties as well.

Management is quoted as saying, "The success of the first stores should be repeated in the units in Pelham. We're investing in the Pelham area because we're convinced that this is the area of the future that is really beginning to realize its potential."

Only the best locations in terms of present and future sales potential are selected, and the store's internal traffic flow is designed for maximum customer service utilizing checkout stands for minimum checkout time.

Supermarket News, a nationwide trade journal, featured Food World in the June 17, 1973 edition and describes the Food Worlds this way:

"The Food Worlds push high-volume, low-price image. Merchandise is displayed in case cases. Pallet bins are used for selected produce items . . .

"The large Food World stores provide efficient 'economics of scale' along with the greater merchandising freedom Food World is seeking.

"The stores have an aggressive pricing policy reflected in unusual newspaper ads. Double-truck (two page) ads feature a double shopping list, one showing Food World prices and the other showing the average of the five other major chains."

Two Food Worlds are now located in the Birmingham

Lowe runs for District 4

J. Alpha Lowe, Mayor of Vincent, will be a candidate for the Shelby County Commission. He announced his intention to qualify for the Democratic Party primary in Columbiana this week.

He will seek the commission post in District 4, now held by I.D. Stone of Westover.

District 4 covers the northeastern section of the county, including Vincent, Harpersville, Sterrett and Chelsea.

Lowe has been mayor of Vincent since 1968, when he was elected from a field of three candidates. Prior to that time he served as a member of the board of education from 1958 to 1968.

Lowe is widely known throughout district 4. He is a native of Vincent and as a youth played on baseball teams throughout the area. He served for 18 years as volunteer fire chief at Vincent, and at the present time is superintendent of the Gas and Water Department.

He is employed as Crew chief of the Fire and Guard Department at the Alabama Army Ammunition plant at Childersburg. He started working at the plant in 1941 and has been there ever since except for serving 45 months in the U.S. Army during World War II.

He is married to the former Evelyn Davis, also a native of Vincent.

Their son is a Baptist minister, studying in the seminary in Louisville, Ky.

Lowe said that if elected, he would do what he thinks is right for the district and for the county. He has no preconceived ideas or programs to advance at the present, and stressed that he is not aligned with any political faction.

New program underway

The Retired Service Volunteer Program got off to a start last Monday morning here in Shelby County. At a meeting at Briarcliff Nursing Home, R.S.V.P. program directors, representatives of local senior citizens groups and nursing home officials mapped out a service program to be carried out at that institution. At the meeting volunteer workers were given their R.S.V.P. badges.

Receiving these name plate insignias were Mr. and Mrs. Lloyd Busby of Calera, Mary Weaver of Montevallo, and Mrs. Thelma Green of Helena. These volunteers represented various senior citizens groups in the county. All retired persons are encouraged to volunteer their services to help in various projects.

Rev. Fred Holmes, R.S.V.P. county coordinator, told the Reporter at the meeting that the program aims not only providing different services around Shelby County, but it also serves as a way to involve active area retirees in the volunteer activities of the R.S.V.P. program.

Rev. Holmes explained that Briarcliff is a model station for the R.S.V.P. project. Nursing home officials have agreed to accept the volunteers and furnsih the needed equipment for their projects.

Holmes went on to say that the R.S.V.P program plans to expand its program to serve schools, librarys, hospitals, rest homes, head start programs, the office of pensions and security, and provide a day care center for children of witnesses and jurors who need to attend court.

The Retired Service Volunteer Program is funded by a federal agency known as Positive Maturity, Inc. The program pays expenses incurred by R.S.V.P. volunteers while working on the various service projects.

One goal of the program is to become completely voluntary. At the present time, in addition to the county coordinator, the R.S.V.P. program has a full time county secretary, Mrs. Susan Tedford.

Her office is located in room 142 of the Community Services Center located in Columbiana. ANy senior citizen wishing to participate in the R.S.V.P. porgram is invited to come by this office or contact Mrs. Tedford by calling 669-9184.

already collect and dispose of garbage at least once a week in many parts of the county, on a fee basis. This will be extended to cover the entire county.

The County Health Department will license these collectors, see that they do their job with reasonable care, and require citizens to safely store their garbage in approved cans. (30-35 gallon standard metal or high impact plastic)

If an individual or business does not want the new service, they may propose an alternate waste disposal plan and obtain an "exemption certificate" from the County Health Department.

An important object is the elimination of unsightly roadside dumps in Shelby County. The ultimate goal of the countywide service is a cleaner, healthier and safer home for Shelby Countians, in accordance with State Law.

Rayfield is named by Health Dept.

Dr. John D. Rayfield, Shelby County's health officer, has announced the appointment of Stephen K. Spencer to the environmental health staff. Mr. Spencer comes to Shelby County from Roanoke, Alabama.

He graduated from high school in Anchorage, Alaska, and from Jacksonville State University in 1968 with a B.S. in biology. Mr. Spencer has also attended Southern Union and Auburn University. From 1968 to 1972 he served in the U.S. Army.

Mr. Spencer's duties will be directed mainly toward the solid waste program in the county, Dr. Rayfield said. New building denotes progress

For W.M. Farris, chairman of the Alabaster Water and Gas Board since it was first begun in 1954, the opening of the new building last month was the culmination of many years of hard work.

Farris has been working to develop Alabaster's water and gas system since the city was incorporated. During his years on the board, the system has extended from the downtown area all the way to Dogwood, to Moore's Cross roads, to Maylene, and up the Maylene road toward Helena. Water is also supplied to residents and businesses along Highway 31 from Saginaw to Pelham. Residents of the Simmsville Road and other nearby communities are also served by the Alabaster water and gas system.

Gray Jones, who resigned last month, has also been a member of the board since its earliest days.

Current members of the board, in addition to Chairman Farris, are Dan Acker, Acie Langston and Wayne Lucas.

Alabaster's mayor, Harold Davenport, serves as superintendent of the system.

The new building, located next to the Alabaster city hall, provides adequate office space for the collection of bills, for storage, and other needs of the water and gas system and its personnel.

Industry growth means change

by Don Wasson

Alabama's astounding industrial growth in 1973 -- $1.6 billion in new industries and expansions of existing plants -- is a record to be proud of but it should also give warning of an impending traumatic change in the face and nature of this state.

It has been known for years that Alabama had more potential for industrialization than any state in the nation. One had only to look at the overabundance of natural resources such as water, minerals and fuels, food and fibers to know that American ingenuity would someday move in to capitalize on these things.

Another great, but almost untapped resource was the human resource -- men and women able to perform the operations industry demands to keep its wheels turning. Unfortunately, this resource was for years underdeveloped as the state struggled with the great sociological question of discrimination.

Now, however, the impediments to Alabama's growth and development into an industrial state rather than a pure agricultural state have been removed.

The impediment to education was removed by federal court order and the state has seized upon the new concept of training people to perform for specific industries. If an industry wants to locate a plant in Alabama to produce grummagets, then the state will train however many grumaget-makers the industry needs and have them ready to go to work the day the plant opens.

Also contributing heavily to the state's new status as a place to build an industry is the new national awareness of ecology. When people woke up to the fact that the nation's streams are being choked by pollutants, it was discovered that down in Alabama, streams run free and clear and that there are many, many streams.

Still another factor contributing to the new industrialization is that long-dreamed of project, the Tennessee- Tombigbee Waterway. This artificial canal linking those two mighty rivers will make west Alabama a sort of Rural Valley in America, providing a waterway system that will open the entire midwestern section of the country to overseas shipping via the Port of Mobile.

Now that the project is underway, it is giving impetus to new industrial location. And it appears that industry's discovery of the West Alabama potential will have a salubrious effect on the Tenn-Tom project, perhaps speeding its completion by two or three years.

And finally, the fuel shortages which have hit the country in the past few months have given added impetus to Alabama's search for oil and for development of other fuels, particularly coal. The state has some 30 million tons of coal in reserve and this resource will certainly be developed now.

Oil exploration is being developed more rapidly now and the state has an almost certain superport in store off the Alabama and Mississippi Gulf Coast which will give rise to the development of oil refineries in the southern part of the state.

All of this means revolutionary changes in the way Alabama lives. The next few years will hold traumatic decisions for Alabamians and there will be a great need for forceful, dynamic leadership.

All of which points up the fact that this is a political year and that Alabamaians should exercise more considered judgement in the selection of public officials than ever before.

That Canadian tells it right

by Fred Cooper

There is a record out that I'd like for you to hear.

I'd like for everybody to hear it, knowing that there would be those who would make fun of it, offer rebuttals, and call me a flag-waver.

The name of the record is "The Americans" and it's not a song but rather a statement by a Canadian newsman. Surprisingly, it's a statement of appreciation toward the United States, something we don't hear much anymore.

He talks about nations that we have bailed out, disasters we have rushed to with money and aid, countries we have propped up with American-made and American-Paid-For equipment, war debts that have been forgiven since they weren't being paid anyway.

Then he remembers how the very countries and peoples we helped have turned on us, criticized, made fun of, ganged up against, and have taken advantage of our good nature by calling on us again as soon as they hit another trouble spot.

He mentions the governments that collapse all over the world that nobody gets indignant over and the way world opinion has lashed out against the United States for taking our recent scandals out of the closet and putting them on display in order to clean them up.

And then he says that when America pulls out of her present troubles, as she will, he wouldn't blame us if we said to hell with the rest of the world.

This Canadian newsman thinks we can bring ourselves out of the murk that is enveloping the nation. Listening to him makes me think we can, too. He's backed by "America, The Beautiful" and it sounds like a fight song. I get chills hearing this record and I hope you get a chance to hear it, too.

And I hope you'll join me in waving a flag. It's a good time to wave one.

MRS. HARLIN RELAXES AT HOME -- Melville Harlin now has time to catch up on the reading she has been putting aside for 20½ years while she looked after the needs of Shelby County children as the county's child welfare worker. She shares her thoughts about the needs of present day children with readers of the Reporter in the accompanying article.

Welfare payments take a new turn

A significant change in welfare in Alabama and Shelby County, as well as throughout the entire Nation, went into effect on January 1, Shelby County Pensions and Security Director Nell J. Fulton said this week.

A few Federal Supplemental Security Income (SSI) program for needy aged, blind and disabled persons began operations on that date, Mrs. Fulton explained.

Federal-State financed programs of Old Age Pensions (OAP), Aid to Blind (AB), and Aid to the Permanently and Totally Disabled (APTD) are being discontinued in their old form. Instead, there is now a state- financed program to supplement the new SSI program in instances when additional aid is needed to prevent hardship.

"SSI checks are being sent to most OAP, AB and APTD recipients," the Director explained. Most of these SSI payments are equal to or greater than OAP, AB and APTD payments, she added. In some cases, however, Federal rules result in SSI payments below December checks from the Department of Pensions and Security. For those who do receive less, Alabama will continue to make payments to cover the difference.

"Federal law requires states to make these separate payments to ensure that persons on the assistance rolls in December 1973 will not be financially disadvantaged by SSI in January," the county director pointed out.

Aged, blind and disabled persons who come on the rolls after December do not have to worry about a lower check than they would have received before that date, Mrs. Fulton stresses.

Alabama will make payments not only to ensure that December recipients suffer no hardships, but also to those whose needs increase after December 31, the Director said. This includes persons who apply for public assistance after that date.

The County Director also emphasized that SSI will by no means replace OAP, AB and APTD programs, which provide services as well as financial aid.

"Many recipients in these categories and many new applicants will receive monthly checks from this Department," the director stated. "All SSI recipients, moreover, will continue to look to pensions and security workers for social services."

Such services -- including a wide range of activities designed to help people with problems that a money payment cannot solve -- are not provided by the Social Security Administration.

Just as important, Mrs. Fulton added, the county department will continue to administer the program of Aid to Dependent Children (ADC), as well as a multitude of services for children and families.

Old papers provide joke

Want to hear an old joke? This one is not like the usual old joke. It's over 100 years old, and we can prove it.

It appeared in the newspaper, "The Shelby Guide", published in Columbiana on May 22, 1873. It recently came to our attention when we were reading copies of the historic newspaper in the collection of Kenneth Penhale of Helena.

W. Roberts was listed as Editor- publisher of the newspaper. The story appeared on the front page, headlined, "Use of a Receipt".

In a city not many thousand miles from this locale there lived a lawyer crafty, subtle and cute as a fox. An Indian of the Choctaw tribe- Kiser by name owed him some money.

The lawyer had waited long for the tin. His patience, at last gave way, and he threatened the Indian with lawsuits, processes and executions. The poor Choctaw got scared, and finally brought the money to his creditor. He waited for the lawyer to give him a receipt.

"What are you waiting for" -- said the lawyer.

"Receipt" - said the Indian.

"A receipt", said the lawyer, a receipt"! Can you understand the nature of a receipt? Tell me the use of one and I will give it to you."

The Indian looked at him a moment and then said:

" 'Spose maybe me die, me go to heaben; me find the gate locked, me see de apostle Peter! He says -- "Kiser, what do you want?" Me say: "Want to get in". He say "You good man"? Me said "Yes". He say "you pay Mr. A that money"? What me do? "I hab no receipt. Hab to hunt all over Hell to find you".

He got the receipt.

Mrs. Harlin lists urgent needs--

Mental health facility, detention home, dental clinic

Part II

"Drugs cause a battle royal in families," Melville Harlin says.

The recently retired child welfare worker thought over a question the Reporter asked about the use of drugs among Shelby County young people, and quickly pointed out, "I haven't seen much of it. We haven't had any children in our custody who used drugs, but I have dealt with children who were having troubles with it."

For the last 20½ years Mrs. Harlin was the first person to find out about Shelby County children in trouble, in her position with the Department of Pensions and Securities. It was her job to help families untangle problems with their children, to act as probation officer for children in court and to handle adoption and foster home placements.

Most of her caseload dealt with placing children for adoption. Twenty years ago there were few babies to be placed, then for a few years, there was a large number of babies needing adoptive homes. But within the last few years, the number of babies available for adoption has decreased to a very small number. Babies born out of wedlock are now quite often kept by the mother, or are cared for by relatives. Mrs. Harlin notes the considerable change in social attitudes regarding birth control and illegitimate pregnancies.

Investigations of prospective adoptive homes are more extensive now than they formerly were, Mrs. Harlin says. The main point that social workers want to be certain of before placing a child in an adoptive home is that the marriage is stable. Most of the investigation now centers around the relationship that the adoptive parents have with one another. The child welfare worker tries to make sure that the parents can meet the emotional needs and provide spiritual training for the child.

There is always a need for good foster homes in Shelby County, Mrs. Harlin says, and she has placed children in foster homes during her entire career. Foster homes are used when parents do not want to give a child up for adoption, or when families have temporary problems and hope to be re-united in the future.

The need is most critical now for foster homes that will accept older children, children with emotional problems, and children with health problems. There is an urgent need for qualified black homes as well as white homes, Mrs. Harlin says. The Department of Pensions and Security can offer payments to foster parents for caring for children, and the amount of money available has increased recently, she says.

Mrs. Harlin finds it appalling that so many children are neglected. In her experience, she has handled the problems of neglected children in the ways that seemed best for the needs of the child. She recommends family counseling and psychiatric counseling for families where there is considerable stress and strain.

She has seen many cases of badly abused and beaten children in Shelby County. Mrs. Harlin finds that in most of these cases, the child abused by the family was a retarded child, and often there was mental illness in the adults of the family.

She particularly praises foster parents for providing so much loving care for children who come to them with problems, and repeated "I have seen more good than bad."

Among the improvements in recent years, children can now get Medicaid if they are receiving aid to Dependent Children, assuring them health care.

The Reporter asked Mrs. Harlin to list the major needs Shelby County has at the present time in the field of child welfare.

She rapidly gave three major needs, which she would like to see improved.

1. Facilities for mental health care. Mrs. Harlin stresses that we need regional mental health care clinics badly.

2. Detention home. When a child get in trouble, he o. she not only needs supervision, but something to do, with supervisors offering training.

3. Dental clinic. Dental care was formerly available to children from poverty- stricken homes, but the program was discontinued because of lack of funds.

The missing 58

by Jack Anderson

(Copyright 1974 by United Feature Syndicate, Inc.)

WASHINGTON – The Pentagon has just about given up trying to find out what happened to the 58 men who are still carried on its POW list. These are men who were photographed in captivity or whose radio messages were picked up reporting they had landed safely in enemy territory.

The cease-fire agreement provides that both sides will help each other gather information about the fate of missing men. But the North Vietnamese have refused to cooperate. They are waiting, they say, until the other agreements have been implemented.

In secret conversations, the North Vietnamese have indicated they know what happened to the 58 missing POWs. They have hinted that some of them died in captivity. But they won't give out specific details until the United States provides the promised economic aid for the reconstruction of North Vietnam.

The families of the missing men, meanwhile, are left uncertain whether the men are dead or alive. The Pentagon has no proof that they are dead. But top Pentagon officials suspect privately that most of them must have died in captivity.

Their fate remains one of the haunting questions of the Vietnam War.

Brezhnev's Grip: Newspapers have been full of speculation lately that Leonid Brezhnev, the Kremlin leader, is slipping in power. This has ...rred alarm that his policy of easing tensions with the West may be reversed by the hardliners in the Kremlin.

The press speculation has been questioned, however, by a secret State Department analysis. It is true that Defense Minister Andrei Grechko, probably the harshest man in the Kremlin, has been calling for a strong military stance. But Grechko is in charge of the Soviet armed forces. As the secret analysis points out, he is expected to emphasize military preparedness.

It is also true that Mikhail Suslov, another grim man, has been stressing the continuing capitalist-communist conflict. But he is the Kremlin's ideologist, who directs the worldwide communist cause. He is expected to emphasize the adversary relationship between East and West.

None of this means that Brezhnev is about to be displaced. In fact, intelligence reports suggest he is tightening his hold on the Kremlin. The State Department is the first to admit that it doesn't know all that goes on inside the Kremlin. But the Kremlinologists, who wrote the secret analysis, doubt that Brezhnev's power is declining.

Not Guilty: Two years ago, we reported that the Central Intelligence Agency and the giant ITT Corporation had plotted to block Salvador Allende from coming to power in Chile after his election. A subsequent Senate investigation confirmed the story.

Last September, Allende's Marxist regime was overthrown and Allende reportedly shot himself as army troops stormed the presidential palace. Ever since, Washington has been buzzing with rumors that the United States was somehow involved in planning the coup.

U.S. authorities have nervously avoided discussing the coup. But behind closed doors, the Senate Foreign Relations Committee has been inquiring about U.S. involvement in the overthrow.

During the secret sessions, senators have discussed the presence of U.S. naval forces off the Chilean coast at the time of the coup and reports that the State Department had been warned in advance a coup was imminent.

One high State Department official was asked whether he could state under oath that there was no U.S. involvement. The nervous bureaucrat replied that he could say there was none at all, so far as he knew.

Other intelligence experts told the committee that any U.S. involvement would have been channeled in a different direction. It would have been far more beneficial for both American foreign and economic policy, they testified, if Allende had lost at the polls.

The coup, officials agreed, was the worst possible occurrence for U.S. foreign policy.

Why Cadets Confessed: Those who wonder why our military leaders blindly accept orders and cover up scandals need look no farther than the service academies. At these military schools, cadets live under rigid and exaggerated codes of conformity. Those who violate the codes are ruthlessly ridden out.

We have had access to the confidential letters of cadets who were caught up in a 1972 cheating scandal at the Air Force Academy. The letters describe how they were hauled out of bed in the middle of the night, isolated in guarded rooms, threatened, screamed at and ordered to stand at stiff attention for hours. Thirty-nine cadets – some of whom are still proclaiming their innocence – left the academy.

Wrote one young man: "Being awakened at three in the morning and having academy discipline instilled in me, it was several hours before I even started rebelling. The wing commander...(was) screaming at me from approximately three inches in front of my face....He was cursing...in the worst way possible."

Another former cadet wrote: "Interrogation teams did everything from pushing, shoving, screaming at the top of their lungs to standing us...(at attention) for extended periods of time to the point where (some cadets) were vomiting and passing out."

That's how the academy got its "confessions." Many of the men who "confessed" are now serving as enlisted men. The men who interrogated them are now officers in the U.S. Air Force.

Spring Creek and Pelham get $664,000 for water

Loans to two Shelby County water systems totaling $664,000, will soon provide service to some 675 area homes, according to an announcement today by Congressman Walter Flowers.

"It gives me great pleasure to be able to announce a $501,000 loan from the Farmers Home Administration to the Spring Creek Water Authority to help its new water system."

He added, "At the same time, I am delighted to report a $163,000 loan to the Town of Pelham from the FHA to help provide improvements in its existing water system. Both these loans will help bring water to homes of many Shelby County families who could not otherwise afford this service."

A total of 605 homes and other establishments will benefit from the Spring Creek Water Authority system, which is located east of the Town of Shelby. It will purchase its water from the City of Columbiana.

The Pelham loan assistance will enable the town to extend services for water users and update the current system. The extension will provide water to additional residents, making a total of 745 homes and establishments benefitting from the total system.

The loans were made possible under the Rural Community Facilities program, administered by the FHA.

Rescue units aid in search

County rescue units were alerted over the weekend when a Pea Ridge man was reported missing. On the alert were the West Shelby, Shelco, and Harpersville rescue units.

All three units sent men and equipment to the scene, answering the call for help in locating the man.

According to Kenneth Mullins of Helena, a member of the West Shelby unit, the man was found before the rescue squads could begin their search.

Stork delivers the New Year's baby

By Mildred White Wallace

Brahm's Lullaby could have been the theme song New Year's Day at Shelby Memorial Hospital for heralding the arrival of some new comers in our county. Dr. Stork was kept busily engaged flying over the hospital on Jan 1 delivering these little "bundles of joy" better known as "screaming infants" or sometimes referred to as "sweetest li'l fellows".

The first "blessed event" checked in at 1:30 a.m. Jan. 1, and automatically qualified to serve as the Reporter's Mascot for 1974. She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert O. Barnes of Columbiana and her name is: Tracey Leigh Barnes.

Along with our congratulations, according to our custom for many years, will go a year's subscription to her parents for the Reporter.

Next to arrive and occupy a little bassinet all to herself was the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Troy Cooper of Pelham. She weighed seven pounds and 2½ ounces. Her name is Troy Wayne.

Shortly after lunch, on this eventful New Years Day, in this busy obstetrical department at Shelby Memorial came the son of Mr. and Mrs. Joel Cook of Alabaster who weighed in at eight pounds and nine and one half ounces.

Tornado touches down; none hurt, home damaged

A small tornado touched down in Shelby County on Saturday, December 29, along county highway 47 between Columbiana and Chelsea. Even though the twister touched down for only several hundred yards, it severely damaged the house of Earl Foster.

Earl Foster who was away from the house at the time of the storm told the Reporter that the winds tore off large sections of his roof and blew his porch complete across the road in front of his house.

Foster said that the heavy rains that followed during the next few days finished the job that the tornado started. The inside of his house is ruined, he said.

Foster's home was almost consumed by a forest fire that burned around it three weeks ago. Earl fought the fire for several hours to save it from the blaze only to have it blown away.

Foster's neighbors, Mr. and Mrs. LeRoy Bentley were at home when the storm hit. They and two sons saw the funnel cloud approaching and hid under their house until it passed. Mrs. Bentley said she could see the churning action of the tornado. She describes the noise as being similar to a freight train.

A.A. Dorough and his wife live across the road from the Foster home. Mrs. Dorough said that she saw the storm coming. Her husband was in the bathtub at the time. The twister spared the Dorough house, but toppled over a small chicken house in their back yard.

Mrs. T.S. Martin who operates a small grocery next door to the Foster house was in her yard gathering a load of kindling wood when she saw the approaching funnel cloud. She ran into her house and tried to close the d oor, but the wind prevented her from doing this. The only damage done at the Martin's was that several shelves of canned goods were blown onto the floor.

This tornado was not very large or damaging, and may sound anticlimatic in comparison to the more violent windstorms that have hit Shelby County, but those who saw it, all agree that they never want to see another tornado again.

WIND DAMAGE - - Sections of the roof and the front porch of the home of Earl Foster were blown away in a tornado December 29.

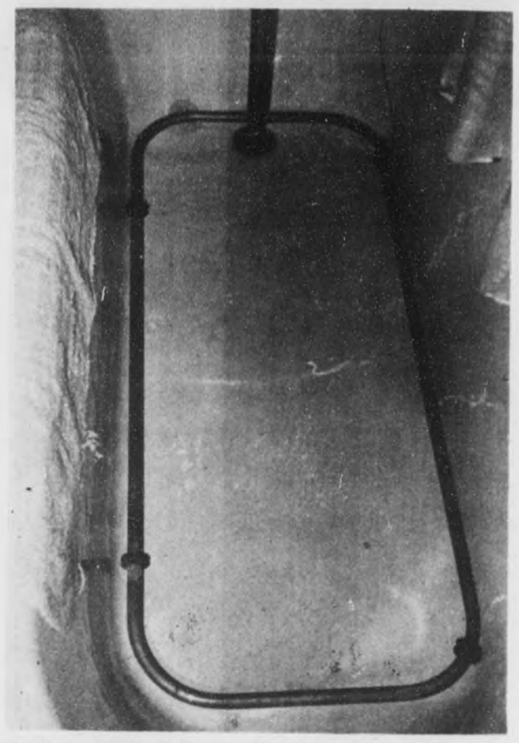
Hoyt Duck attacks problem



Man invents massage bath machine

"WORTH A MILLION" - - Hoyt Duck displays part of his massage bath machine. Duck built the machine from odds and ends, like the tubing he is holding here.

BUBBLE YOUR TROUBLES AWAY - - The basic design of the machine is a vacuum cleaner attached to the pipes. When it's operating forced air bubbles through the bath water.

RUB–A–DUB–DUB - - The perforated tubing lies around the bottom of the bathrub, where air exits from the 1/8 th inch holes.

By Willard Harrison

Mr. Hoyt Duck, a 67-year old retiree, has come up with an invention which he says has eased his arthritis pains. Mr. Duck says that after suffering with arthritis for 40 years, he has come up with a homemade device which has helped him to live with his arthritis. The Childersburg man claims that after 15 months of using his whirlpool-type device, he has gotten more relief than he received from half-a- dozen doctors.

Formerly a mechanic in Columbiana, Mr. Duck used his skill to construct a new variation of a massage bath. Rather than use a mechanism to circulate the water directly, his device works on compressed air forced through the bath water. Duck combined an indoor-outdoor shop vacuum cleaner with perforated aluminum tubing placed in the bottom of a bath tub. When the exhaust system of the grounded vacuum cleaner is turned on, jets of air are forced through the water. A control switch regulates the force of the air bubbles from a slow agitation to a geysering boil.

The bather can fill the tub with whatever temperature is comfortable. He can then choose the speed of the air bubbles moving the water. Mr. Duck says that he and his wife Lois use epsom salts in their massage baths which average around twenty to twenty-five minutes a session. Duck says that daily massage baths ease his arthritis pains. The tubing in the bottom of the tub is easily moved to whatever position is desired.

The Ducks have used the device under the supervision of their doctor for several months. Both of them were in an automobile wreck in April of last year. While in the hospital, Duck says that they were taking therapeutic baths. He told the doctor, "I've got something better than your bath equipment." Duck states that the doctor was impressed by the blueprint drawn up by Claude Wilder, Duck's step-son. He says that the doctor gave him the go-ahead to use the device for his and his wife's post-accident therapy.

Having invented the machine for his own benefit, Mr. Duck gives a strong endorsement for it. His hands and feet are gnarled and swollen from arthritis, but he claims that the baths keep the swelling and pain under control. His wife tells that Duck was unable to walk without a cane two years ago, and that she can tell a marked improvement over his previous condition. Duck reports nothing but favorable comments from the people who own one of the machines.

Mr. Duck says that this is not his first invention, but it is the first to attract much attention. He says that while it has helped him, he doesn't want to get involved with having to produce them on a commercial basis. He is content with just having produced the machine and owning the original. Says Mr. Duck, "I wouldn't take a million dollars for it."

Wilsonville rebuilds after May 27 tornado

Last week the Reporter ran the first in a series of articles concerning the May 27 tornado victims and how they are now recovering from the disasterous effects of that storm. This week's article deals with several people in the Wilsonville area and how they are building for the future.

Oland Smith, office manager of the Alabama Soil Conservation Service in Columbiana, lost his home in the storm. Although Smith was not there at the time, his house was completely blown away by the tornado.

As he puts it, Smith is in the same shape he was the night of May 27. He says that he hasn't started constructing a new house yet, although he has made the financial arrangements. Smith is now living in a rented house.

He says that probably 25 percent of the people in the Wilsonville area have already replaced their damaged or destroyed houses while another 50 percent are in the process of rebuilding.

Smith went on to say that the ASCS office has been concerned with county farmers and their losses in the tornado. He reported that the farmers have repaired the many miles of fences torn up in the storm and are still removing the debris from their fields.

Smith tells that after days of clearing air borne material, the fields of his own farm are still covered with trash deposited by the tornado.

Mr. Smith says he has traveled over the complete 137 mile swath across Alabama made by the May 27 tornado and has plotted the exact course on a map.

He shows that the twister started in Hale County near the banks of the Black Warrior River. From there it traveled in a northeasterly direction to a spot in Talladega County north of Winterboro. The path of the storm follows a straight line, only varying a few degrees from its original course. Smith noted that the tornado crossed highway 25 eight times.

Down the road from Oland Smith's farm, on county road 9 near Wilsonville, stands the new house of Sam Gallups. The Gallups home was also destroyed by the twister. Sam's son, Marlin Gallups said that his father contracted to rebuild the house immediately after the storm, and that it was finished in a month. Until that time the family lived in a camper.

In addition to the Gallups home, the storm destroyed another house, three barns, a trailer, and a smokehouse on their farm.

The Gallups family was at church in Wilsonville when the tornado ripped through their property.

The house of Mr. and Mrs. G.W. Barnes was another of the many homes destroyed along county road nine.

The couple was at home when the tornado struck. Mr. Barnes explains that he and his wife were sitting in their living room at the time. The coming storm sounded like the roar of several freight trains, he continued. The two passed out, and when they awakened, they found themselves lying on the floor in the rain. The room Mr. and Mrs. Barnes had been sitting in was gone.

Mr. Barnes tells that by the flashes of lightening he and his wife climbed over the debris and walked to the road where a neighbor picked them up and took them to Wilsonville to their son Joseph's house.

The two lived in a HUD trailer for a while, Mr. Barnes told the Reporter, but now they have put a modular house on the site of their old home.

Two of the most seriously injured of the Wilsonville tornado victims were Elwood and Alice Johnson. They both received broken backs in the storm. Their house, sitting on top of a hill on county road 48 in Wilsonville, was blown away by the twister.

Nine people in the Johnson house were hiding in the hall when the tornado hit. Mr. and Mrs. Johnson describe hearing the windows crash through the house, then seeing the roof blow off, and actually being lifted into the air along with the house. Instead of flying over the rainbow, the Johnsons and their house landed in a broken heap some 80 yards from the original site.

The Johnsons are now in the process of building a new house. It is not completed, but the family moved in anyway on December 17.

Elwood Johnson has gone back to his old job at the Kimberly- Clark plant in Childersburg, but worries that he will not be able to stand up to it. Mrs. Johnson still uses a cane to get around. She says she hopes her injuries will not require any further surgery, but she has not been released as a hospital out- patient.

Mr. Johnson explains that his new house is costing nearly twice the price of the family's old home because of rising construction costs and his inability to do some of the work himself.

Both Mr. and Mrs. Johnson agree, however, that they are proud to be alive. This means more than any rebuilding problems they might face.

"We were given a second chance," Alice Johnson declares. "Other people weren't that lucky."

OLD AND NEW - - The home of Mr. and Mrs. G.W. Barnes of Rt. 2 Wilsonville was completely destroyed by the May 27 tornado (below). The Smiths have set up a new modular house on the site of their old home (above). Mr. Smith is now busy cleaning up the debris deposited by the storm and landscaping his yard.

PRESERVATION HALL JAZZ COMES TO MONTEVALLO - - The famous jazz musicians of Preservation Hall will bring their music to Montevallo tonight in a performance on the University campus. The band is pictured at one of their regular performances in Preservation Hall in the Historic French Quarter of New Orleans.

New Orleans Jazz comes to UM

New Orleans Jazz in its original form comes to Shelby County this week when the world- famous Preservation Hall Jazz Band appears in concert Thursday evening, Jan. 10, at the University of Montevallo.

The performing group includes musicians who actually created the music: Wilhelmina "Billie" Pierce at the piano, Percy Humphrey on trumpet, Joseph H. "Cie" Frazier on drums, trombonist Nathan "Jim" Robinson, and Willie J. Humphrey on clarinet.

Preservation Hall owner and proprieter Allan Jaffee also appears with the group on tuba.

All the band members except Jaffee were around and playing in groups with the "greats" of New Orleans Jazz as it emerged in the early 1900's. A listing of their colleagues reads like a jazz honor roll - - Louis Armstrong, King Oliver, Jelly Roll Morton, Buddy Bolden, Kid Ory and all the others of that time and place.

They are the same people who made jazz America's important contribution to world music. Their vitality and drive is still apparent in the happy- sad- singing music of New Orleans, an art form that is uniquely American. Their present day performances are filled with the spirit that made jazz wonderfully uninhibited music that it is.

They are on tour from their now- legendary home at 726 St. Peter Street -- in the Crescent City.

Their appearance in Montevallo is a feature of the university's 1973-74 Concert and Lecture Series. Program time is 8:15 p.m. in Palmer Auditorium. All seats are general admission and tickets may be obtained at the Palmer Hall box office prior to the concert.

Boundaries changed between Beats 1 and 2

The Shelby County Commission made a change in the boundary between beats one and two at the special meeting held last Friday.

The problem arose when two families found they would have been required to drive through Shelby and then to Columbiana to vote. The change means they can vote in Shelby.

Under the new arrangement, the northern border of beat two will now turn north along the section line between sections 10 and 11 in township 22 south, range 15 east, and continue along it until the next corner. Then it will turn east on the section line between sections 11 and 2, and run east to the Coosa River.

Church school classes begin

Church school classes have begun at North Shelby's recently established United Methodist Church.

Pastor Larry Dill announces that classes for all ages will start at 9:30 a.m. each week, with morning worship beginning at 10:30.

The church, which held its first worship service December 16, is located on Caldwell Mill Road, just north of Valley Dale Road.

Rev. Dill urges area residents to join the new congregation for both services.

New postage rate increase is postponed

The postal rate hike expected for this January has been postponed. The rate increase will not go into effect until March 2, 1974.

The new rates cover all classes of domestic and international mail. The nation's post offices had been anticipating the increase for several months.

The two-month delay may leave post offices short of eight cent stamps and other current postage requirements. So don't be surprised if you have to use Christmas stamps until March when the new rates become effective.

TWO BUCKS, TWELVE POINTS - - This nephew-uncle team recently bagged two six pointers near Columbiana. Kenneth is the son of Montevallo's city clerk, Kenneth Bailey, Sr.

Coaches comment on basketball season

Two weeks ago this paper covered the Thompson basketball tournament. As a conclusion to that story, the Reporter talked to Gary Fleming, coach of the tournament-winning Montevallo High School bulldogs, about the season up to that point and expectations about their remaining games.

This week the coaches of six other Shelby County high school basketball teams were contacted and asked to make the same assessments. Here are the reports that they gave.

Calera - Although the Eagles have a 1-6 season thus far this year, Calera High School basketball coach Jimmy Lawley is expecting improvements after the start of the second semester. Lawley believes he will have more eligible players after that time. So far forward Rickey Seay has carried the team averaging 26 points a game. The Calera coach also singled out guards Frank Nix and Obie Hundley as valuable ball handlers.

Chelsea - Hornet coach Gary Stephens told the Reporter that his team has not been playing poorly despite a 1-5 record. The main problem Stephens says is that his athletes are short and Chelsea's opponents have a chance to get more shots. Chelsea lost to Ragland last Friday night and are scheduled to play Indian Springs Thursday. Stephens singled out Mike Young who made the all tournament team at the Birmingham University School tournament over the holidays. The coach also singled out Ronnie Moore as a good athlete. Stephens said that Chelsea should start to be more competitive in the next few weeks before the tournaments begin.

Coosa Valley - CVA coach Jim Lowrey describes the Rebels as a young team with only one starting senior. Although their record is 1-4 Lowrey feels that his players are gaining valuable experience by hustling and trying to improve. The Rebels lost their last game by only one point. Lowrey says Theron Bearden and Mike Clinkscales are his best ball handlers, but also named freshman Greg Garrett, Donnie Brown, Joey Somners, Charles Logan and Larry Woodall.

Shelby Academy - Raider coach David Kirk describes this season as a rebuilding as last years SA squad went 25-4. The Raiders are presently 4-3 for the year although the wins came during the last three games. Tom Reynolds has been the most outstanding player on his squad, Kirk says, by averaging 23 points a game. The coach also praised guard Richard Norton. Senior members of the Shelby Academy squad are: Kenneth Hall, Tom Reynolds, Richard Norton, Steve Acre, Ralph Moore, and Joey Lovelady.

Thompson - Coach Herman Watts describes the next four or five games as "crucial" to the Warriors. Faced with a 2-6 record this season Thompson can come back and have a good year Watts said. It will take a lot of hard work he admits since his team has to really scrap to win. Watts is optimistic about this since he has several young starters gaining experience and is hoping for more eligible players next semester. He feels that the Warriors played good ball in their last three outings. Watts said that player Mike

UM Falcons down Troy State, 87-74

by Rick Moore

The University of Montevallo Falcons are back in the winning column after a two week holiday break. Last Friday night the UM team downed Troy State University by the score of 87-74. This boosts the Falcon's overall season record to 8-2.

Chris Davis was the high scorer for UM shooting for an impressive 32 points in the game. Teammate David Porterfield was not far behind by scoring 22 points. Gerald Douglas finished up the high scoring trio with 12 points.

Douglas was the high rebounder for the Falcons with nine grabs off the backboard.

Montevallo hit over half of the team's attempted shots completing 53.8 percent.

Falcon coach Bill Jones commented after the game that he was pleased with his team's performance. Montevallo was behind by the score of 37-42 at halftime. Jones continued that he was proud of the comeback especially after a two week layoff.

Jones went on to say that the Falcon's defense wasn't bad in the game with Troy. He singled out guard Eddie Barnes as playing the best overall defensive. Barnes received a badly sprained ankle before the holidays and seems to be recovering well, Jones added.

Three home games are on the slate for the Falcons this week. Montevallo meets the University of Alabama at Huntsville Tuesday night, Jacksonville State University on Wednesday, and William Cary College Friday evening.

The Falcon coach describes UAH as a small but scrappy ball team. UM defeated the north Alabama team earlier in the season only after playing an overtime period.

Jones says Jacksonville is probably the best material club the Falcons have faced all year, despite the Gamecock's unimpressive 1-5 record. Jacksonville is a very big and physical club he continued.

William Cary will present a big rivalry with UM since the two teams are top contenders for the Southern States Conference title this year.

The Falcon coach stresses the need for all three wins this week in order for the Falcons to retain their present momentum in order to win the conference title.

Basketball

Oden has not completely recovered from an injury he received last month. The Thompson coach singled out Steve Luker, James Tanniehill and John Adams as doing a good job.

Vincent - Yellowjacket coach Owen Butts says he is satisfied with Vincent's 5-5 season record since his team has been playing mostly 3-A schools. The Yellowjackets have lost three games by only one point, he continued. Vincent downed B.B. Comer 49-48 on December 18 and then lost to Warrior 60-59 in the Oneonta Tournament. Butts says James Riggins and Paul Hamilton are his leading scorers while Kenneth Fair and Maurice Robinson were leading rebounders for the Yellowjackets.

MRS. TOM STOKER
. . . formerly Pamela H. Overton

Overton, Stoker exchange vows

The marriage of Miss Pamela H. Overton, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. E.C. Overton of Birmingham and Tom Stoker, son of Mr. and Mrs. Melvin E. Stoker of Abilene, Texas took place on the evening of January fifth at seven- thirty in Reid Chapel at Samford University. Rev. Charles Stroud, pastor of First Baptist Church in Columbiana officiated using the double ring ceremony.

Preceding the ceremony a musical program was presented by Robert E. Lee, organist; Karen Williams, pianist; and the Samford University Chorale.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a formal gown of ivory satin featuring a Victorian neckline fashioned with an empire bodice of peau de angel lace. The traditional capped sleeves were enhanced with matching lace and the deep hemline of the skirt was accented with matching lace that encircled the chapel length train. Her lace covered Juliet cap held her lace encircled chapel length veil. She carried a bridal bouquet fashioned of glamellias, stephanotis and baby's breath.

Miss Becky Hester of Abilene, Texas was maid of honor; and bridesmaids were Miss Sharon Mitchell of Winter Park, Fla.; Mrs. Ken Stanton of Ft. Worth, Texas; Miss Martha Davis of Andalusia; and Mrs. Tom Bush of Birmingham. All wore full length gowns of emerald green crepe back satin accented with white dots and white satin collar and cuffs. Their bouquets were fashioned of sweetheart roses and white carnations.

Mr. Stoker was his son's best man. Ushers and groomsmen included: Kem Stanton of Ft. Worth, Rick Evans and Paul Blakemore of Abilene; Bill Strickland of Birmingham; and Michael Anderson of Jacksonville, Fla.

Following a brief wedding trip, the couple will live in Columbiana where Mr. Stoker is serving the First Baptist Church as Minister of Music. Both Mr. and Mrs. Stoker are students at Samford and will continue their collegiate courses.

Church adopts 1974 budget

The largest budget ever adopted by members of First Baptist Church in Columbiana, occurred on the morning of Dec. 30 immediately following the eleven o'clock worship hour at a called conference by Rev. Charles Stroud.

Hugh Sims Jr., Chairman of the Finance Committee, presented a proposed budget of $86,484. It was immediately moved for adoption, seconded, and unanimously approved.

Time for self-inventory

Crossing the threshold into 1974

By Mildred White Wallace

In all the stores I have visited this week, I have found our friendly sales people busily engaged in taking inventory of their remaining stock. So, I decided to join them and take a look through the stock in my House of Values.

Above everything, I hope to keep intact my Faith in people and things! These, above all else, I want to salvage from the days that -- at times brought disappointment and disillusionment! Without faith -- a fellow can't travel far along any path he has chosen to follow. Faith builds -- and often keeps alive the Star of Hope. Doubt destroys!

My illusions that have given glamour to the most prosaic task assigned -- I shall endeavor to maintain. Mark Twain once said: "Do not part with your illusions; when they are gone, you may exist but you cannot live"!

My dreams? I shall believe in them and am more determined than ever toward working harder to make them come true.

In my inventory bundle of "allowances" for the other fellow's rights and individualism, I shall include more tolerance and more understanding.

I shall endeavor always to keep love in my heart and treasure more conscientiously those who love me. It is they who have made my life worth living and certainly they are due every consideration.

So, with memories lingering of one of the happiest Christmas- tide's ever experienced - armed with Faith- Love and Life -- three requisites that cannot be measured in dollars and cents yet constitute a wealth that is inexhaustible and priceless -- I happily step across the threshold of 1974 right here on your Main Street and mine. Care to come along as we follow with keen personal interest and record what our own Shelby County folk are doing?

Judging from weather reports none of us earth bound people, will likely get to see Comet Kohoutek as he-she or it-puts on a spectacular pirouette across the heavens. Even if we braved the weather, J. Pluvius and his regiment of little raindrop men would likely preclude any possibility of even one little peek. Present weather prognostications are: "cloudy skies and freezing temperatures to continue through the week".

Thought for this week

It might be wise to think over these facts while you are ctiticizing some things you do not like that are happening in our country today: In free America it's a "Love it or Leave it, but in Red China and Russia, or other Captive Nations, you can't love it and you can't leave it! Here in America we have freedom of choice, while in Communist ruled nations there are neither freedoms nor choices. Then listen to that recording a Canadian made which is being widely publicized today. A timely tribute to America! We are glad this record has been made. It's about time!

Doctors reopen Harpersville clinic

The medical clinic in Harpersville is open once again, and the many persons who live in the northeastern section of Shelby County are very happy about it.

Dr. C. B. Crow, Sr., an internal medicine specialist, whose offices are in Birmingham, is heading up the clinic.

He is organizing it with a staff of five physicians and senior medical students who will practice at the clinic on a rotating basis.

Associated with Dr. Crow in the re-opening of the clinic are Dr. Joseph Connor, Charles B. Crow, III, Ed Whittington, David Hogg and Sam Hollingsworth.

J. W. Donahoo, the Mayor of Harpersville, has worked tirelessly to re-open the clinic, which was built by Harpersville citizens several years ago in an effort to attract a physician to the area.

Donahoo said the town voted to spend $15,000 of its revenue sharing money on improvements to the building this past year.

The clinic is an attractive brick building facing Highway 25 near the intersection of Highway 280.

Dr. Crow told this newspaper in an exclusive interview Saturday, "We responded to the needs of the community and the requests of the mayor in establishing the clinic."

Dr. Crow said that in the short time the clinic has been open he has found there to be a great need for medical care in the Harpersville area. He and his staff are staying very busy, he said.

He praised the hard work and enthusiasm of Mayor Donahoo and people of the community in helping to get the clinic in operation.

The interior of the building was re-painted and re-decorated. Dr. Crow contributed oil paintings from his personal collection to decorate the lobby, offices and halls of the clinic. Doors to the consultation rooms are painted in bright colors, helping give the clinic a warm atmosphere.

Basic X-ray and laboratory equipment are available to help in diagnosing illnesses and injuries.

Dr. Crow and his medical staff are assisted by a "wonderful bunch of girls," to use Dr. Crow's words.

Two Licensed Practical Nurses are on the staff: Billie Stewart of Wilsonville and May Nell Stephens of Birmingham.

Ms. Danny Green manages the clinic and serves as receptionist.

Serving as aides are Gena McGraw, Madge Williamson, Fannie McCrimon, Bobbie Brasher, Ann Bowman, Chris Thomas and Cassie Crow.

The clinic is open six days a week from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m., but a doctor is not on duty on Mondays or Fridays. However, Dr. Crow is in the process of working out schedules, and hopes that those days will soon be covered.

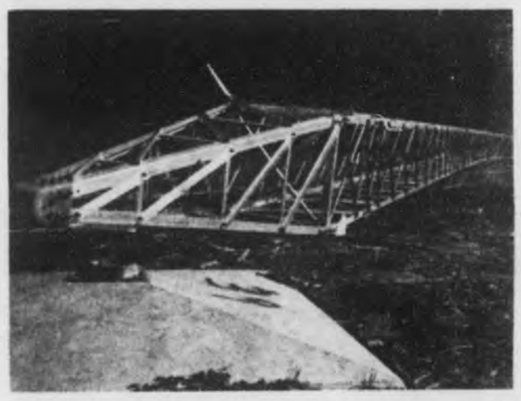
LAY LAKE DROWNING - - Members of the Harpersville and West Shelby Rescue units drag the lake bottom near Shelby Shores last Thursday in search of T.W. Colvin of Ensley. Authorities believe that Colvin drowned following a boating accident Wednesday afternoon. (Photo by Jerry Hamilton)

Lay Lake boating mishap claims life of Ensley man

A boating accident on Lay Lake last Wednesday afternoon apparently caused the death of T.W. Colvin, Sr. of Ensley. Colvin also owned a farm on the Mineral Springs Road in Chilton County.



Shelby County Sheriff C.P. "Red" Walker told the Reporter Friday that officers have determined that the death was accidental. There were no marks on the body to indicate foul play, Walker said.

Colvin is believed to have been fishing with Wilver Smitherman and Rickey Harold Smitherman in the backwaters of the Shelby Shores section of Lay Lake on Wednesday afternoon. The trio was running a troutline when the boat tipped, throwing the men into the water. The two Jemison men escaped to the bank and reported Colvin's disappearance to Jemison police Wednesday night.

The West Shelby and Harpersville rescue units were called to search for the body at noon Thursday by the Shelby County Sheriff's department. Dragging operations and an underwater search by skin divers began at 1:30 p.m. Thursday.

Sheriff Walker said that Colvin's body was found approximately 3:30 p.m. beside the troutline near the shore of the lake.

No arrests have been made in connection with the drowning.

TOPPLED TOWER - - One of the new towers put in place last month to conduct electricity between Wilsonville and Leeds lies fallen in a field near Westover. The FBI is checking into the case, suspecting malicious vandalism.

Alabaster to enforce ordinance

Signs on utility poles and on the city's right of way will be coming down in Alabaster.

The city council agreed, at its January 7 meeting, to strict enforcement of the city zoning ordinance which prohibits the placement of signs on poles and right of way.

Councilman Wayne Lucas told the Reporter that "Home for Sale" signs posted on street corner telephone poles are an example of the types of violations that are now occurring.

FBI probes fallen towers

Vandalism or sabotage are believed to be behind the destruction of six enormous electricity - conducting towers in the Westover area last week.

The towers were installed in late December to conduct electric power from Wilsonville's SEGCO plant to Leeds.

Sometime during the night of January 11, six of the towers were toppled, and company officials called in the Federal Bureau of Investigation to investigate.

The towers had been put in place with helicopters in a dramatic and difficult construction and engineering feat.

The company which was hired by the Alabama Power Company to do the work is Commonwealth Electric Company, based in Lincoln, Nebraska. Pete Harris, Commonwealth spokesman and manager of the Westover project, said that his company will vigorously prosecute anyone believed to have any connection with the vandalism.

Commonwealth is offering a reward of $1,000 for information leading to the arrest and conviction of persons in the crime.

Harris said Monday that no arrests had been made, but he said the company has some "real good leads."

Two of the downed towers are repairable. The other four towers are at least 50 percent lost, he said.

The project was scheduled for completion by the first of March, Harris said, but this action could delay the completion date.

Commonwealth is maintaining offices in Harpersville at a converted gasoline station while the company is handling the construction job.

STUDYING SHELBY COUNTY SOILS - - A group of Shelby County contractors, SCS personnel and health officials listen as Ed Lewis, (standing in truck bed) points out features of the soil on a road bank in north Shelby County. The tour was conducted to emphasize the importance of having soils information before developing land for housing and roads. The SCS performs soil studies free of charge. (USDA–SCS Photo)

In Montevallo slaying--

Court binds Bradley to county grand jury

Richard Bradley was bound over to the Shelby County grand jury after a six hour preliminary hearing last Wednesday. He will be charged with first degree murder in the death of a University of Montevallo coed, Karen Jones.

Bradley has been in the county jail since November 19 awaiting the hearing, with bond set at $50,000. He was a student at the university at the time of Miss Jones' death.

Nine witnesses called by District Attorney Harold Walden, appeared before Inferior Court Judge L. C. Payne at the hearing. They told about events of the night of November 18, when Miss Jones' body was found in an abandoned house near the university campus.

Autopsy evidence indicated Miss Jones died by strangulation. Tests of blood samples are not yet complete.

The first witness was Mrs. Saxon Adkins. She testified that Bradley appeared at the front porch of her home that evening between 7:30 and 8 p.m. He knocked on the door saying, "I'm sick, lady. Would you help me?"

He asked her to get a doctor.

Mrs. Adkins told him to sit down in a chair on the porch. She said she could not locate a doctor by telephone, so she telephoned the Montevallo city hall and asked the police to assist.

Mrs. Adkins said she asked Bradley, "Where did you come from to get to my house?"

He replied, "From the old house."

She testified that there is an abandoned house on the property some one-half mile from the home where the Adkins family lives.

Lt. James Edwards of the sheriff's department arrived at the Adkins home, followed soon afterward by Doug Jackson, chief of the university police department. Mrs. Adkins said she and her daughter assisted Bradley to Jackson's auto. She said Bradley's knees buckled under as he walked to the car.

Mrs. Adkins testified that about 10 p.m. the officers returned, and asked her how to get to the old house. She volunteered to show them the way, and rode in officer Jackson's car, which was followed by an ambulance and another automobile. At the old house, she said she saw Lt. Edwards and Officer Larry Horton of the Montevallo Police Department. Edwards thanked her for her assistance, and an officer drove her back to her home.

Lt. Edwards then was called to testify at the preliminary hearing.

He stated that Officer Jackson drove Bradley directly to Shelby Memorial Hospital, from the Adkins home because Bradley "seemed dazed, and he said he was sick and needed help." Edwards returned to city hall.

He testified that Officer Horton and Deputy Bill Davenport had prior information about a drug drop allegedly to take place at the old house on the Adkins property.

The three of them, in plain clothes, drove near the house in Horton's pickup truck, arriving there about 9:40 p.m.

Edwards said they stayed outside for some minutes, and then entered the house. They found the body of a girl dead on a mattress on the floor of the house. There were two pairs of glasses, a coat and some pills scattered on another mattress, he said.

City hall was notified. Edwards said that an ambulance soon arrived, and Larry Smitherman arrived with a camera.

Sheriff C. P. Walker was the next to take the stand. He stated that Montevallo Officer Herman Lee telephoned him and he drove to Montevallo.

On investigation, Walker said the scene appeared to be reconstructed, and that the death probably happened elsewhere. He had the body taken to the funeral home, and Robert Johnson, state toxicologist, was called in to investigate it.

Sheriff Walker drew a diagram on the courtroom chalkboard, showing the University parking lot, the old house, the Adkins home and a path from the parking lot to the old house.

The sheriff said he and Montevallo Police Chief Troy Kirkland searched the area the next day. They found marks which they thought could have been made by a body's being dragged.

Walker said that Miss Jones was dressed in blue jeans and a blouse, but one shoe was missing. The next day the lost shoe was found in the Adkins' yard.

District Attorney Walden then called Chuck Farris, a college student, to testify. Farris said that he had seen and talked with Bradley the afternoon of the 18th.

He said Bradley left the dorm about six. Around eight o'clock, Farris testified, "Two guys (students) came in and threw things around in Bradley's room." Farris said a student told him Bradley had "overdosed" and that a girl was missing.

Farris said he was interviewed by the sheriff the next afternoon.

Deputy Larry Edmondson was the next person to testify

Littleton to run in new district

Senator Obie Littleton has announced he will seek re-election in the newly created 18th Senatorial District.

The 18th Senatorial District consists of all of Chilton and Coosa Counties and most of Shelby County from the old 15th District now represented by Littleton. Added to this is a portion of Talladega County and a part of Jefferson County to make up the new 18th District.

Littleton, a Savings and Loan executive in Clanton, is now serving his first term in the Alabama Senate. He is a member of eight standing Senate Committees including Finance and Taxation, Banking, Agriculture, Conservation and Commerce.

He also serves on several House and Senate Joint Committees including the Committee Supervising Examiners of Public Accounts, Intergovernmental Cooperation and Vice Chairman of the Land Planning and Management Committee.

Known for his dedication and hard work, Littleton was selected Outstanding Senator in 1973 by the Alabama State Nurses Association.

Littleton was a resident of Calera before moving to Clanton and is widely known throughout Shelby County.

Local Boy Scout leaders are honored

Kay Snell of Valleydale Road and Robert Hume of Columbiana have received the highest awards that can be presented to volunteers by the Boy Scouts of America.

SILVER FAWN - - Mrs. Kay Snell receives a Silver Fawn award for her service to Scouting.

SILVER BEAVER - - Bob Hume is awarded the Silver Beaver award, the highest award presented to men volunteers in Scouting.

The Silver Beaver award was presented to Hume and Mrs. Snell was awarded the Silver Fawn award in special ceremonies at the 49th annual banquet of the Birmingham Area Council of the BSA held in Birmingham last Thursday.

Hume has taken an active role in scouting since 1964 upon his retirement to Columbiana from the Air Force. He has been scoutmaster of Troop 560 and every summer he has conducted extensive trips throughout the United States with his troop. In 1969 he led 198 boys from the Birmingham District to the National Jamboree in Idaho. He has led tours to the Philmont Scout Ranch and 11 of his troop members have reached the coveted Eagle rank, the highest rnak that boys can make in scouting.

Mrs. Snell has served as a den mother, coach, and round table committee woman in the Volcan District. She helps train new leaders and is cub scout chairman for the Vulcan District. Scouts have awarded her the Den mother award, the Arrow point, the Vulcan award, and the Den Coach Award before bestowing the Silver Fawn.

READY TO GO - - Bob Scott, left, manager of the Food World, and Charles Burgess, co-manager, get ready to open the new store in Pelham this week.

Pelham Plaza opens this week

The new Pelham Plaza shopping mall opens this week, adding a new dimension to the retail shopping opportunities of Shelby County residents.

Long on the drawing board to serve the increasing population of the Cahaba Valley, Helena, Pelham, Alabaster areas, the Shopping Plaza expects to attract customers from a much wider area, including Bibb and Chilton Counties.

The biggest stores in the complex are the Food World and the Big B. Other stores are opening now or in the near future to provide a major shopping center.

The project received a temporary setback early last spring when high winds of tornadic force touched down and destroyed the walls, soon after construction had started. However, construction resumed immediately and the major opening occurs this week.

Management of Food World says that they made the investment in Pelham because they are convinced the Pelham area is the area of the future.

Food World is a discount food operation that pushes a high volume, low price image. Merchandise is displayed in cut cases.

The store offers complete selection of all types of grocery, produce meat and other frozen, and canned foods.

Big B offers hardware, housewares and a variety of sporting goods and household items in addition to prescriptions and drugs.

The Four Season Boutique features women's clothing in junior and misses sizes.

County Heart Association.

In accepting the appointment, McDow said heart disease is the number one killer in the nation. He noted that "over a million Americans will die of heart attack and blood vessel diseases this year. This represents 53 percent of deaths from all causes in the country."

These statistics underscore the vital need for public support of the Heart Fund drive, he added. McDow urged local residents to give generously when the Heart volunteer calls. The goal for 1974 is $6,600.

at the preliminary hearing. He interviewed Richard Bradley at Shelby Memorial Hospital on the night of the 18th, he said, after informing him of his legal rights. Edmondson related parts of the interview to the judge.

The next witness was the dead girl's roommate, Elizabeth King, a transfer student and a sophomore at the university.

Miss King related conversations she had had with Miss Jones two weeks before she died.

Her testimony indicated that Miss Jones had dated Richard Bradley but wanted to break off the friendship.

After lunch on the day of Miss Jones' death, Miss King testified she practiced piano and returned to their room at 4:30. Miss Jones was not there. Miss King said she returned again at 8:30 and Miss Jones was not there. However, Miss King thinks that Miss Jones had been in the room between 4:30 and 8:30 because the door was locked and a window had been opened.

The hearing recessed for five minutes for private questioning of Miss King, and she was not recalled to the witness stand.

Deputy Bill Davenport corroborated previous testimony, adding that the ambulance arrived at the old house in about 10 minutes and the sheriff in about 20 minutes after being called.

Montevallo Police Chief Troy Kirkland, who moonlights as an ambulance driver, testified that he arrived at the scene in the ambulance. He said that Sheriff Walker had the city police telephone the state toxicologist. Kirkland accompanied Walker to the hospital to see Richard Bradley.

Montevallo police officer Larry Horton was the last witness called, and he corroborated testimony given by the other officers.

An unusual aspect of the case is that the Shelby County Coroner, Billy Thompson, was never notified of the death.

Bradley appeared impassive at the hearing. He frequently took notes as he listened to the testimony.

He is being represented by attorneys Roderick Beddow, Jr., of Birmingham, and Oliver Head of Columbiana.

Town buys snorkel-type fire truck

Montevallo's Volunteer Fire Department will be the first unit in Shelby County tobe equipped with a snorkel-type fire fighting- rescue vehicle.

A purchase order was issued Tuesday morning for the purchase of the new highly versatile vehicle that combines fire fighting and rescue capabilities.

The city awarded the contract to build the vehicle to the Snorkel Fire Equipment Company of st. Joseph, Missouri and to the Harry Harless Company of Birmingham.

The two firms were the low bidders on the equipment. Also bidding were American LaFrance Company and Mack Trucks, Incorporated.

Bids were received by the city of Montevallo on December 17. This week's purchase order specifies a price of $87,890.

The contract calls for delivery in approximately 390 calendar days.

The vehicle's outstanding feature is a 55 foot fully articulating elevated platform of "snorkel". The platform is equipped with permanent hoses and a variety of rescue facilities. It is capable of rescue operations from a four story building.

The vehicle also incorporates a standard pumper fire fighting unit.

The equipment is mounted on a Ford tilt-cab chassis and will be powered by a Caterpillar diesel engine.

In related action during Monday night's meeting members of the council rejected all bids on a proposed fire station building.

Bids had been submitted by the Butler construction Company, Thompson Engineers and the Carlos Reese Company.

Members of the city's police and fire committee are studying plans that will permit the city to function as a general contractor. Site preparation for the new fire station is nearly complete, according to Grady Parker, councilman and chairman of the police and fire committee.

In other action Monday night, Montevallo's council authorized Mayor Sears to sign a formal contract with the city of Wilton which will provide fire protection to Wilton but at the same time will indemify the city of Montevallo in case of liability charges.

Montevallo's city clerk, Kenneth Bailey was instructed to seek bids on a medium size passenger car for joint use by the water and gas departments as well as general city use.

On highway 31--

Traffic light needed for Indian Springs

The time has probably come to install a traffic light at the intersection of Highway 31 and the Cahaba Valley Road (Indian Springs Road).

For many years it has been difficult to turn left from Cahaba Valley Road onto Highway 31. Traffic comes down the hill from the direction of Valley School at a fast speed and at peak travel periods, there is almost a steady stream of traffic.

Turning right onto Highway 31 is easier, because the driver has to wait for a break in only one lane of traffic instead of two.

Even with the fuel crisis and the reduced speed limits, this writer did not notice any appreciable improvement in the traffic situation at this intersection one evening two weeks ago when trying to turn left onto 31.

Drivers on Highway 31 understandably do not want any more barriers to their open highway, and already complain about lights at Valleydale. Old timers remember with fondness when they could whip into Birmingham without any of the lights or traffic problems that Hoover and Vestavia have caused them on Highway 31.

But with the relentless march of homes and population into Shelby County, traffic problems are bound to increase. The worst of it is that school buses are on the roads at the same time of day as most of the business commuters. The Cahaba Valley Road intersection is so busy that buses must wait and wait for a break in the traffic, with children standing and tempers growing short.

Mrs. Chester L. Gault, Sr., is trying to interest the state highway department in putting a traffic light there, and has written Representative Tom Stubbs, asking that he assist. Mrs. Gault's two sons, Chester and Glen, both drive school buses on the route. She says that the situation is even more dangerous now that Daylight Saving Time has gone back into effect.

Perhaps a compromise could be arranged, with lights functioning at this intersection only during the busiest hours of the day.

But we would hope the highway department will seriously study the situation. Traffic lights are one of the prices we pay for growth and prosperity. Even though they can be an annoyance, they certainly save lives and provide for orderly traffic flow.

I-65 INTERCHANGE FROM THE AIR - - A bird's eye view of the work underway to extend I-65 north of Highway 31 at Alabaster is captured by Shelby County Reporter photographer Jerry Hamilton as he flew over the area Sunday afternoon. Traffic is temporarily detoured to allow for construction work. At left, a truck heads into Alabaster from I-65. At right, Highway 31 travelers must temporarily make a detour.

GROUND LEVEL VIEW - - Parts of Highway 31 were taken out to build the Interstate highway across the old roadbed. When all the work is completed, travelers on Highway 31 from Saginaw to Alabaster will go over the Interstate by bridge at this point. Camera is pointed toward Alabaster.

Baby's love and affection should come before housework

By Doris Davis

"Getcha Getcha Goo!" Mother says as she walks her fingers from baby's tippy toes up his leg and tummy to his chinny chin chin. Baby's eyes sparkle. He spreads his mouth into a great big grin. He throws his head back and laughs out loud - - a fresh new innocent unassuming laugh. Mother thinks, "How lazy I am to sit here playing with the baby when I should be washing dishes or folding clothes."

Many mothers regard the time spent playing with their babies as time taken away from household duties and feel guilty about it. Although playing with the baby is relaxing and enjoyable it should not be considered lightly. It is as necessary to the child's normal growth and development as proper diet and cleanliness.

In this century a well-known study was made of institutionalized infants by Spitz. An unusual number of the group of infants died and most of the others were retarded physically and emotionally. He concluded that the absence of normal maternal care often retards an infant's development.

Much emphasis is placed on the importance of proper feeding and bathing of infants. This is as it should be, but infants also need the nourishment of a soft loving voice, a gentle hug, a reassuring hand and a familiar smile.

Babies have been known to respond to their mother's voice at three weeks by turning their head in the direction of the voice. As early as six weeks some infants will return a smile. This budding personality can be nurtured and developed into a happy baby with a ready smile, or the baby can be left unattended except in physical needs to struggle and develop the best it can alone.

Compared with before a baby arrives, the work load is greatly increased for a new mother. She will undoubtedly have to put off some things or let them go undone in order to give the baby all the attention he needs to grow and develop properly. This care should be given without fear of spoiling the baby. A spoiled child is one who is not disciplined rather than one who is cuddled, played with and loved.

She can talk to the baby while feeding him, bathing him, and changing his diaper. If she enjoys doing these little chores for the baby and smiles while she works she will smile his thanks many many times.

But she should make it a point each day to spend some time with the baby when she is his alone, just to play and talk to him and hold and cuddle and squeeze him. The baby will respond. He'll smile and laugh and beg for more because he loves his mother's voice, smile and touch.

It doesn't matter if the dishes get stacked or she has to go to the ironing board every time she needs clothes to wear. These things will be with her as long as she lives. The most important thing right now is the baby. He will grow up and be gone one of these days.

So lay down in the floor with him and crawl with him and play peek-a-boo and This Little Piggy and all the little things babies love and adults think silly. It will give him a good strong emotional background on which to build the rest of his life.

Daylight time is too dark in winter

By Fred Cooper

Dark is coming early these days.

I'm referring, of course, to Daylight Savings Time, the newest in our gifts from Washington to make our lives better.

DST was fine during the summer when it allowed me to sit out on the lawn or stagger around on the tennis court in the sunshine an hour more each day. I didn't have to get up at night then.

This is a curious feeling, to wake up, go through my Getting Ready To Go To Work ritual that I established in the Air Force, then open the door and face darkness.

My system is not strong enough at that hour of the morning to accept this.

There are other problems, too.

Who knows, for instance, what might be lurking behind the Dempsey Dumpster, waiting to pounce on me as I make my foggy way to my car?

How do I explain to my bewildered body that I'm not taking it to work at 4 a.m. but rather at the normal time that I have always dragged it out of bed and insisted that it start functioning?

How did I manage to forget that I was on my way to work and ended up halfway to my girl friend's house the other morning? Was it because she lives on the same route I take to my job and since it was dark, I thought it was night time and I was on my way to a date?

Could be.

"Good morning" is also not in vogue these days.

That greeting will invariably get you a snarled, "What's so good about it?" from a bleary-eyed co-worker.

One fellow I know comes in to his office, sits down at his desk, and begins filling out a card claiming overtime. He says every time he looks out the window and sees the darkness, he thinks he's working late.

There is an advantage to all of this, however. For years, I've listened to early risers talk about how wonderful it is to watch the sun come up. I've never been interested enough in this particular phenomenon to get up in the night to enjoy it, however, Now I do it and get paid for it.

I've also been banned from the clerical division office for telling them this in an effort to cheer them up.

I'm sure I'll be tired of all this nonsense of going out into the night in order to get to my job pretty soon, but right now, I've got plans for tomorrow morning.

I'm going to look for the comet Kohoutek. I can probably see it driving to work. It'll be dark enough.

Politicians waiting for Albert Brewer

By Don Wasson

All over the state, would be politicians and politicians who want to keep on playing the game, are "Waiting on Albert."

That simply means that a number of people are not going to make their determination about this year's political races until former Gov. Albert Brewer decides whether or not he'll make a race this year.

There isn't much chance that Brewer will take on George Wallace again in the governor's race. Several people have had polls made and they all seem to show that Wallace is going to win. But Brewer's delay in announcing his intentions just might be linked to the current Montgomery County investigation of a Highway Department scandal.

Should that investigation come up with an indictment of Gerald Wallace, the governor's brother, who has been investigated in connection with the case, then Brewer might consider a race against Wallace.

But his probable course, if he runs at all, will be for lieutenant governor. At least two legislators - Sen. Bob Wilson of Jasper and Rep. Bert Bank of Tuscaloosa - are awaiting the Brewer decision.

But both of them know what polls have shown, that Brewer would easily defeat incumbent Lt. Gov. Jere Beasley while their own chances of knocking off Beasley are problematical.

The Brewer decision will also have an influence on some other people. Several members of the Senate have said that they don t want to take part in another Senate session with Beasley in the chair.

Should Brewer decide to run, that would be another matter and people like Jimmy Clark of Barbour, who has said he is hanging up his Senate track shoes, just might get back in the thing.

Beasley has said that in 1975, his three cronies in the 1971-74 term, Senators Joe Fine of Russellville, Crum Foshee of Red Level and Obie Littleton of Clanton, will "control" the Senate.

And Gov. George Wallace is aware of the fact that if Beasley wins this time, then all committee chairmanships will go to Beasley choices. In the current session, Beasley bowed to the governor's selections of Wilson as chairman of Finance and Taxation, Clark as chairman of Rules and Pierre Pelham as chairman of Constitutions and Elections.

But the lieutenant governor does not have to listen to the governor at all and this time he won't.

Wallace has told close confidantes that he knows Beasley will be difficult to deal with if he is re-elected. Beasley used the power of his chair to hamstring a number of administration measures in the past two legislative years and Wallace is not forgetting.

The governor knows, too, that Albert Brewer is possibly the only man in the state who could beat Beasley and he is willing to forget his differences with Brewer in the 1970 race. It is not likely that the governor will give Brewer an open endorsement, but his tacit approval of Brewer as lieutenant governor would be more than enough to assure Brewer's election.

The question is, then, "Is Brewer willing to forget his differences with Wallace in 1970?" He was easily the one with the most to forget, since Wallace promised he would not run for governor and then qualified at the last moment.

Bonanza for Oil Barons

by Jack Anderson

(Copyright, 1974, by United Feature Syndicate, Inc.)

WASHINGTON — The federal energy office has announced an investigation into oil profits.

Rather than wait for the results, we have conducted our own investigation. We have talked to sources inside the big oil companies and managed to obtain corporate papers which were never intended to be read outside the executive suites. Here are our findings:

The oil companies definitely have squeezed higher profits for themselves from the oil shortage. For example, the Persian Gulf countries have increased their oil income by doubling the taxes and royalties from three dollars to seven dollars a barrel.

The oil companies, however, are permitted to charge off these payments, dollar for dollar, against their U.S. taxes. Then the companies add the foreign tax to the price of the oil. In other words, the consumers really pay the overseas tax increase, but the companies take credit for it on their U.S. returns.

The oil companies have also used the shortage as an excuse to cut back some of the products that aren't too profitable. The oil industry produces around 3,000 products, some of them vital to other industries. Now oil companies are channeling the available oil into the products that make the most money for themselves.

The majors are also closing their less profitable gas stations and putting the squeeze on independently-owned stations. This means the oil shortage will wind up increasing the profits that the big companies get from their retail outlets.

So far, the oil shortage has been a bonanza for most companies. Only their customers are hurting.

Crack in Latin Left: The overthrow of Salvador Allende's Marxist regime in Chile has thrown the leftist movement throughout Latin America into a tizzy.

Secret intelligence reports quote Cuba's Fidel Castro as calling Allende a weakling and blaming his timid leadership for the downfall of Marxism in Chile. Allende's failure, Castro has said, only confirms his own convictions that a Marxist revolution is impossible without mass mobilization and a complete crack-down on the opposition.

Meal Site Six is the local program utilizing the National Guard Armory in Calera.

Mrs. Popwell told the Reporter Tuesday afternoon of this week that the Calera center provides luncheons on Wednesdays, Thursdays and Fridays.

Persons from Montevallo, Calera and Wilton are scheduled for Wednesdays. Thursdays are set aside for residents of Alabaster, Siluria and surrounding areas. Fridays are devoted to persons from the Pelham area.

Mrs. Popwell indicated that a different diet is planned each day and participants have a choice of meats, two vegetables, dessert, rolls, coffee, tea and soup.

The local council has acquired the services of a bus designed to pick up participants at their own homes and return them to their homes after the meal and social hour is complete.

There is no charge for the transportation or the luncheons.

The program is a project of the Birmingham Regional Planning Commission.

Shelby Countians serving on the Meal Site Six council include: Mrs. Popwell, chairman; Miss Linda Samons, Calera, secretary; and council members N.K. Blankenship and Omie Hart, Calera; W.R. Kendrick, Bessie Kendrick, Eric Stipe and Rev. Rogers White, Montevallo; Sam Carmichael, Alabaster.

Persons desiring bus service may contact Mrs. Popwell at 668-2377.

UM infirmary gets $4913 share

The infirmary at the University of Montevallo will be $4,913.30 richer in the final settlement of the state's anti-trust suit against several American drug companies.

Attorney General Bill Baxley announced this week that final settlement has been reached in the state's suit against the drug companies. A total of more than a quarter of a million dollars will be recovered for all the state's medical institutions, he said.

Baxley stated that the anti-trust suit charged the drug companies with price fixing that resulted in overcharges to several of the state medical institutions.

The companies sued by the state were: Chas. Pfizer and Company, Inc., American Cyanamid Company, Briston-Myers Company, Olin Mathieson Chemical Corporation and the UpJohn Company.

The suit by the state claimed that the defendants had violated the anti-trust laws in the manufacture and sale of broad spectrum antibiotic products, such as tetracycline.

Attorney General Baxley stated that his office will "continue to file whatever actions are necessary to protect state institutions against corrupt big business activities."

Alabaster court session deals with 41 new cases

The City of Alabaster held its bi-monthly court session last Tuesday, January 8. Mrs. Andrea Burgess, Alabaster court clerk, furnished the Reporter with the following breakdowns of cases appearing before the municipal court.

Forty-one new cases, 17 old cases, and 27 alias cases were considered by the court. Of these, 15 were paid, seven were nol prossed, 20 were continued, and 16 new alias warrants were issued. The 27 old aliases were still outstanding.

Columbiana stop signs need to be removed

Open letter to the Columbiana Town Council:

The time has long since passed to remove that idiotic four way stop at North Main and Sterrett street BEFORE a tragic accident occurs. In the first place all that is needed is either a caution light or a 25 MPH speed limit on Main, enforced, and the stop, naturally, on Sterrett, the side street.

I have witnessed many vehicles, usually, out-of-town cars, boat trailers, etc. pass right through this unnceessary stop. These people are from cities and towns that evidently have no such unnecessary four way stops in a pure residential section and unexpectedly roll right on before they know it.

The almost tragic accident occured before daylight, Jan. 6th when a car from Shelby was wrecked in stopping on a wet street and to avoid another car entering from the side street which did NOT stop. The other car driver when seeing this car wreck, turned the corner and left the scene.

All of this because of the federal, un-necessary winter time Daylight Savings Time and this asinine four way stop. Now, that the highway 25 by-pass requires traffic on Main to stop, the four way stop should be removed and the local children taught and required not to play in the street.

In beat 12 election--

Pro-zoners explain views

To zone or not to zone? Shelby County is one of the few counties in Alabama with a law that will allow citizens in each beat to vote on whether or not to have zoning.

The fifth election on the subject will be held Saturday in a Shelby County beat.

Two times Beat 21 between Montevallo and Siluria has held elections on the subject, and two times Beat 12 in northwest Shelby County has held elections.

On all occasions the voters of the beats have voted down zoning, and the arguments both pro and con have continued to be the same.

A story on the anti-zoning point of view appears in this week's issue.

To present both sides, the Reporter also contacted spokesmen for the pro-zoning arguments and presents these arguments in brief.

Those who favor zoning (in any beat, not just Beat 12) say that zoning will protect land values from the decrease that comes from the inconsistent use of land.

Without zoning there is no protection when a neighbor puts his land to bad use, such as an auto junkyard, a honky tonk, or an all night recreation center.

If ownership is static, zoning is not needed, the pro-zoners say. But when ownership is changing, a real danger arises. In Beat 12, the argument goes, there are now about 10,000 people. Within ten years, 50-60,000 people are expected, with the vast new housing developments already planned for the area. The pro-zoners says that this could mean helter - skelter growth. Once inconsistent use of land comes into being, you cannot zone it out, they say.

The increased traffic flow expected within a few years in the north Shelby County area is another argument the pro-zoners advance. They point out that Oak Mountain Park will open this spring and generate tremendous traffic. I-65 will be completed through the valley in three years. An interstate southern bypass around Birmingham will add further traffic to the area when it is completed.

The argument here says that traffic generates commercial development and that without zoning Cahaba Valley Road and Valleydale Road will become commercial strips.

The pro-zoners point to the area between Bessemer and Birmingham as an unusual mixture that arose because of no zoning controls.

Those who favor zoning say that if zoning is passed on Jan. 19, a year of land use study will follow to give the people of Beat 12 the opportunity to help plan how they would like their community to be.

500 request exemptions

Over 500 persons had applied for exemption from Shelby County property taxes by December 31, according to Tax Assessor Tommy Snowden.

Persons over 65 or disabled persons with an income of less than $5,000 per year are eligible for the exemption on their homesteads.

Snowden said that some people will no longer have to pay any property taxes because of the exemption.

Persons who may be eligible but who did not file in time for this year's tax reporting, may file applications beginning October 1, for the next tax year, Snowden said.

County's ABC license inspector makes rounds of 84 retailers

Shelby County has its own ABC license inspector, but not enough people seem to be aware of it.

Robert E. Woods, who has been on the job since the county voted wet, complains that he isn't getting enough complaints.

He smilingly told the Reporter in an interview this week that his telephone doesn't ring very often, and he asked if the Reporter would help him publicize his office hours.

Woods' job, as the state Alcoholic Beverage Control license inspector in the county, is to check regularly on all business establishments and individuals who hold licenses to sell beer or liquor by the drink. He sees at least 20 of them a day, to be sure they are observing the laws.

The county now has 84 licensees, so he gets around to all of them every week.

One license has been revoked, and some licenses have been suspended for violations since the legal sales began in Shelby County, Woods said. But on the whole, he thinks the licensees have had a good record of observing the law.

He keeps a watchful eye out for licensees who are suspected of selling to minors. Another violation he watches for is selling after legal hours.

Occasionally, a complaint is called in to the Birmingham office of the ABC Board, because people do not know where to reach Woods.

The county provides office space for him, but because offices in the courthouse were already filled, the county rents space in the Columbiana city hall. Woods has been based there for the past several months, and wishes more people knew about it.

However, since he is on the road so much of the time, his hours in the office are limited.

He told the Reporter he would welcome any and all telephone calls or office visits from persons who wish to report a violation or suspected violation of the licensing laws.

He is in the office on the following schedule:

Mondays and Tuesdays, 8-10 a.m. and 4-5 p.m.

Fridays and Saturdays, 3-4 p.m.

Sundays, 11 a.m. to 1 p.m.

The telephone number is 669-6448.

Marriage rate climbs; but so does divorce

Shelby Countians bought 16 more marriage licenses in 1973 than they bought in 1972, but at the same time there were 13 more divorces in 1973 than in the previous year.

Records in the courthouse show a total of 490 marriage licenses issued in 1973 and a record number of 184 divorces.

In 1972, the number of marriage licenses issued in Shelby County reached 474, with the number of divorces at 171.

In 1971, there were 464 marriages and 155 divorces.

The year 1970 showed 445 marriages with 134 divorces, and 1969 records in Shelby County listed 450 marriages and 126 divorces.

Around the county

A county-wide meeting on the subject of garbage pickup will be held on Friday, January 25, according to Mrs. Sandra Button.

The meeting is sponsored by the Indian Springs Civic Club. It will be held at the Town Hall of Indian Springs School on Cahaba Valley Road. The time set for beginning the meeting is 7:30 p.m.

In Beat 12- -

Group says 'No' to zoning

The battle over zoning Beat is shaping up in the final ek prior to the January 19 ction. The opposition to the ning plan has organized their ategy in hopes of defeating ning in the beat for the third ne. A special anti - zoning eeting was held at the home Bill Caldwell on Thursday ght, January 10.

Cecil F. Adams, chairman of e group, said the meeting was mposed of concerned tizens of Beat 12 who thered to discuss the sadvantages as well as lvantages of the proposed ning plan.

"We think the majority of ose who moved here from fferson County did so to cape zoning," stated Bill aldwell. We know what oning can do to a ighborhood." He and Adams inted out that the zoning nendment had struck out vice in the beat, and that ose favoring it might entually score a "home run." dams added, "But we don't ink they will this time."

Newer residents have joined rces with the longtime valley ltives to keep the valleys of eat 12 as they are. "We love elby County and feel it ould stay much as it is," mmented one citizen." "We on't want Birmingham down ere."

Several people at the eeting stated that Beat 12 did ot need zoning to make the ighborhoods more attractive, nce the property owners had enough pride to keep their homes and lands beautiful. Caldwell told the Reporter that he had ridden up and down the roads of Beat 12 a few days before, and had seen not one eyesore to compare with ones seen in several zoned areas of Jefferson County. Some residents at the meeting indicated that their love of the land made such additional zoning restrictions unnecessary.

Mrs. Virginia Dunaway explained it this way: "My son will be the fourth generation of our family on this land. We're here to stay and we don't plan to move. I'm proud of the land left to me." Chairman Adams added, "We don't want to be chased out."

Housing quality was another point of interest to the group. Carl Street indicated that people build their homes however they want to when the land is unzoned. He continued that with zoning, contractors will probably build houses which may or may not be built as well as those built by the owners. Another property owner stated that house size will not be controlled by zoning regulations, and that the size of houses is an area many of them feel zoning should cover.

Another area of concern was the proposed regulations for mobile homes, which many feel are discriminatory toward young marrieds and retirees. Caldwell pointed out that many young couples place their house trailer on their land until they can afford to build a house there. The zoning plan would limit mobile homes to only certain areas of the beat and perhaps upset the future plans of many couples, he said. He added that if his house burned, he could not install a temporary house trailer on his land under zoning. Zoning rules would not permit him to locate the trailer on his own land until he could build a new house there, in such an eventuality.

Mrs. Elizabeth Daniel is an outspoken critic of the zoning plan. She told the Reporter that the main reason she opposed it was that the election is not a vote for a zoning plan as such, but rather a yes - or - no proposition concerning Amendment 816 giving the Planning Commission authority over the beat. She stated that "If the beat is going to be zoned, people from Beat 12 should do the zoning." She added that the planning commission members should be elected rather than appointed.

Quite a number of people at the meeting were upset by outside interference. Some said that it appeared that some public officials outside of Beat 12 were pushing to impose zoning against the wishes of what they felt was the majority of the beat's voters. There was apparent resentment against the whole county trying to tell one part how to vote, especially those "who didn't own a spadeful of land in Beat 12."

A further meeting is scheduled for those who oppose the zoning measure. However, the meeting on Tuesday night, January 15 coincides with this newspaper's press deadline, making it impossible to cover prior to the election.

The January 19 election is set for 8:00 a.m. to 6:00 p.m. at the New Hope Cumberland Presbyterian Church fellowship hall.

Helena-Bessemer road to be improved

Improvement of one of the few truly hazardous stretches of heavily travelled county highways left in Shelby County moved one step closer when state and county engineers met with the contractor in an important pre-construction conference on Tuesday.

Scheduled for improvement is a section of county highway 52 between Helena and Bessemer which is considered very dangerous.

Sharp curves and very narrow bridges have caused numerous wrecks. The present roadway follows a path that developed in-horse and buggy days and has long been a bottleneck for traffic between Montevallo, Helena and Bessemer.

The complicated 24 item contract was awarded to Henderson Excavating Co. for $161,125.30 at a recent bid opening. The job is to be completed in 90 working days.

The improvement culminates a long effort by the Shelby County Commission and James L. Ray, Jr., director of the Department of PUblic Works. By taking advantage of all available federal and state aid, the county will contribute only $25,000 to this project.

City Rec team leads cagers

The City Recreation Center team now leads the Columbiana City basketball league. City Rec is followed by the Over-the Hill Gang and SEGCO in second and third places. McDow and Kiwanis are tied in the bottom position.

In last week's city league action, City Rec downed McDow 69-40 and the Gang defeated SEGCO 68-54.

M. Brasher and L. Doughty led City Rec's scoring with 12 and 11 points apiece while Conrad Fowler, Jr. scored 16 points and Billy Mitchell made 13 points for McDow.

In the other game, L. Avery and Harris both scored 16 points for the Gang. Jerry Scoffield scored 16 points and Tim Brown scored 14 points for SEGCO.

Two weeks ago Kiwanis downed McDow 85-58 and City Rec defeated SEGCO 73-45.

Naishes close in Helena after 40 years

FAVORITE GROCERY CLOSES - - A familiar Helena landmark, the Naish Big Saver, once called the Helena Cash Store, closes its doors this week after 40 years of service. (Reporter photo by Willard Harrison)

The end of an era - - that's what it seems now that Floyd and Luther Naish are closing their grocery store in Helena. After forty years of serving the people of Shelby County, Floyd Naish says that it's time to call it quits.

The Helena Cash Store, later Naish Big Saver, is without a doubt one of the most memorable landmarks still standing in Helena. It is about the only remaining building in the old storefront row on the town main street. The two businesses adjoining the store help make up what was once called the Hayes-Bowden Building, say the Naish brothers.

The Naish boys went into the store business during the middle of 1933, not long after a killer tornado had ripped through Helena. Floyd Naish told us that they began their store in the ground floor of the old Oddfellows Hall located next to today's post office. When they began, they didn't even sell any kind of fresh meat. Luther describes it as "just an old country store," with the open barrels of rice, flour, crackers, beans, and peas; the traditional pot-belly stove was present in their store also.

Floyd told the Reporter that they moved the store from the original building to its present location in the Hayes-Bowden Building. For the first few years there, they rented the building from the G.G. Mullins family. They bought it in 1938, and have been in the same location ever since.

Floyd says that the grocery business has really changed since those days. Their store had the first telephone in Helena, and they joined with the one phone owner in Pelham and the one in Alabaster to form the first telephone exchange in the county. The Naishes were also instrumental in having the Birmingham telephone coverage area extended into Shelby County. Floyd Naish said that they went from one of the smallest phone exchanges to the biggest local-call coverage area in the country.

Luther states that he is quite happy that they no longer have to sack up sugar, coffee, and nearly everything else as they once did. He added that it is much more efficient in these days to sell coffee that is already ground. The Naish brothers related that they sold nearly everything imaginable in the days when there were only about a hundred different items available to sell. Floyd added that they have sold dry goods, hardware, feed and seed, and even fuel oil besides just selling groceries.

The store has seen several expansions during its forty years of business. When Floyd got out of the army in 1946, they remodeled the interior of the store, taking out the old counters that were stacked with items and replacing them with shelves. A few years ago they knocked out a partition to a back room, extending the store all the way to the back of the building. Floyd says that they were really growing too big for the space they had, and that if they were to stay in business for several more years they would be crowded for room.

The biggest change for the store was when the Naishes joined the Big Saver store chain in the 1960's. Floyd says that the chain store co-op was the best thing that happened to their business, changing it from a country store to a profitable supermarket. Floyd says that they have had up to five employees working at one time in the store.

According to Floyd Naish, the changes seen in the past forty years will be nothing compared to what will happen to the grocery in the near future. While his store has been dwarfed by ultra-modern giant food stores, he feels that even they will soon be old-fashioned. The next phase in supermarkets, says Naish, will be huge stores the size of several city blocks, with drive-in aisles through the store. He adds that it no longer is percentage that makes money for a grocer, but a huge volume of business which makes up for the old ways of making profit.

What will the Naishes do now that they're leaving the store business? "Oh, we'll rest a couple of months and spend some time with the family," answers Floyd. Asked if there is a chance that he might go back to work, Floyd indicated that he has no plans at present. Now that he and his brother have left the business, they can spend time away from the responsibilities of the store. Floyd says that he and Luther plan to do some work around their houses located next to each other in Helena.

Floyd adds that "The Naish brothers are grateful for all the people who have been a help to us over the years. We have had a wonderful business, and I don't believe that anyone has ever had nicer customers."

Calera chapel becomes North Side Baptist Church

A new Baptist Church in Calera was officially organized on January 6, when the North Side Baptist Chapel became the North Side Baptist Church.

Started three years ago as a mission of the Calera Baptist Church, the new church has an enrollment of 69 in the Sunday School and 49 on the charter membership roll.

Shelton Reeves was called to be pastor of the new church. At the ceremonies on January 6, Rev. John Duncan delivered the sermon.

The history of the church began on December 6, 1970, when a group of nine workers from Calera Baptist Church began a Sunday School, training union and worship services.

The nine who spearheaded the mission effort were Mr. and Mrs. Curtis Cofer, Mrs. Betty Alverson, Mrs. Burnice Glass, Mrs. Jennie Johnson, Mr. Bryce Cobb, Mr. Joe Middlebrook and Rev. and Mrs. Shelton Reeves. All of these workers, except Mrs. Johnson, are still working at North Side.

North Side gives 10 percent of income to world missions through the cooperative program and two percent to associational missions.

Mrs. Lamont Franklin, of the Calera Baptist Church, has served as chairman of the missions committee.

Howard Golden is pastor of Calera Baptist Church.

F. D. Elliott appointed new bailiff

F.D. Elliott of Helena has been named bailiff to Circuit judge James H. Sharbutt. He assumed his duties in December.

Elliott resigned his position as license inspector of Shelby County to accept the new position.

The new bailiff's position was created by a special local act of the legislature in last summer's legislative session.

Elliott has long been active in Shelby County Democratic Party politics.

Commission votes to buy grader

The Shelby County Commission discussed bids on motor graders for over an hour Monday before agreeing to buy Huber grader from Joe Loney Machinery Company for $27,999. Two other bids were higher, but considerable discussion centered on the relative cost of maintainance of other brands. Commissioners E. Bearden, I.D. Stone and Synder Henry voted to buy the Huber machine with Hoyt Malock dissenting.

J.S. Macpherson, assistant director of the Bureau of Food Assistance, appeared before the Commission outlining plans for the Food Stamp program which will replace the county's commodity program.

The firm of Heery, Grove and Haack, architects of Atlanta, gave a two hour presentation on construction of jails and detention facilities to the Commissioners.

The meeting did not adjourn until after 6 p.m.

Airport will become second largest in Birmingham area

By Willard Harrison

"The Shelby County Airport will be the second biggest airport in the Birmingham area within the next few years," W.J. "Hank" Spires, told the Alabaster Rotary club in a speech on January 10. Spires is president of Gulf Aviation, the fixed base operator of the Shelby County airport.

Spires told the Rotarians that the airfield already does everything now done at the Birmingham municipal airport, but to a lesser degree. He described the 20-yard study now underway which will give a picture of what the county facility will be in the next two decades.

The 20-year study is being carried out by Delta Associates, backed by federal, state, and county funds. Spires stated that the study will operate in four phases during the twenty- year period. Phase One was the initial study of the requirements necessary to begin the airport, including the services and growth potential of such a facility. At this stage it was determined that within the twenty years, the county airport near Alabaster would be second only to the Birmingham airfield in the total metropolitan area.

Phase Two involved the construction of the presently existing structures and field at the airport, and the institution of the services such as gassing, renting, dispatching, sales, and maintenance of the airplanes at the port. Under Phase Two the airport began to take in the overflow from Birmingham.

Spires stated that the Shelby County airport is now operating under Phase Three, a period of additional planning. Under this part of the study, Delta Associates is determining what else is needed to expand the airport to meet its future requirements. In order for it to be able to handle jets plus heavier traffic, an additional 1,200 feet of runway is needed, the study indicates. The present 3,800 foot airstrip enables the airport to land nearly any plant; yet this length is too short to safely get the larger planes back into the air.

In addition to a longer runway, more hangars are needed to house the planes based at the airport. Spires commented that the airport would make much greater profit from the bigger planes since they use more fuel. At present the field is doing little more than breaking even, said Spires. Delta has told him that in a short time they can determine where to build hangars and additional structures. The work can begin almost immediately after their recommendations are in. He added that at present the main thing holding up such construction is the completion of the master plan for the airport's expansion. With more hangar space, twelve big planes could be housed on the premises, Spires added.

The final phase will wrap up the plans on the drawing board, with finanical planning, and a public hearing as required by law. The state and county will follow the lead of the Federal Aviation Authority as it approves the plans, sets up requirements, and provides the bulk of the funds.

Spires predicts a big future for the county airport. There is no other spot around the Birmingham area capable of handling the excess air traffic from the municipal airport. The present growth rate of the Shelby County airfield, coupled with its easy access from I–59, makes it the only possible one to handle the expected overflow, according to Mr. Spires. He states that by 1980 to 1983, Interstate 459 will be approaching the Bessemer airport, enabling it to take in some of the extra air traffic anticipated.

Short-range plans for the airport include an expansion of the present air taxi service for charter flights. Spires said that this area will receive his special attention. Also he stated that according to present plans, the Birmingham airport will no longer handle student flying after 1975. As the city airport becomes more sophisticated and ultra- modern, many of its lesser functions, like flying lessons, will have to move to the Shelby County airport. Since it already is involved with all of these areas of service, the resulting expansion from Birmingham will fit into the current plans.

Spires concluded his speech to the Rotary Club with a question and answer period concerning the airport.

In further club business, officer nominations were discussed, as well as plans to send incoming president Garland Horton to the national Rotary convention in Minneapolis.

Current president of the club Paul Adamson, Jr., also mentioned plans for a club dove shoot on the weekend.

NEW MILKING PARLOR - - These cows don't seem to notice the activity going on around them as carpenters hammer away at the new milking parlor on the Tolleson dairy. Most of the Tolleson dairy cattle have been shipped to surrounding farms since the May 27 tornado distroyed the dairys milking equipment. (Photos by Rick Moore)

The third article in a series--

Tollesons rebuild after May 27 tornado

A story appeared in the June 14, 1973, issue of the Shelby County Reporter telling the story of the S.L. Tolleson family of Rt 2 Calera, and how that group was then braving the aftermath of the May 27 tornado disaster.

Mr. Tolleson was injured by flying debris as he attempted to run from his house to the safety of an underpass in the road running past their place. Mrs. Tolleson and three children hid in an open ditch as the twister passed over them.

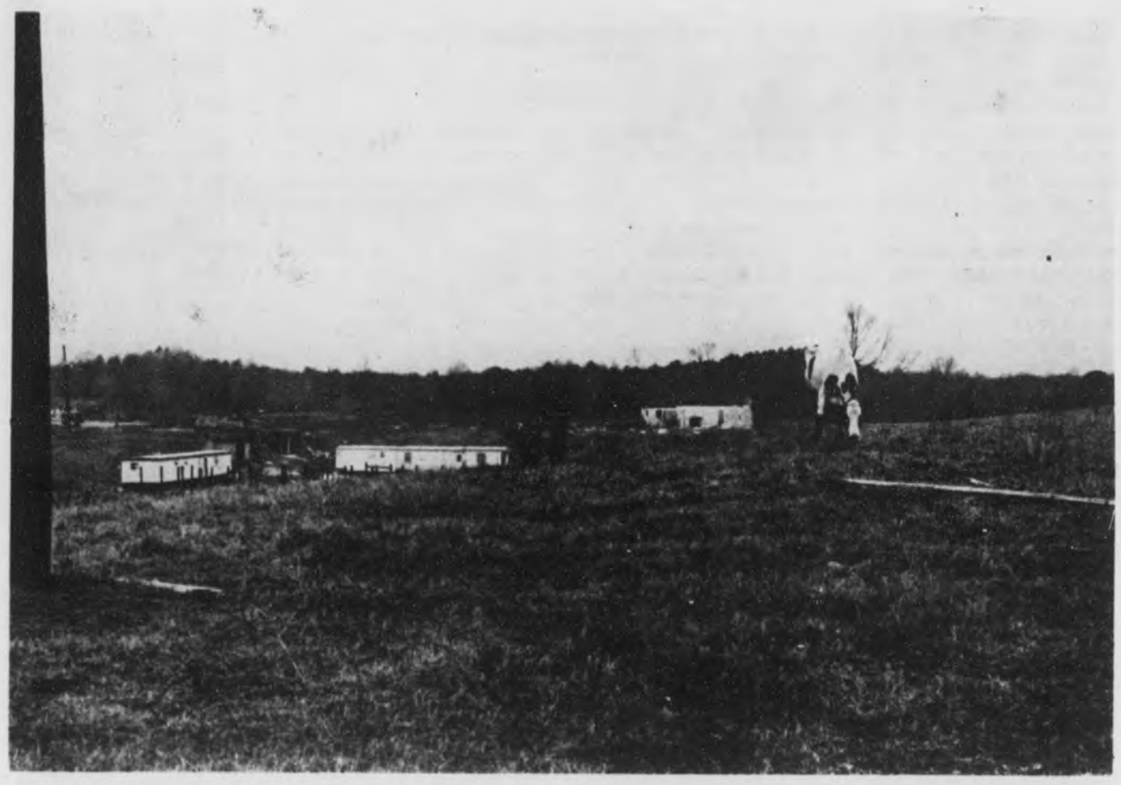
The Tollesons, who owned a large dairy on county road 42, found their farm completely wrecked by the violent windstorm. In all, six houses, two barns, a milk tank, a feed tank, a cattle trailer, and all their milking equipment were destroyed.

Family members salvaged what they could from their collapsed home and temporarily moved into an unused tenant dwelling.

This week, now seven months after the disaster, the Reporter talked with Mrs. Tolleson about the progress of rebuilding operations on the dairy.

Already there is a noticeable change from the highway running past the Tolleson place. Much of the area has been cleared of debris; the walls and roof of the old Tolleson house have been erected; and the air is filled with the sounds of hammering and sawing.

Mrs. Tolleson explains that the family lived in the old tenant house until July. At that time the Tollesons received two trailers from HUD to house their large family. The family is still living in the trailers, but a new house is planned.



Mrs. Tolleson said that restoring the dairy must come before the house. Most of the family's dairy cattle have been moved to the Mt. Pinson area near Birmingham and to the farm of a neighbor, T.J. Wakefield.

A new milking parlor is under construction, although wet weather has held up some of the work being done on the building.

Mr. Tolleson and his sons have been working all summer clearing their pastures and repairing fences. They plan to bulldoze some of the badly damaged areas in order to remove the downed trees from the fields.

Work on the Tolleson farm is progressing at a rapid pace as elsewhere in Shelby County people are mending the scars left by the disasterous tornado.

The memory of the storm will not fade for a long time, however, One of the first new buildings constructed on the Tolleson farm is a storm shelter.

STARTING OVER AGAIN - - The S.L. Tolleson family had to virtually start fresh after last May's tornado destroyed their dairy. This hilltop view shows two HUD trailers used by the family. The ruins of a collapsed house stands in the background between where the two cows are standing.

Local citizens concerned--

Agriculture Dept. reflects on U. S. land use trends

(Editor's Note) Land use is a topic of great interest in Shelby County these days as population pressures cause residents to examine the old ways of using land and asking how land use can best serve the needs of the future.

With property values high, and land at a premium questions of land use for quarries, industries, mines, and subdivisions as well as for farming and forestry are constantly being raised.

A news release from the U.S. Department of Agriculture discusses some of the trends in land use in the United States in recent years.

About 80 percent of the more than two billion acres of land in the United States is used for crops, pasture, and forestry, according to a recent report by the U.S. Department of Agriculture's Economic Research Service.

The report, based on data from the 1969 Census, USDA agencies, and other sources, shows that one-fifth of the total area is devoted to crops, more than one-fourth is permanent grassland pasture, and one-third is forest land. The rest is distributed among urban and transportation uses (less than three percent); recreational, woldlife, and other extensive special uses (five percent); and unclassified areas including Alaskan tundra (13 percent).

In recent decades, there has been little change in the distribution of land among major agricultural and forestry uses. Acreages of both cropland and permanent grassland declined slightly, prior to 1973's cropland increase. However, total production, thanks to rising yields, increased significantly. Forest land area has held almost stable nationally, as losses to agricultural, urban, and other uses in some regions have been largely offset by reversion of open land to forest in other regions.

Special uses of land, particularly urban and recreational uses, continue to expand at the expense of agricultural and forestry uses. However, the special uses represent a small and slowly increasing share. Use for urban expansion, highways, roads, airports, and reservoirs, for example, requires an additional 1.2 million acres of land a year.

Three-fifths of the land, and nearly all the more valuable acreage, is privately owned. State, Federal, and local governments own the rest.

Copies of the report, "Major Uses of Land in the United States: Summary for 1969," AER 247, are available on request by telephone (202) 447-7255 or post care from Office of Communication, U.S. Department of Agriculture, Washington, D.C. 20250.

REASONS WHY YOU SHOULD VOTE NO TO ZONING:

Reasons why you should vote NO to zoning.

We don't need someone else telling us what we can do with our property.

Zoning will increase the taxes we have to pay. They are high enough now - we certainly don't want an increase.

Zoning will bring on other taxes such as building permits and many other regulations.

The Zoning Law will even regulate your having a home garden.

The Zoning Law will regulate the type of building you can put on your land and what you can do with it.

The zoning law will not let you put a mobile home on your own lot unless you are in a certain section of Beat 12.

Soil analysis required by new law

An important new emphasis has been given to the Shelby County Soil Conservation Service.

A new regulation by the State Health Department requires all subdivision developers to have a report made on the soils in the subdivision before plans can be considered by the Health Department.

The regulation serves to prevent construction mistakes that might result in unsanitary placement of septic tanks. It also is important in preventing soil erosion and other ecological mistakes.

Robert Kelley, Soil Conservationist for Shelby County, said that his office is available to furnish a soils report and interpretation of the site at no cost to an individual or to a corporate developer.

He pointed out in an interview with the Reporter, that the kind of soil in a particular area plays a very important role in how land is developed. It is also the key to how expensive a development project will be.

In 1973 the Shelby County Soil Conservation Service furnished soil interpretive information on over 150 subdivisions, he said.

Soil conditions vary greatly in Shelby County, Kelley pointed out. Some of the problems a potential developer should look for are: rock outcroppings, low land, ponding water areas subject to flooding, heavy clay soils which will have very slow percolation rates, and very steep land.

Any or all of these conditions can make subdivision development difficult and expensive.

Kelley suggests that developers or individuals who plan to build even a small subdivision or small mobile home park contact the SCS before any earth moving or construction takes place.

The SCS office is located on the second floor of the courthouse annex in Columbiana. The telephone number is 669-7136.

Flowers urges veterans to use service

Congressman Walter Flowers encouages all Shelby County veterans interested in information on federal benefits to visit the Disabled American Veterans Mobile Van in Bessemer on February 2.

Flowers said, "The purpose of the Mobile Van Service is to provide information concerning any federal benefits that a veteran might be entitled to.

"These vans are staffed by professionally trained National Service Officers of the Disabled American Veterans. I hope any veteran in Shelby County who desires information on benefits will visit one of these vans while they are in his area," Flowers added.

The vans will be in service from noon until 8 or 9 p.m., depending on the work load. A van will be located at the City Auditorium in Bessemer on February 2.

Nothing beats good old homemade syrup

PRESSING JUICE COMES FIRST - - Isaac Atherson and his wife Anniebell start the process of making ribbon cane syrup by putting cane through the belt powered mill where the juice is pressed from the stalk.

By Lee Stevens

Down near Randolph, in Chilton County, the art of syrup making still exists.

Many farmers in Shelby and Chilton Counties formerly turned out syrup when the first cool days of fall arrived, but the number has fallen off steadily in recent years.

Sam Smith of Rt 1, Randolph, has been making syrup for almost half a century and he is still at it.

He is one of the few farmers who still operates a syrup mill, making pure ribbon cane syrup.

He has cooked off, he estimates, as much as 8,000 gallons a year in past years, including both ribbon cane and sorghum syrup.

During 1973 his total production was less, an estimated 2,000 gallons. This year most of the syrup was pure ribboncane. I am gradually going out of the sorghum business," Smith explained.

Smith does not grow the cane from which the syrup is made. He cooks it off on a share basis. The owner of the cane furnishes the wood used to fire the vats to cook off the syrup. Smith prefers slab pine wood obtained from sawmills in the area. This, he explained, makes the best fire to cook off the syrup.

Smith's share of the syrup is every fourth gallon. He can, with a good day's work, cook off approximately 100 gallons per day.

"I like the cane grown on sandy soil for sorghum syrup, but for a high quality ribboncane syrup, it should be grown on more of a damp, low land fertile soil," Smith explained.

One of the requirements for making good ribboncane syrup is having the right temperature in the vat while cooking off the cane juice. Smith judges the temperature of the vat by the way the juice and syrup looks as it cooks off.

The sugarcane stalks are run through a mill powered by a tractor and belt to extract the juice from the stalk. The juice is siphoned into an aluminum lined skimming vat where the skimmings are boiled out of the raw cane juice. This five by 15 foot vat is partitioned into 12 sections.

Small holes in alternate ends of these partitions make it possible for the person doing the skimming to work the juice toward the front of the vat as it cooks. The skimmings are removed by use of a specially designed dipper and disposed of.

The pure juice that is obtained is transferred to another vat that is copper lined. There it undergoes a similar process of cooking until it reaches syrup of desired consistency.

The juice is cooked in the skimming vat for approximately 30 minutes. Different cane varieties require different amounts of time for cooking." Here is where experience is required to make good quality syrup," Smith explained.

The veteran syrup maker says that a good ribbon cane crop will yield as m uch as 500 gallons syrup per acre.

There is a definite difference between sorghum and ribbon cane syrup, both in growing the crop and taste of the syrup. Cane used in making sorghum syrup is grown by planting the cane seed. Cane for making ribbon cane syrup is grown by planting the cane stalks that are cut in the fall and bedded down in the soil to a frost free depth. Stalks are left in this condition over winter.

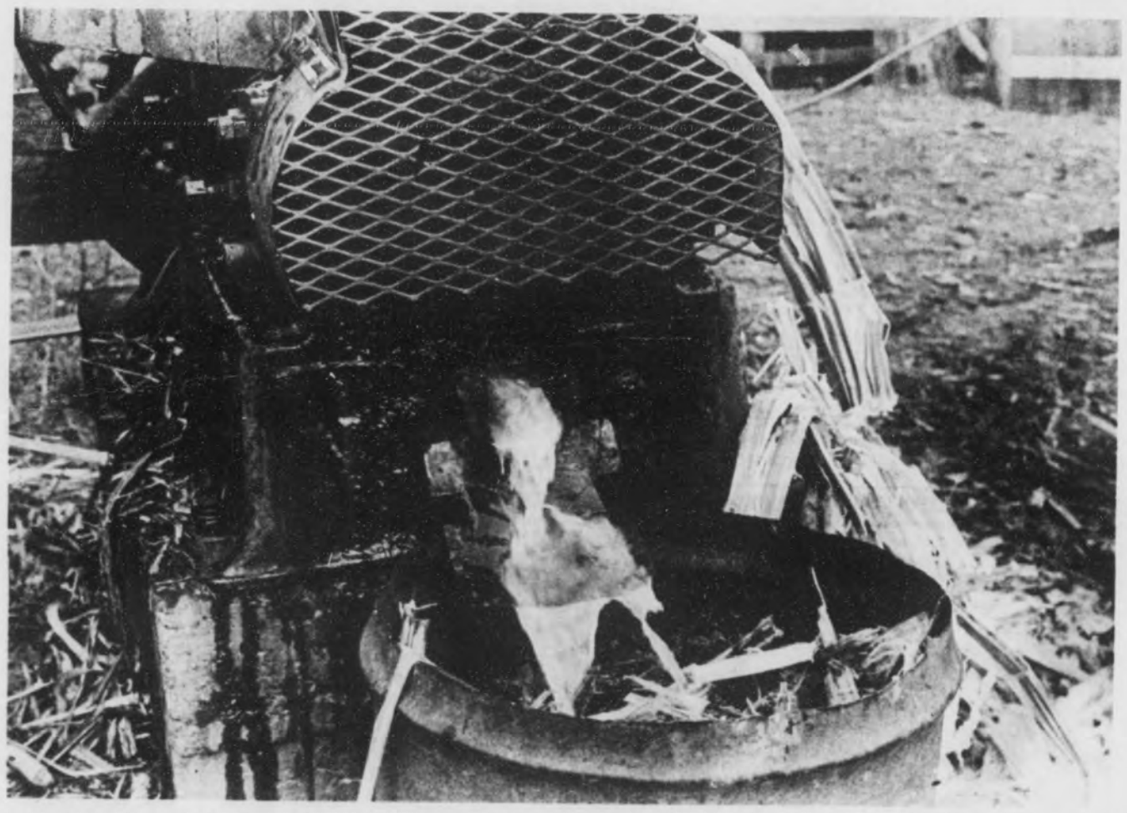
Each node (joint) on the ribboncane stalk produces a number of stalks, as many as 10 to 15 per node. The cane is normally harvested in November in this section of the state.

The cane is stripped of leaves by hand labor, either before or after cutting.

The 1973 crop of syrup was selling for $1.50 per one-half gallon container - either sorghum or ribboncane, Smith added.

It normally takes a crew of four to operate the syrup making, two people to grind the cane and two to do the vat operation.

Currently, Smith has cane growers who bring cane to the mill from a radius of over 50 miles. Cane growers have acreages ranging from small plots to larger acreages. Iassa Atherson and his wife Annibell of the Randolph area had only one row of ribbon cane approximately 50 yrads long that was grown for home use and for sale. Atherson has been growing ribboncane for a number of years and at one time operated a syrup mill.



Another cane grower H.C. Burk, also of the Randolph area, had approximately one acre of ribboncane. "It took four people one full day to set out the acre field of ribboncane," he said.

Burk plows the ground on which the ribbon cane is to be grown in the fall and when planting time comes a lister is used to make an approximate eight inch furrow. The stalks are laid end to end in this furrow and covered by double listing.

The cane is fertizlized after the stalks emerge with 0-16-16 at the rate of 1,000 to 1,500 pounds per acre. He strips the leaves from the stalks while standing in the field and cuts the cane with a brush axe.

SKIMMING 'PUMMIES' - - Cane juice flows into skimming vats where the skimmings are cooked off. Mill owner Sam Smith adds wood to the fire under the vat while Mrs. Smith skims 'pummies' from the juice as it cooks.

JUICE FLOWS FROM THE MILL - Cane juice is caught in a barrel and flows by gravity to cooking vats which are located a short distance from the mill. The raw juice is boiled and skimmed in an aluminum lined vat.

Photo story

by Lee Stevens

BOILING INTO SYRUP - - Juice is siphoned from the vat on the left to the vat on the right where it is cooked to syrup consistency by Smith. The aromas from the big boiling vats are a delight to visitors.

AND THERE IT IS - - As the syrup reaches the proper consistency it flows through a strainer into a container to be put in buckets or other types of containers. The owner of the cane generally provides his own containers for his syrup.

County has 15 deaths on roads

Shelby County had a total of 15 fatalities in highway accidents in the year 1973, according to a report released by Bill Bradshaw, of Calera, public relations director for the Birmingham district of the Alabama State Troopers.

Bradshaw said that state troopers investigated 488 accidents involving automobiles in the county in 1973. There were 156 persons injured.

The total number of accidents increased over the previous year, when the county registered 471 automobile accidents, but the number of fatalities decreased by more than half. In 1972 there were 33 fatalities.

Bradshaw said that statewide there were 886 deaths from highway accidents in 1973, compared with 918 fatalities in the year 1972, giving a minus of 32 fatalities in 1973.

State troopers do not investigate automobile accidents that occur within city limits, and their figures do not include accident records within municipalities.

Allen speaks to local men on Assn.

Senator James B. Allen, Alabama's junior United States Senator, addressed the noon luncheon on January 16, of the Coosa - Alabama River Improvement Association holding its annual meeting in Montgomery.

Shelby County Judge of Probate Conrad Fowler serves on the board of directors and the executive board of the Coosa - Alabama River Improvement Association.

Other local members of the association include Abex Corporation, Central Alabama Paving and Construction Company, Longview Lime Company, and National-Standard Company, as well as numerous private citizens.

Those attending the meeting heard progress reports on the development of the Coosa River and a program on the economic impact of the development of inland navigation on a local region.

Presiding at the meeting was the long time president of the association, Dr. Robert F. Henry of Montgomery.

SS extends services

Shelby County residents may contact Social Security officers in Calera on Tuesdays from 9 to 11 a.m. at the city hall.

On Thursdays, a Social Security representative holds office hours in Columbiana at the Community Services Building from 9 a.m. to 11 a.m.

The Bessemer office serves as headquarters for the Social Security Administration for all residents of Shelby County.

The agency is currently seeking out persons who may be eligible for supplemental security income payments.

This is a new federal program which started this month. It will establish an income floor for people in financial need who are 65 or over, or blind, or disabled, according to Charles J. Simon, district manager.

Think first before you criticize

By Mildred White Wallace

"It is ridiculous for any man to criticize the works of another who is not first distinguished himself by his own performance" -- once spoke Addison and we were reminded of this wise statement one day last week when some careless persons had forgotten the potent "weight of a word" and the far flung influence thoughtless words can sometimes bring about.

We recalled Ruskin's statement along this line: "He said: "In the world's affairs there is no design so great or good but it will take 20 wise men to help it forward a few inches -- and a single fool can stop it"! Colton's remark on the same topic next came to mind. He said: "To be a mere verbal critic is what no man of genius would be if he could; but to be a critic of true taste and feeling is what no man without genius could be if he would".

Personally I have never known a self appointed critic who made it his business to lash out on the short comings of the other fellow who was not perhaps more guilty of greater faults himself.

Competent, constructive criticism is a coveted gift and a welcome recompense for effort expended but idle words thoughtlessly hurled from incompetent sources often bring disaster to people who have had the courage to dream and work for its materialization.

All of these things flashed through my mind a few Sundays ago as I sat listening to Rev. Charles Stroud preach a sermon, taking for his subject - "Let's Talk About What is Right With the Church".

So often we hear talk about what's wrong with the church - the country - the folks -- and what have you - and so seldom do we hear of whats right about people or anything else? The sermon was a thought-provoking one, delivered in Mr. Stroud's dynamic and forceful manner.

Since that time, we have, perhaps, been listening closer or paying more attention to what we are hearing -- but it seems to me that maybe we should do what the erudite minister suggested and start trying to find something good about this atomic old ball of a world and the people who are revolving around in it. Surely everything and everybody can't be hopeless!

There is definitely plenty of room for considering the "weight of a word" before carelessly tossing them around. For instance, an encounter this morning proved this to be true. A young friend of mine came into the Snack Bar and joined me at the coffee table. Our paths had frequently crossed in various places but recently we had missed him. When asked about the stoppage of a specific work he had been doing he related the reason. Someone had carelessly uttered some words of unwarranted criticism. He had been deeply hurt -- "the song had died"!

A poet friend of mine once wrote a few lines on this subject and we are going to leave it with you to draw your own conclusions,

"You can fling a little stone
And kill a singing bird,
You can wound the deepest love
With a word-
And the bird will be forgot
Soon -- he is dead.
The Word -- will slowly break your heart
After it is said!"

The first meeting of the Good Neighbor Club will meet Tuesday in the new Club Room in Mountain View Apartments. All members are enthusiastically planning for a varied and interesting program which has been scheduled for the new year. A new and completely furnished Club Room has been provided for those residing in the Housing Project and they cordially invite other senior citizens to be present and participate in these meetings.

A covered dish luncheon will be served to members and their guests Jan. 22 marking the initial opening of activities designed to be helpful as well as entertaining.

Mr. and Mrs. Ed Goodgame of Taylors, S.C.; Mr. and Mrs. Wayne Machamer and Karen Machamer of Hendersonville, Tenn., were house guests during the weekend of their parents, Mr. and Mrs. Russell Seay. The Goodgames also visited Mr. Erman Pearson in Shelby, the father of Mrs. Goodgame.

Now that gasoline is getting to be a problem more and more of our friends are bicycling to work. It is reported that due to the popularity of this means of local transportation that a new highly reflective tire sidewall which can be seen clearly up to 500 yards away will soon be on the market and will greatly increase the safety of the 85 million bike riders. When the auto's headlight beams hit the sidewalls, the two big bright circles tell the driver immediately it's a bicycle. During the daylight hours the tire looks like a regular whitewall.

Criag Smith, the Textile Tycoon from Sylacauga with Mrs. Smith is visiting in London this week. He writes that an austere program is in force -- as far as creature comfort is concerned. He says although a cheerful fire burns in the fireplace in the living room in his hotel, a "hot water bottle" is in the bed. The theatres, opera and symphony remain available but few lights are in evidence. Only traffic lights burn on the streets during this energy crisis. However, he states there is "plenty of good food".

Mrs. Raymond Patterson -- Reba, to her many friends, has returned to her position in Davis Drug this week after an enforced absence due to the illness of her daughter, Mrs. Allan Thornburg in Mississippi.

School teachers in our town are falling in step with the energy crisis situation and are cycling their way to school every day rather than using their automobiles.

Regret to learn that Lou Jean Joiner is a patient in Lloyd Noland in Birmingham.

Saturday evening we were invited to ride in to Vestavia for dinner. When we arrived at the restaurant we noticed policemen, firemen and all equipment going full blast. The building we entered was ordered to "vacate immediately" -- a bomb was reported to have been placed inside. In no time flat the block was cleared. Fortunately, no bomb was found but we have been wondering just how costly this rumor was to the parties involved.

* * * *

We regret to learn that John Jones with the Alabama Power Company is a patient in Shelby Memorial. The latest report we have had from his bedside as we go to press is encouraging.

* * * *

Mr. Melvin Stoker and party of motorists who made the cross- country trip from Abilene, Texas last week to be present at the Stoker - Overton wedding, had the misfortune of being taken seriously ill enroute home -- and while on the road to a hospital in Ft. Worth, Texas, were involved in an automobile wreck in which the Stoker car was demolished.

Mr. Stoker, however, we are glad to state is recuperating satisfactorily but remains in the hospital; and Mrs. Stoker, although badly bruised - is convalescing at their home in Abilene.

Mr. and Mrs. Barry Grantham announce the arrival of a daughter born in Brookwood Thursday morning, Jan. 10. They have named this latest addition to their family circle - Jennifer Gail.

Grandparents include Mr. and Mrs. Jack Smith of Columbiana; and Mr. and Mrs. Grantham of Chelsea.

Mrs. Eunice Rasco of Columbiana is little Jennifer Gail's great grandmother.

Name right -- Troy Wayne -- but Troy, who was born New Year's Day in Shelby Memorial Hospital, is a boy and not a girl as we incorrectly stated last week.

Troy is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Troy Cooper of Pelham; and we understand he was "plenty mad" over our calling him a girl! So, we beg pardon and hasten to correct our error. Hope this sets the record straight!

Calera Garden Club learns about birds

Mrs. J.D. Freeman was hostess to the Calera Garden Club for the first meeting of the New Year.

Fifteen members answered roll call, according to Mrs. B.D. Holcombe, club secretary.

The program on "Birds" was given by Mrs. Roy Kendrick much of the material she used was taken from a scrap book she had compiled through the years.

Her first hand study of birds of our locality, their natural habits, helpfulness and sometimes unusual and amusing practices made her talk very interesting.

Several members added amusing items about the capers of the birds they watch on their grounds.

The club will meet with Mrs. Rylant in February.

The meeting adjourned with the reading of the Club Collect.

"Hillsboro Society"

New historical group forms in Helena

The home of Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth Penhale in Helena will be the scene of a meeting Friday evening of a number of persons interested in establishing a local historical society.

Mrs. Margaret Sizemore, assistant to the president of Samford University, will speak to the group on how to set up a local historical society. Mrs. Sizemore has been active in state historical circles for many years. Many of her forebears also came from the Helena area.

The proposed name of the new group will be "Hillsboro Historical Society", after the place name that applied to the entire northwest part of Shelby County in pre-Civil War days.

Penhale told the Reporter he hopes the interest in the group will be widespread. For the initial meeting at his home, he is contacting persons who have earlier shown an interest in setting up the society. He said he would be glad to hear from others who are interested. He later hopes to schedule further meetings and programs.

The yellow pine is 'wonderful wood'

Forests are one of our ion's most important and uable natural resources. cy are unique in that they re renewable. With proper anagement and care, trees ecome a crop and continue to upply us with wood and fiber r as long as we need such roducts.

Southerners should know ow much the Southern Yellow pine tree means to their personal welfare and the truly vital role it has played in the growth of their region.

The South's earliest industry was nourished by Southern Yellow pine. Among the section's first large manufacturing plants were sawmills. Many of the South's first and most famous buildings were formed with Southern Yellow pine; for example, the original Texas State Capitol, Mount Vernon and many Southern manors and plantation homes.

This wonderful wood has built the economy of the South. It has built countless churches, schools, homes and other community buildings. Today, many Southern towns depend entirely on sawmills and other wood - using industries for their existence.

Many thousands of men and women work at southern lumber companies. Additional thousands earn income by growing and supplying timber to the mills. Many other southerners are engaged in the transportation, distribution and sale of lumber. Still others, such as carpenters and painters, earn a living from its use in construction. Lumber payrolls and earnings help support nearly every business and profession.

In many ways, Southern Yellow pine has served mankind. It is known as "The Supreme Structural Wood of the World." During the last hundred years, enough Southern Yellow pine lumber has been produced in the South to build more than thirty-six million homes. Its many qualities have brought great security and peace of mind to home owners throughout the South and elsewhere.

(This message is a public service of the Southeastern Lumber Manufacturers Association. For additional information write to the SLMA, P.O. Box 87175, College Park, Georgia.)

Hunters join in conservation law crackdown as game officers make six county arrests

Hunters have joined forces with conservation officers in Shelby County this week in a concerted effort to drive out and arrest hunters who are illegally killing fawns and does.

Conservation officers Doyle Woods and Donald Turberville told the Reporter that four does were confiscated this weekend. They were apparently abandoned by the persons who killed them, when other hunters closed in on them and scared them off.

Woods praised the cooperation that people are giving him in telephoning complaints and violations to his home.

Does confiscated

One of the confiscated does was found in Chelsea, one in Westover, one in Kinggdom Community and one in Pea Ridge, indicating that illegal killing has been going on in many parts of the county.

Officer Woods said that the conservation officers made six hunting arrests this week because of tips. Four of those arrested were from Wilsonville and two were from Chelsea.

At Chelsea, the story of the apprehension reads as though it came right out of a book.

Two hunters caught two other hunters who were hunting illegally. The men held the violators, forcing them to remain on the spot, until the conservation officers could get there to make the arrests. All of this took place at 5:45 Saturday morning.

It's crowded in the woods

Woods and Turberville say that the Shelby County woods are very crowded with deer hunters as the season draws to a close. Next weekend is the last full weekend before the deer season officially closes on the 24th.

The officers warn all good sportsmen to be very careful and alert this week if they are out in the woods, because of the crowded hunting conditions.

Woods noted that there has been an unusual amount of hunting from the roads this season, and points out that road hunting is illegal.

He said that many hunters would rather take a chance on unting from the road, than from hunting on someone's private property without a permit.

However, the fine is higher for road hunting than illegally hunting without a permit.

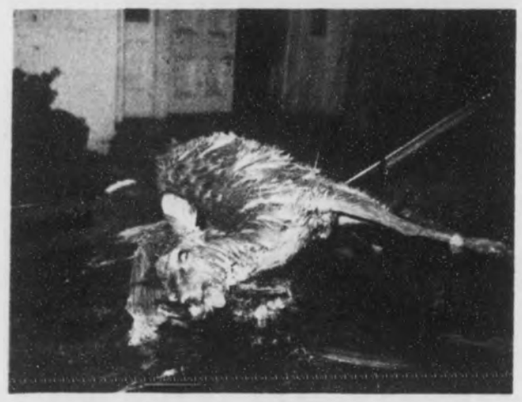
After January 24, rabbit and quail will be the only game animals still in season for hunters.

Call officers on violations

The officers encourage everyone to telephone them if they see any hunting violations or suspeted violations.

There is no general office for the Conservation Department in the county, but all the officers can be readhed at their homes.

Woods advises that people call "the minute you see a violation. If you wait 30 minutes to an hour, it's almost too late for us to catch them."



Conservation officers are interested in helping both hunters and landowners, Woods emphasized.

Telephone numbers to dial are:

Captain Lightsey, 669-7687.

Officer Woods, 669-6943

Officer Turberville, 663-6822.

ANOTHER DOE SHOT - - One of four does shot illegally this weekend in Shelby County is brought back to Columbiana on the automobile of a conservation officer. Officers found four does illegally killed this week. They give credit to the many good sportsmen in the woods for helping them find hunters who are carrying on illegal activities.

WATCH THE SPINNING BALL - - Members of the Jemison Junior Pros basketball drill team perform during halftime during the University of Montevallo- Jacksonville State basketball game Wednesday night, January 9. Here three youngsters balance a spinning basketball on a stick. Other stunts by the group include passing a spinning ball from one finger to another, fancy dribbling and ball handling. The Jemison Junior Pros are directed by coach Wendal Hays of Jemison High School. The group is scheduled to appear at the UM gymnasium again on February 6.

BIG HUNT - - Mike Stokes, Wayne Hall, Tony Muse, Terry Fulman, and Doyle Wallace stand by four deer they killed last Saturday near Wilsonville. One of the animals was an eight point buck; two were six pointers; and the other was a spike. Tony Muse and his party have killed 12 bucks so far this season. Deer hunting season in Shelby County for hunting deer with guns or bow and arrow ends Thurusday, January 24. The Fall season for Turkey hunting in Shelby County also ends January 24.

University of Montevallo team wins two, then loses conference contest

by Rick Moore

The University of Montevallo Falcons came out ahead in a rigorous schedule last week defeating the University of Alabama in Huntsville and Jacksonville State University before loosing to conference rival William Carey College of Hattiesburg, Miss.

In a game played Tuesday, January 8, the Falcons downed UAH by a score of 85-80 in the first game of the week's basketball trillogy. Gerald Douglas scored 23 points; DAvid Porterfield shot for 21; and Chris David hit for 18 points. Charles Averhart was the high rebounder for the Falcons grabbing 12 shots off the backboard.

Then in an exciting battle on Wednesday night UM defeated Jax State in overtime by the score of 84-79. The Falcon defense began slowing in the second half of the game. Montevallo led by 13 points during that period, but the Gamecocks closed the gap and tied the score as time ran out. The Falcons exploded again during the extra period and won by five points.

High scorers in the Jacksonville game were Gerald Douglas with 27 points and Charles Averhart with 18 points. This pair also led the rebound department as Averhart chalked up 11 and Douglas had ten rebounds.

The Falcons were nipped by William Carey on Saturday when they lost by one point, 80-81. The Mississippi College hit their final basket and went ahead by one point with only six seconds left in the game.

David Porterfield scored 21 points against William Carey while Charles Averhart made 18 points. Gerald Douglas led the team with 11 rebounds.

University of Montevallo basketball coach Bill Jones told the Reporter that the Falcons played their poorest game of the season against 'Carey making only 41 percent of their shots from the floor. "You don't win a college game by shooting that poorly," Jones continued.

Jones also stated that the Falcon defense broke down at the end of the game. The coach attributes this largely to the UM team's three-game schedule last week.

The loss makes the Falcons 10-3 for the season and 2-1 in the Southern States Conference.

Two home games are on tap for the Falcons this week. The UM team will face Spring Hill College on Thursday night at Huntingdon College Saturday night.

SCHS ready for action

Shelby County High School basketball coach William Drinkard says the Wildcats can still have a big season. Now 3-6 for the year, Shelby still has eleven season games plus the county tournament remaining in their season.

Drinkard describes many of the forthcoming games as "unpredictable" since most of those contests will be evenly matched games.

The Shelby County coach says that all nine of his varsity have been doing an equally good job carrying the team. Starters for the Wildcats are James Head, Allen Hume, Jerry Madison, Russell Rasco, Dickie Porter, Donald Portis, Bobby Madison, Wayne Barnett, Donald Millner, Willie Bush, and Tim Mooney.

TEN POINTS - - Kenneth Shirley of Westover killed this ten point buck near Columbiana last week. Shirley reports that the deer measured 22¾ inches from tail to nose. He used L.B. Bailey's dogs to run the animal.

Gasoline and storks top fishing report

Although fishing has fallen off during the last few weeks due to changing weather conditions, a quick check of Shelby County marinas and fish camps turned up at least one encouraging fact. Operators at Armstrong's, Lacoosa, Bozo's, Spring Creek, and Okomo all say they have gas for boats. Another fact was that the crappie were biting well during last week's warm weather.

Bill Henkie of Lacoosa Marina reports that the water is stained and good for spinner bait fishing. Henkie says if the weather will materialize, fishermen can expect good fishing conditions. We also learned that the Lacoosa Marina will have a booth in the January 29 boat show at the civic center in Birmingham.

J.T. Boykin and his wife Diane at Bozo's Camp have an eight pound 13 ounce prize, but it's not a fish. Rather, he's their new son John Thomas Boykin III.

Wrestling card raises money at Vincent

The Vincent High School Athletic Association will be promoting a professional wrestling program next Saturday night in order to raise funds for needed athletic equipment for the school. The matches began at 8:30 p.m. at the high school gymnasium. Wrestlers Terry Wallace of Vincent and Richard Shaw of Wilsonville will be featured on the card.

College credit for HS students

This summer Walker College at Jasper will offer high school students who have completed the 11th grade an opportunity to begin their college careers during the interim between their junior and senior years. These students may earn 12 semester hours in such subjects as chemistry, biology, business, english, history, mathematics, and psychology. The credit-hours earned may be applied to the student's continuing education at Walker; or may be trnasferred to another institution, subject to the transfer policies of the other college or university.

Registration for the summer courses will take place at the college on May 31st, with classes beginning on June third. The second term begins July 8.

GRASSES PREVENT EROSION AT PELHAM SCHOOL SITE - - Ted Lansford, assistant superintendent of education, and Paul Yeager, SRI, Mayor of Pelham, examine the seeding and mulching on the new Pelham High School site, designed to prevent erosion while the school building is under construction.

No erosion at school site

The Board of Education took the advice of the Department of Soil Conservation while preparing the mountaintop site for the new Pelham High School.

Ted Lansford, assistant superintendent of education, and Robert Kelley, Soil Conservationist, worked together to establish a mulching and seeding program for the newly graded land at the site.

"Mulching and seeding of these areas to good adapted grasses is just good common sense," sayd Kelley. "The cost is much greater to put soil back after it has washed away, than to mulch and seed the soil as soon as possible after the machines move out."

The county office of Soil Conservation is available to assist any property owners in problems of soil erosion. The county office number is 669-7136.

FBI agent will speak to area accountants

"Business Losses Through Fraud and Embezzlement," will be the topic of a speech given to a group of accountants next week.

Ralph J. Miles, special Agent in Charge of the northern district of Alabama, Federal Bureau of Investigation, will speak on the subject to the South Birmingham Chapter of the National Association of Accountants on January 22.

Several accountants who practice in Shelby County are members of the organization.

The meeting will be held at the Benbow motel at 6 p.m., according to W. L. Saunders, Jr., publicity chairman.

The family lawyer--

Driver collides with ambulance

Driving home from work, Harold crashed into an ambulance at a busy intersection. In short order he found himself facing a charge of "failing to yield the right-of-way to an emergency vehicle."

But in court, Harold came up with the following facts in his own defense:

1) that the traffic light had been in his favor;

2) that he had not heard the siren because he had his windows up and his radio on; and

3) that he had not seen the ambulance until the last moment, because other cars were obscuring his vision.

Under these circumstances the court could find nothing negligent in Harold's conduct, and dismissed the charge.

Traffic codes generally do give special privileges to ambulances. However, these privileges are not absolute. In case of a collision between an ambulance and a private car, the court will weigh the entire situation on its merits.

Furthermore, ambulances have privileges only when there is (or at least appears to be) a true emergency.

Thus, in another case, an ambulance that was merely returning to its home office was held not entitled to go through a stop sign.

And an ambulance transporting a patient to the hospital, with no apparent need for haste, was held not entitled to disregard a red light.

Still, in most situations, the ambulance's right-of- way will be upheld. One indignant citizen decided this preference was a form of unfair discrimination against the mototing public. But when he challenged it in court, the judge held that he had no kick coming.

"The grant of special privileges to an emergency vehicle," said the judge, "is a proper exercise of the police power of the state. When human life may be at stake, prompt performance of the duties imposed upon drivers of emergency vehicles is imperative."

UNFORTUNATE SPILL ON RAIN-SLICKED HIGHWAY - - A transport truck loaded with beer went off Highway 25 northeast of Wilsonville last Thursday. Damage to the truck was considerable, but there were no injuries.

AND THAT'S A LOT OF BEER - - Several passersby jovially offered to help transfer the cargo from the wrecked truck to a waiting pickup, but company truckers and officials managed to handle the load, taking lots of jokes and amusing remarks from travelers.(Reporter photos by Jerry Hamilton)

Install special device--

Stranded motorists to get troopers' gas

Public Safety Director, Colonel E.C. Dothard, and Highway and Traffic Safety Coordinator, Colonel Bob Simpson, have announced of the purchase of three hundred fuel transfer devices, to be installed on State Trooper cars, enabling them to transfer gasoline from the Trooper's car to a stranded motorist.

Colonel Dothard said, "The purchase of these devices has a two-fold purpose: To assist the stranded motorist when he is out of fuel; and to prevent him from hauling gasoline in the trunk of his vehicle."

The device, consisting of a T-valve and a fifteen-foot, plastic hose, is permanently installed on the fuel line near the carburetor of the Trooper's car and works as follows: The Trooper car is parked behind the stranded vehicle and the hose from the device is inserted into the fuel tank of the stranded vehicle. The Trooper then opens the T-valve for three minutes, during which time, one gallon of gasoline will be transferred.

"Only enough gasoline will be given to a motorist to enable him to drive to the nearest service station, motel, or other place of safety", the Director said.

"Motorists receiving fuel will be required to sign a receipt for the gasoline to enable the Trooper to account for it", the Director said.

The Attorney General's Office has ruled that giving State gasoline to stranded motorists was legal, in that the Department of Public Safety has a moral obligation to expedite the flow of traffic, and Troopers were commended for initiating the program.

The purchase price of each fuel transfer device is $10.50, and will be installed at State shops.

Home Builders elect Lacey

Edward N. Lacey, President of Lacey Home Builders, Inc., has been elected President of the Birmingham Association of Home Builders for 1974. He will succeed W. Hershel Trimm of Trimm Building Corporation.

Elected to serve with Lacey were: P.S. Parker, first Vice President; Thurman Wilson, second Vice President; Dan T. Burton, Secretary; and Edward Gardner as Treasurer.

Serving on the local Board of Directors will be Ed Castleberry, Duke Robinson, J.C. Pritchett, Whit Walter, Donald Huey, John Strain, T.C. Brannon, Jesse O. Hayley and R. Corbett Higginbotham. The new officers were installed at the annual banquet, held in December.

Shelby County has become one of the major areas of interest to the members of the organization.

The Birmingham Association of Home Builders was formed in 1941 to serve the special interests of the residential and light construction industry of Birmingham.

It now represents over 500 members in local and area problems and promotions. It is represented on a larger scale by its affiliation with the Home Builders Association of Alabama and The National Association of Home Builders. It is engaged in the promotion of the residential construction industry through professionalism, education and training, and legislative action.

U.M. concert features pianist

Pianist Elizabeth Funderburke will be the special guest performer in the Chamber Music program scheduled for Sunday afternoon, Jan. 20, at the University of Montevallo.

Miss Funderburke, a native of Birmingham, is presently serving as accompanist to the Pontificial Choir of the Diocese of Paterson, N.J., and is a candidate for the Master of Music degree from the Manhattan School of Music.

At age sixteen she appeared as guest soloist with the Birmingham Symphony.

Her two-art program at Montevallo will include compositions by Bach- Busoni, Beethoven, Chopin and Bartok.

Miss Funderburke's appearance here is the third event on this year's Chamber Music series. Program time is 4 p.m. in the recital hall of New Music Building on the University of Montevallo campus, and the public is invited to attend free of charge.

Helena council makes plans for new city fire hall

The new fire hall was one of the main topics of the Helena Town Council in their January 7 meeting.

Mayor Charles Penhale told the Reporter that the council discussed the construction of the new fire hall and said that the council is now taking a second bid on the construction of that building.

Penhale also disclosed that the town is expecting the already delayed delivery of Helena's new fire truck next month.

The council rejected the proposed purchase of a truck for city maintenance purposes because the vehicle lacked a dump truck bed.

Penhale further said that the council is taking steps to purchase a tractor complete with a bush hog and a side blade to be used for maintenance of the new Joe Tucker Park.

Helena police chief Lawrence Seale also gave his monthly report to the town council. During the month of December, the Helena police department assisted the Shelby County sheriff's department three times, assisted the Alabaster police department three times, aided four people with car trouble, made two arrests for speeding, four arrests for driving while intoxicated, three arrests for driving while license revoked, one arrest for discharging firearms within the city limits, one arrest for highway intoxication, three warnings for speeding, one arrest for no license, investigated four accidents, and answered eight complaints.

Savings bonds now paying rate of 6%

Mr. William M. Shcroeder, Shelby County Chairman for U.S. Savings Bonds, reports that now, more than ever before, it pays to hold onto your Savings Bonds.

"The new six-percent rate applies both to Bonds purchased on and after December 1, 1973 and to those bought before that date and still outstanding. So, there's no reason to redeem any Bonds to benefit from the rate increase.

Schroeder pointed out that Savings Bonds are the least-inflationary means the government has for financing the national debt.

"Today's higher interest rate should encourage more people to buy Bonds, thereby bolstering their individual financial security," he said.

Lose a pound . . . give a nickel

Members of Weight Watchers of North Alabama will become "slimmer as the Heart Fund gets fatter".

A special promotion was announced today by Sy Aufseher, Weight Watcher's Area Director, and J. CArl Parkman, State Heart Fund Chairman. For each pound of weight lost by members of his classes during January and February, Aufseher will donate a nickel to the 1974 Heart Fund.

Last year, according to Aufseher, "our members lost over 34,000 pounds and thereby enabling us to make a contribution of over $1,700 to the Heart Fund. Of the many organizations who seek our support, we feel perhaps the strongest tie in with the Heart Fund since shedding excess weight does reduce one's risk of heart attack.

Weight Watchers in thirty-four Central and North Alabama counties are participating in the program.

Mr. Parkman, in expressing appreciation to Aufseher for this promotion, said, "Not only are Weight Watchers concerned about the health of their own members, but by their generous contribution to the Heart Fund, they are doing much to insure good heart health for all Alabamians."

Money donated to the Heart Fund, conducted each February, go to support the Heart Association's program of research, professional and public education and community service.

The rapidly increasing popularity of bottle collecting

Montevallo couple collects old bottles and other curiosities of the past

FROM GRANDMA'S DAY - - Two interesting items in the McKinnon's collection are a turn of the century model of a Hammond typewriter and original hardbound "Little Orphan Annie" books.

By Rick Moore

Last summer the Reporter ran several articles and letters concerning old bottle works in Shelby County. Readers wrote in about bottle works in Helena and Columbiana.

Local residents prize bottles from those old bottling works, and interest in bottles of all kinds seems to be on the increase.

One couple who has made this an interesting hobby is John and Diane McKinnon of Montevallo. John is an instructor at the University of Montevallo and Jane will be teaching at Thompson Middle School next semester. Their house is filled with vintage furniture and other antiques as well as with their bottle collection.

John tells that he and his wife began collecting old bottles back in 1967 when he and his wife were in graduate school at the University of Alabama and living in Tuscaloosa. Since that time the two have amassed an interesting array of antique glassware.

The McKinnons tell that they have obtained many of their old bottles by digging in several old dumps in the Shelby County Area. However, they admit that it is hard to find valuable or interesting glassware by digging. Another source for their collection has been out of the way nooks and corners in old houses owned by friends and relatives. They have also bought boxes of old bottles at antique auctions in this area.

John and Diane use published antique bottle guides in order to identify old glassware and determine its worth. Diane explains that bottle guides along with general antique guides are available at most bookstores.

Another source of old bottles for the collection has been John's father, who is now an owner of Mac and Ted's Drug Company in Sylacauga. The McKinnons have a three and four cent stamp dispenser, a label dispenser, several old medicine bottles, and other curiosities which came from another old drug store that the elder McKinnon owned at one time.

Some of the interesting old drug bottles dating to the early 1900's contain: Oil of rose- for creams and lotions; aromatic fluids; Milk of Magnesia; St. Joseph Aspirin; Lysol; Chamberlain's colic, cholera and diahrrea remedy; pluto water - America's physic water; Farr's grey hair remover; tonic extract of cod liver; and Dr. YY. B. Caldwell's elixir.

Other unusual bottles in the collection are from the Alabama College dairy, and the Columbiana Bottling works. The McKinnons have bottles that contained Congress (mineral) water from Satatoga, N.Y.; Edison's Battery Oil; Hind's honey and almond cream; and Horlick's malted milk; and bottles of extract used to flavor drug store ice cream.

One of their most interesting bottles is a round-bottomed ballast bottle used on old sailing ships. These bottles were used to store fluid supplies needed for sailing voyages. When they were emptied, sailors refilled the bottles to add ballast to the vessel. Diane explains that the round bottom style made the bottles unsuitable for other use since they will not stand up, thus insuring that they would be reused strictly for ballast purposes.

In addition to bottles, the McKinnons have collected oddities and antiques from Satillo, Mexico, where they bought an old key ring and jail lock, to 50 feet of water in the Gulf of Mexico where they salvaged a brass valve from a 1910 German tugboat, the Keiser.

Other items owned by the McKinnons dating to the turn of the century and before include: a protectograph check stamper, a butter churn, original Coca-Cola glasses, an assortment of old soda fountain ware, a Hammond typewriter, a lettering kit for retail signs, and an old mimeograph machine.

As the McKinnons will attest, bottle and antique collecting is a popular and rewarding hobby. They are just two of many people in this area who have similar interests. They say that all one needs is an interest and a desire to sift through old junk in order to find unusual and valuable collectors' items.

LOCK AND KEY - - John McKinnon points to a mounted jail lock and key from Saltillo, Mexico. Next to the lock is a three and four cent stamp dispenser. Behind him are shelves containing antique bottles. The labels bordering this story are from an old drug store in Sylacauga once owned by McKinnon's father.

LIVING ROOM ANTIQUES - - Diane McKinnon stands by a pedal operated organ that has been in her family for many years. Other antiques adorn the living room and other parts of the McKinnon's house.

County experiences business expansion

By Marcia M. Sears, Editor
Shelby County Reporter

Business expansion is the number one story in Shelby County this week.

On every hand industries, businesses and governmental agencies are growing and expanding in the county, even though other parts of the nation seem to be facing leaner times.

The message that business is good in Shelby County is told on nearly every side.

The banks are all reporting greater earnings and deposits. Officers of all the county's banks told the Reporter this week they are optimistic about the future.

New industries are underway, and older industries are working to full capacity.

The energy crisis that is widely discussed throughout the world, has had little or no effect in this area to date.

Housing is undergoing a slowdown, but real estate prices are holding up and builders look forward to renewed building activity this spring.

The latest measure of the Shelby County unemployment rate placed it at 3.6 percent. Bill Varden, manager of the Calera office of the state Employment Service told the Reporter that when new methods of computing the unemployment rate are put into effect, he expects it will be even lower in the county.

The area is seeing some of its native sons and daughters return now that more employment opportunities are opening up.

Evidences of growth and expansion include the opening of a new shopping center in Pelham with a discount grocery, Food World, a drug store, Big B, and a boutique that sells women's clothing. Other retail shops are preparing to open there.

In Columbiana, Templin's grocery store became a supermarket following a major expansion. Strickland's Clothing announced an expansion plan, and the Columbiana Jewelry is expanding. A new discount dry goods is expected to open on Main Street soon. Brown Lumber and Building Supply plans to open soon as a new business in Columbiana. Clay Fabrics is another new store that opened within the week. Sherman Holland has reopened his automobile lot in Columbiana.

Jerry Busby is starting a new business called Shelby County Meat, which will operate at a location on Highway 119 between Montevallo and Siluria. Busby plans to provide freezer services for customers.

Alabama Power is building its warehouse near the county airport and moving along with its major project there. It is also expanding power lines in several parts of the county. Major construction is going on at Wilsonville to provide more electricity in the future.

In Montevallo the firm Electrical Specialty Products is waiting for six consecutive days of dry weather to begin its new plant. The city government is undertaking to build a new building for the fire department. A new machine shop and Electric Motor Repair have opened. The second phase of the development of the Indian Highlands subdivision is underway.

The Welcome Wagon organization has found the growth to be enough to set up services in Alabaster, Pelham and Montevallo.

Top twenty tax list shows revenue rise

The year's list of top twenty taxpayers in Shelby County brings the railroads back into the lineup. Following suits for reassessment, the railroads are paying taxes that were disputed during 1972. This year it took over $12,000 in tax money to make the top twenty, whereas it only took $8,000 the year before.

Southern Electric Generating Company retained its number one title, although it paid $30,000 less in taxes than it did for 1972.

In second place, as usual, is the Alabama Power Company. This year, however, the power company paid more than twice what it did for last year.

Colonial Pipeline and Plantation Pipeline paid virtually the same amount as they paid the year before, keeping them at third and fourth position.

While most of the companies paid more than they did for the 1972 tax year, some paid about the same amount. Abex Corporation, Moore-Handley, U.S. Gypsum, and Reeves Brothers Siluria Textiles saw little or no increase. The Mead Corporation, Kimberly-Clark, and Southern Cement (Martin-Marietta) paid less than they did for the year before.

1. Southern Electric Generating Co. $755,088.70
2. Alabama Power Company $408,420.40
3. Colonial Pipeline $120,316.40
4. Plantation Pipeline $112,338.00
5. South Central Bell $90,173.10
6. Southern Cement (Martin-Marietta) $72,318.95
7. Southern Railway $54,795.50
8. Abex Corporation $49,818.56
9. L & N Railroad $44,213.00
10. National Standard $30,715.31
11. Moore-Handley $23,964.50

CALERA ADDS TO CITY HALL - Workmen install framing to install paneling in a new office under construction at the Calera City Hall. The office will be used by the police department.

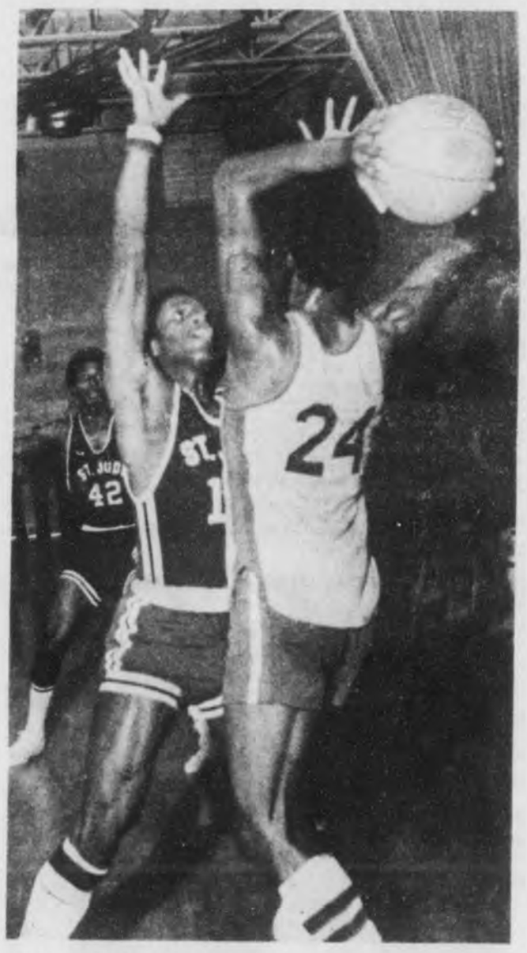
Three men arrested in sabotage case

Three suspects have been arrested by Shelby County Sheriff's officers in connection with the sabatoging of six transmission line towers in the Westover area.

Arrested were Billy Dicky of Oneonta, John Ed McAneas, Jr. of Blountsville, and James Allen Brown of Birmingham. All three men had been employed by Commonwealth Electric Corporation of Lincoln, Nebraska.

Commonwealth Electric is erecting a line of transmission towers for the Alabama Power Company. The new power line will convey electricity from Wilsonville's SEGCO plant across the mountainous terrain of north Shelby County to Leeds.

Shelby County Sheriff C.P. "Red" Walker told the Reporter that the three defendants were arrested Monday and charged with destroying the property of another, a misdemeanor.



Walker explained that the case poses a legal problem. Since no power lines were connected to the new towers, persons responsible for the sabatoge were not dealing with interstate commerce and could not be charged with a felony.

Since interstate commerce laws were not violated, the FBI had no jurisdiction in the case, Walker said. Sheriff Walker, chief deputy Joe Roden and deputy sheriff Cecil Nummy investigated the case.

Six different cases were made against Dicky and McAneas since the six towers were not connected by transmission lines and represented six independant entities. One case was made against Brown.

Sheriff Walker said that damage to the towers is Douglas H. Ballard announces this week that he intends to qualify as a candidate for the Shelby County Commission, District No. 2, subject to the action of the Democratic primary.

A member of the Montevallo Methodist Church, Ballard lives on the Flying "X" Ranch near Montevallo.

He is owner- operator of X-Ray Service and Sales Co. and Ballard X-Ray Co., Chairman of the Board of The Bank of Pelham, a member of the Board of Directors of Brookwood Medical Center Hospital, President of Alaray Incorporated, President of Railway Supply Company, and Vice-President of P.E. Doug Ballard is married to the former Betty Ruth Wesley. He indicated to the Reporter that while he thrives on keeping busy and can always find plenty to do, he has some very positive reasons for entering this campaign which he will explain in detail at a later date.

District 2 on the Commission comprises the southwestern part of the county, including Montevallo, Wilton, Pea Ridge, Dogwood, Calera, Siluria, Maylene and most of Alabaster.

TIME FOR HEART FUND–Rick McDow (left), chairman of the 1974 Shelby County Heart Fund drive and Joe Dean, president of the county Heart Fund unit, remind residents that the local drive is scheduled for February. Heart diseases will be responsible for over 53% of all deaths in the United States this year.

Parents favor school schedule

Daylight savings time will not affect the school schedule in Shelby County. Although many school buses now leave during the dark, an apparent majority of families are in favor of leaving the school day as it is. Based on a poll carried out last week by the Board of Education, parents favor the present schedule by a 2 to 1 margin.

In a memorandum sent home with each child, Superintendent Elvin Hill asked parents to indicate on the note whether they preferred the 8 a.m. to 3 p.m. day, or if they wished to have it changed to a 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. day.

Hill added that such a change would only be needed until March 15, 1974, since the sun will rise one hour earlier than it did on January 15.

On Friday, January 18, Hill

In Alabaster council meeting--

Dan Gillis named to six-year term on the city water and gas board

Dan Gillis was named to a six year term on the Alabaster Water and Gas Board by members of the Alabaster city council Monday night at a regularly scheduled meeting. Gillis will fill a vacancy caused by the expiration of the term of board member Gray Jones.

The council acted on the recommendation of the Water and Gas Board that Gillis be appointed to fill the position.

In other action, the alabaster city council moved to hire Andrea Burgess as a full time secretary to assist city clerk Dot Henry. Mrs. Burgess has been a part-time employee at the city hall for some time.

The council also accepted city finance chairman Dan Acker's suggestion to purchase a used printing calculator. The instrument will be used to keep accounts in the city clerk's office.

The Alabaster council further moved to reimburse city employees taking the Emergency Medical Training course at Shelby Memorial Hospital after the employees completed the course and took the final exam.

Nolan Hardin, director of the Montevallo district of the Alabama Power Company, appeared before the council and introduced Walt Davis. Davis will be heading the Alabaster office of the Alabama Power Company.

Councilman James S. Gould reported that a fence is being erected around the new utilities building and that the area around the building will be graveled.

Gould also discussed the possibility of a clean-up campaign for the city of Alabaster to coincide with a similar county sponsored drive. Gould suggested that the campaign should be scheduled for April or May of this year.

Councilman Acie L. Langston was not present at Monday night's meeting.

Anti-zoning supporters win Saturday Beat 12 election

In the largest voter turnout ever recorded in Beat 12, residents of that area defeated the zoning measure. In the election on Saturday, January 19, the vote was 595 to 478 against the zoning plan, making 1,073 votes cast at the New Hope Cumberland Presbyterian Church fellowship hall.

Voters turned out early and late to cast their ballots, with 178 people voting within the first seventy-five minutes. Because of a recent change in boundary lines for Beat 12, a number of voters were qualified to vote in the Saturday election, although their names were not on voter lists. Many of these voters cast challenge ballots. There were 52 "no" challenge votes and 19 "yes" challenge votes.

The zoning election was the climax of a hotly contested fight between those in favor of zoning and those who strongly opposed the plan to let the county planning commission have jurisdiction. The issue came up a little more than a month ago when a group of voters drew up a petition asking Probate Judge Conrad Fowler to call the election for the 19th of January. Since that time both sides have waged a campaign to win the election for their group. It has been a month of friendly as well as bitter rivalry, with an occasional cry of outside interference.

Although this is the third time that Beat 12 has defeated the zoning measure, it looks as though a fourth election may be in the offing. William Pittman, president of the Indian Springs Civic Club, says that since the plan was defeated by only a five percent margin, his group will probably soon obtain enough signatures to petition another election.

While the voters were anything but unanimous in the zoning election, most of them agreed to sign a petition asking highway officials to install a traffic light at the junction of Highway 31 and Cahaba Valley (Indian Springs) Road.

A large number felt that a light is a must to get onto and off of the highway during peak traffic. One Valleydale resident told the Reporter that although he rarely travels through the Cahaba Valley, he is still in favor of a traffic light. The petition is to be sent to Governor Wallace and the state highway department.

From President Nixon

Student receives personal reply

Thompson High School ninth grader Zeta Rea Elrod was surprised when she opened her mail a few days ago. It's not every day that a person gets a letter from President Nixon!

A couple of months ago Zeta had written a letter addressed to the President, for an assignment in freshman English. Her teacher, Mrs. Martha Wall, decided that there was no reason to let the letters go to waste, so she mailed them.

In the letter Zeta had told the president about her classes, the school band, and various school activities. After the letter was mailed, she forgot about it until she received a reply on White House stationery. Addressed Miss Zeta Elrod, Rt. 1, Maylene, the letter began:

"Dear Miss Elrod,

No matter how busy the day is, I always enjoy hearing from young friends, and learning about your school activities. Your studies can give you an awareness of what you are, but, most importantly, will help you discover what you can be if you have the courage and have the will. Keep up the good work! With my best wishes for the years ahead,

Sincerely,
Richard Nixon."

Mrs. Wall stated that several times she has mailed student's letters to the President, but that this is the first personal reply.

New Bethel water works in operation

The Bethel Water System is all ready to go. After years of planning, seeking government approval and awarding contracts, the lines are in place and many customers are already using the water, according to Sherell McClure.

The Bethel Water System serves several communities north and east of Columbiana, including Bethel, Kingdom, Four Mile and Old Chapel. The lines run along Highway 25 from Cates Crossing to Old Chapel Church. The system is purchasing water from the City of Columbiana.

McClure wishes to notify all those who are eligible to use water on the Bethel system, that all individual water user meters have been installed and are ready for customers to connect for service.

He says the first water bills will be sent to most customers the latter part of February. A few large quantity users will be billed in late January.

McClure advises that the bill will cover all water used to the date of billing, plus a ten dollar meter deposit for all those who have not paid the deposit by the billing date.

Anyone having questions concerning the water service from the Bethel system may telephone 669-6255.

informed each school of the results of the poll. He said that of those forms returned, better than half were in favor of keeping the opening time as it is. He indicated that 4,333 families voted to keep the schedule at 8 a.m. to 3 p.m. Only 2148 families voted to postpone the opening time to 9 a.m. Hill stated that approximately 3000 families had failed to return the form

Merchant of Terror

Walters is named author of the year

Dr. John Bennett Walters, Jr. of Montevallo has been named Alabama Author of the Year for non-fiction, by the Alabama Library Association.

He was selected for the honor on the basis of his newly published book, "Merchant of Terror", a study on the life of Civil War general William T. Sherman.

The awards are based on the literary quality of the author's recent work, according to Mrs. Shirley J. Fowler, chairman of the awards and citations committee of the Alabama Library Association in Tuscaloosa.

The award will be presented to Dr. Walters at the association's annual convention in Montgomery on April 4.

Dr. Walters is Dean of the College of Arts and Sciences at the University of Montevallo. His book has won wide acclaim throughout the United States since its publication in late 1973.

Woman thankful for trash program

Letter to Editor:

The new Shelby County garbage pick-up program is the best news I heave read in a long time. We have lived just outside the city limits of Montevallo for eighteen and one half years.

During most of these years Coosa River Newsprint Company, a division of Kimberly Clark has maintained a very good place for disposal of garbage just off highway 10 between Aldrich and Pea Ridge.

Periodically they bulldozed dirt to cover the garbage and scooped out a new place. A great many people have been so inconsiderate and impatient that they would not drive the one quarter mile to the garbage dump. They dumped garbage on the side of the road, in the road, and even in the fire lanes the company had cut.

It finally was so bad that the company found it impossible to maintain the place any longer.

In my opinion we owe a great deal of thanks to the newsprint company for maintaining the garbage dump all these years and thanks to Shelby County for their new program.

Very Truly Yours,
Mary Lee Mahaffey
Montevallo, Ala.

THE GARBAGE HEAP--Unsightly piles of trash accumulated on dozens of back roads around the county. This illegal dumping of debris is ugly, unhealthy, and dangerous.

TRASH BAGS--These bags are symptoms of the affluent dumper. He keeps his garbage neatly collected at home. He dumps it all in one tidy bundle. The trouble is that these neat bags do not stay that way.

Garbage pickup will change county

by George C. Starcher,
Shelby County Department of Public Works

In the cold gray dawn a workman leaves his trailer home. Later on a businessman departs for his office from a secluded second home in rural Shelby County. Each carries a bag of garbage. Shortly after three a high school youth with squirrel hunting on his mind finds his mother insistent that he take a trailer load of household debris to the landfill. Far away on the banks of the Coosa a fishing week nd is completed and a large bag is filled with beer cans, cold drink bottles, and papers and remnants of food, and dropped into the boat behind the family car.

These people all have one thing in common. Each has a distasteful job to do. The men cast a wary eye up and down the highway and hurriedly unload their garbage on the shoulder of the road. Junior pulls into the sideroad and unloads his unsightly mess - the landfill trip would take an hour and dusk would prevent his hunt.

An adequate garbage collection system would have made these unpleasant jobs unnecessary. Instead of ending up, illegally, as a costly blemish on Shelby County's scenic countryside the garbage would have been carried to a landfill operation to be buried daily, sanitarily.

Throw away bottles, beer cans, paper and plastic containers tossed out of moving vehicles after use will not be intercepted by the collector. However, the major causes of illegal dumping household debris will be eliminated when a county-wide system of collection becomes effective.

The franchise system being studied for use in Shelby County will place responsibility on collectors to offer regular service to every household no matter how remotely located. Under State law even that vacation cabin on the banks of the Coosa is a residence and, as such, must be served. Under the system the head of every household, INCLUDING the owner of that cabin, must either subscribe to the services of the franchised collector or obtain a certificate of exemption from the health department.

Surely the small fee paid to the collector will pay dividends as it eliminates both the unpleasant tasks of carrying away one's own garbage and the guilt that must be felt by the roadside dumpers who now mar Shelby County's lovely landscape.

And - just maybe - stopping the large volume dumpers may inspire the riding public to keep THEIR litter inside the car until it can be placed in a proper waste receptable.

The Childersburg STAR

It's remarkable how our concepts change and ingenuity responds to challenge.

Municipalities, industry and even individuals in recent years have been called upon to invest literally billions of dollars in sewage disposal systems. Childersburg may even be forced by the Federal government to spend an additional $1 million in the near future on its sewerage disposal.

But in the process of "properly" disposing of waste materials, we may be flushing energy and money down the drain.

MOTHER EARTH NEWS, Hendersonville, N.C., recently reported how an Indiana farmer was beating the energy crisis by making his own "homemade fuel oil" and "homemade gasoline" with which he can run an automobile engine, power a gas stove, fuel lamps, operate a gas refrigerator and fire a space heater.

The source of this marvelous energy--are you ready for this?--cow manure.

According to MOTHER EARTH NEWS, Richard Shuttleworth, of Redkey, Indiana, has constructed a methane generator, a large composting unit that turns organic waste of any kind--plant, animal or human--into nitrogen-rich fertilizer and methane gas. Methane is the major component of the natural gas that is distributed in Childersburg and elsewhere.

At a recent press demonstration on the Shuttleworth farm, a large crowd ate eggs that were fried on a stove fueled by methane and enjoyed soft drinks and beer cooled in a methane-fueled gas refrigerator. A gaslight, a space warmer and a gas water heater, all powered by methane, were also displayed.

The star of the show was a 1948 Chevrolet automobile engine that was mounted on a portable welder. First, Shuttleworth ran the engine on gasoline to show that it was a stock engine that had not been modified in any way.

Then he started the engine several times and ran it on methane piped directly from the waste digester through a length of ordinary garden hose. The spectators were able to observe the "bonnet" of the digester slowly collapse as the vapors inside were consumed by the internal combustion unit.

Of course the spectators thought the demonstrations were all very "cute", but there was considerable doubt as to the practicality and economic feasibility of such a unit.

Their skepticism was answered by L. John Fry, a former South African pig farmer who was flown in for the press demonstration.

Several years ago, Fry designed and built one of the bio-gas plants on his 1,000-head pig farm south of Johannesburg at a cost of approximately $10,000.

He admitted the installation cost was high. But in the first six years of the plant's operation, Fry stated he harvested more than $16,000 worth of methane gas from waste produced by his livestock. In addition, he estimated he saved approximately $20,000 on manure handling costs and he reaped an additional windfall of nitrogen-rich fertilizer worth at least another $20,000. So on his initial $10,000, Fry estimates he received $56,000 or more return in the first six years.

One farmer at the press conference related how the Federal government had recently required him to install a $25,000 settling pond for the waste produced by 5,000 head of cattle on his farm and feedlot. He stated, "That's money that I will never see again . . . but if I had put it into one of these composting units, I'd more than get my $25,000 back every two years."

Shuttleworth's son, John, said the design of the unit had been simplified considerably since the first model was built and any home craftsman should be able to build one of the generators.

"We may even make a connection with one or more manufacturers during the next few months and, if we do, you'll be able to purchase a prefabbed digester that can be installed on a farm, in an apartment house, or in a home's utility room as easily as you can now install central air conditioning. The unit will operate just as automatically too. The waste that you flush away or pour down the kitchen disposal will be the gas that fuels your range or powers your yard lamp next week--at no cost," he added.

Representatives of the gas industry have tested the gas brewed up from cow manure and came to the conclusion, "It's a hotter blaze than you'll get from the natural gas we sell our consumers."

Shuttleworth's idea isn't exactly new. It is one that has been used extensively in fuel poor countries such as India for a number of years. Until Shuttleworth put his unit together, little had been done in the U.S. with the concept.

Now that the concept has been proven practical and we are capable of manufacturing high-grade fuel from waste products at a time of fuel shortage, it might not be long before a sizable number of consumers start clamoring for the commercial marketing of digesters.

And many of them will likely be asking this question: Why, with the enormous tax-guzzling staffs of graduate engineers and scientists in the Environmental Protection Agency and other Federal bureaucracies, did it take a cattle farmer in Indiana and a pig farmer in South Africa to come up with an idea that would save the taxpayers money while solving a major environmental problem?

Reader requests hunters' names

Letter to Editor:

For the last two weeks the Shelby County Reporter has had an article about hunters killing fawns and does which is against the law, so your paper said.

If this is so, why didn't you print the names of the ones who broke the law?

Yours truly,
Mrs. Melvin Grant
Montevallo, Ala.

Editor's reply:

Our only excuse is the pressure of time. We normally do list such names in connection with stories of this nature, but we did not take the time to check the records last week.

Inferior Court Judge L.C. Payne looked up the records for us in the office of the Circuit Clerk, and said that those accused of having possession of doe deer are Wayne Howell, P.O. Box 342, Siluria; Michael D. Dixon, Rt. 1, Box 828, Alabaster, and Billy Sparks, P.O. Box, Siluria. A hearing on the charges is scheduled to take place February first, Judge Payne said.

Committee reviews new budget reform

by Senator Jim Allen

The drive to reform Congressional budget procedures has been long and tortuous. In late 1971 the President requested Congress to hold to his proposed $250 billion budget in the interest of using fiscal restraint to cool inflation, but liberal spenders in Congress ignored this plea and broke that budget by more than $7 billion. The President received much support from the American public when he charged Congress with being spendthrift and lacking in fiscal responsibility.

As a result of this situation the Senate Government Operations Committee, of which I am a member, ordered a full study of budgetary problems, and six months ago the Committee began writing legislation designed to give Congress the tools needed to do its job. I am optimistic that when the 93rd Congress completes its work later this year, it will have approved the first major overhaul of the budgetmaking process in 50 years.

Simply stated, our Committee's objective is to develop, at the outset of each session, a frame work within which Congress' spending decisions would proceed. A new Congressional Office of the Budget would be created as a counterpart to the President's Office of Management and Budget, and would give Congress its own capability to create a Federal Budget, something which is impossible now. The Federal fiscal year would be changed from July 1 to October 1, giving Congress additional time to act on spending bills.

Committees would have to enact new spending authorizations by May 31, after which a concurrent resolution would have to be adopted no later than June 30, setting an overall spending ceiling, the level of revenues and the level of the public debt.

Appropriations would have to be acted on before September 20, but before any appropriations bill is sent to the President, all must be totaled and if that total exceeds the established spending ceiling, the Appropriations Committee must cut back on proposed spending and then report this action in a ceiling enforcement bill. Passage of this bill then triggers the release of the amended appropriations bill for Presidential consideration.

The approach which our committee recommends retains the existing appropriations structure, but improves it by means of the new concurrent resolution on the budget. Existing committees will continue to function much as they have in the past because there is no effort nor any wish to make change just for change's sake.

Viewed in its broadest application, this legislation may well be the single most significant piece of legislation Congress has dealt with in many years, and it will certainly receive my intensive study and full attention during the coming months.

Attention Wilbur Mills: 'Next Year' is here!

by Jack Anderson

(Copyright, 1974, by United Feature Syndicate, Inc.)

WASHINGTON — The powerful House Ways and Means chairman, Wilbur Mills, has been promising tax reforms for two years. In 1972 and again in 1973, he promised to make this his first priority — next year.

Two next years have now come and gone without any noticeable improvement in the tax laws. On the contrary, each Christmas during the scramble to adjourn, new tax benefits have been hung on the Christmas tree for the special interests. Each new benefit has cost the rest of the taxpayers a few more million dollars.

But now the taxpayers are up in arms. They have discovered that President Nixon paid no more taxes on a $250,000 annual income than an ordinary worker with the same size family pays on a $7,500 income. Other millionaires are using loopholes and shelters to avoid paying their fair share of the taxes.

The oil companies, for example, are paying only token taxes in the United States on soaring profits. Some of the oil giants get away with a tax rate less than three per cent, compared to 50 per cent for other corporations.

Probably no other group in America collects more benefits from Uncle Sam and passes out more favors to politicians than the unbelievably wealthy oil barons. We were able to trace $5 million from oil sources into President Nixon's re-election campaign. Millions more went to congressional candidates, including members of the House Ways and Means Committee which writes the tax laws.

The little taxpayers don't have the money to make big campaign contributions. But they have the votes. Now they are letting their congressmen know their votes this year will go to those who fight for tax reforms.

Impeachment Deadline: House Judiciary Chairman Peter Rodino has privately assured House Republican leader John Rhodes that the presidential impeachment inquiry should be concluded in April. My own check with committee members and staffers indicates Rodino will have trouble meeting that deadline.

The committee hasn't yet obtained the special subpoena powers necessary to secure important evidence. Meanwhile, committee sleuths have been spending their time studying the work of other investigations. Little or no independent digging has been done.

In some cases, documents turned up by other committees haven't even been requested by the Judiciary staff. Some of Rodino's investigators have been passing the time playing cards.

In order to meet the tentative April time schedule, the staff would have to complete all of the necessary background work during the month of February. Hearings would have to begin no later than March, with the conclusion in April.

Realists on the committee doubt that a verdict can be reached in April. The timing, they say, will depend on how much independent investigating the committee staff can complete. Chairman Rodino, meanwhile, is more committed to a thorough investigation than a tentative deadline.

Professional Amateurs: The public will probably never learn the whole story behind the whistles, rattles and hums on the Watergate tapes. The President's spokesmen and lawyers have tried to give the impression the people in the White House are amateurs at tape recording.

But there is evidence that the White House communications experts are far too professional to have produced the garbled mess they eventually turned over to the courts.

We recently reported, for example, that the White House is preparing to spend $200,000 for a recording system to tape the crooners and comedians who appear in the East Room. The specifications provided to bidders were prepared by the President's communications men. These specifications are incredibly detailed and highly sophisticated.

Too Many Frills: There has been an almightly howl from the Pentagon about the need for more millions to meet the rising cost of defense. Ominous warnings have been issued that the Soviets are overtaking us in strategic power.

But a comparative study of the American and Soviet military budgets shows that a far greater share of the U.S. expenditures goes for frills. Most Soviet soldiers are combat troops. Most American soldiers are engaged in providing services to make military life cozy.

The U.S. armed forces have also become top-heavy with brass. The number of flag officers has actually gone up, as the number of fighting men has gone down. At the height of World War II, a mere 20 four- and five-star generals and admirals commanded a total military force of over 12 million men. Today, the armed services have 39 generals and admirals of this rank commanding only two million men.

The brass hats complain over cutbacks in missiles, planes, ships and tanks. But they scream much louder over cutbacks in their chauffeur-driven cars, golf courses, swimming pools, club facilities and other privileges.

The loudest howl has been over the squeeze on military fuel. This is vital, they say, for national security. Yet the generals and admirals continue to be driven and flown around in government cars and planes.

They also don't mention one of the chief causes of the oil shortage. During the height of the Vietnam bombing, our B-52s alone guzzled nearly two-and-a-half million gallons of fuel a day.

Wallace speech will determine future campaigns

by Don Wasson

Gov. George C. Wallace will be an honored guest Feb. 1 in Birmingham at the Jefferson-Jackson Day dinner, which will mark a drastic change in the governor's attitude toward the Democratic Party in general and the Alabama party in particular.

To go back a bit, in 1970 the state party restructured itself, enlarging the Executive Committee from 72 members to 111 and effectively shutting the pro-Wallace faction out of the picture.

It was a necessary move, if the state party was to remain in the national party or, more accurately, if the power structure in the state party was to keep control.

It was either that or turn the state party over to Dr. John Cashin and his National Democratic Party of Alabama (NDPA).

So the party restructured, and assured the national party that nobody would be able to run as a third party candidate all over the country and as a Democrat in Alabama, as George Wallace had done in 1968.

The action brought down the wrath of the governor and in his gubernatorial campaign that year, he vowed that when elected, he would call the committee back into session and turn the whole thing around.

"I can do that and I will do that," he vowed. But the fact was that he couldn't do it, because the Democratic Party runs its own affairs and while the governor may be the top man in state government, he isn't anything unless he controls the state party and Wallace had lost control.

On Feb 2, the day after the Jefferson-Jackson Day dinner, the Democratic Executive Committee meets to adopt the rules for the '74 primary and a lot has happened since 1970 when the loyalists outmaneuvered the governor.

Not the least of these happenings was the re-conversion of George Wallace from a third party firebrand to a dyed-in-the-wool Democrat.

He showed the national party in the presidential primaries in 1972 that he was a major vote getter and the attempt on his life ended what could have been a dramatic confrontation at the Convention of '72. At the time he was shot, he had more popular votes than anyone in the primaries.

As a result of his showing, the national party has courted George Wallace and continues to court him. It is very likely that he will be the party's vice presidential nominee in 1976 no matter who gets the presidential nomination.

And to be big in the national party councils, it is vital to George Wallace to be big in his own state party--to control it, in fact.

So Alabama can expect an all-out effort by the Wallace forces to win a majority of the seats on the Democratic Executive Committee, which will be elected in the May primary.

Therefore it would be reasonable to assume that whatever remarks the governor has to make at the Democratic bash the night before the committee meets will be of prime importance to his political future and to the future of Alabama.

Because of his presidential ambitions, George Wallace is a changed man. That change has become apparent to national Democrats and it is giving the liberal wing a lot of consternation.

It has been more and more apparent to Alabamians every day but to first public expression of any change in basic approach to government, and to Democratic Party operations may come in the Birmingham speech.

Nuclear device tests roadways

The State of Alabama Highway Department is now using nuclear powered devices to test the density of roadway layers of earthwork and asphalt, Highway Director Ray Bass said today.

The machines which have been in use by the Department for more than a year are powered by a radium like material known as cesium.

It is necessary, Bass said to test new roadways when they are being built in order to insure that state and federal compaction regulations are met. If the layers of asphalt and earthwork are not compacted to certain densities the highway, as a result, is of poor quality and results in extensive maintenance problems.

E.E. Moore, of the Highway Department's compaction laboratory said the nuclear powered machine can give them an accurate density reading in approximately 5 minutes, whereas, the old laboratory type method took a minimum of 1 hour.

TESTING NEW HIGHWAYS--Using a nuclear powered density testing device, Bill Self, of the State of Alabama Highway Department takes a reading to determine the density of newly laid asphalt on a readway near Montgomery.

At UM College Night

Ellis sisters to receive alumni award

Two members of a widely known Shelby County and Alabama family will be named 1974 Alumni of the Year at College Night festivities at the University of Montevallo.

Two sisters, Mrs. Louise Ellis Cramer and Mrs. Evelyn Ellis Mullen, who are natives of Columbiana, will be honored with the title this year. It marks the first time in history the title has gone to two persons.

Mrs. Cramer and Mrs. Mullen are daughters of the late Handy Ellis, former Lt. Governor of Alabama. Their mother and brother, Frank Ellis, continue to reside in Columbiana.

Both Mrs. Cramer and Mrs. Mullen were leaders for many years in the public school system of Dothan. They now serve as co-directors of the women's division of City National Bank in Dothan.

The series of events that constitutes College Night is this year scheduled for February 7-8-9. The new date departs from a precedent set in 1927 when the event was scheduled in late February and became, by oral tradition, a celebration of George Washington's birthday.

The new calendar adopted by the university this year made the change in schedule necessary.

The annual clash between Purples and Golds also serves as a setting for homecoming festivities, to be held this year on Saturday, Feb. 9.

College Night team leaders this year are Dru Minton, Warrior, and Bill Meitl, Oakley, Kan., for the Purples, and Gold leaders Diana Durham, Albany, Ga., and Carmon Love, Dixiana. All four are seniors.

The Purples presently hold a one-win edge 27-26 over their Gold rivals in the total count of College Night victories, and will be trying for a comeback win this year after bowing to the Golds in 1973.

The victory crown has been swapped back and forth for the past four years. The Golds own the longest win streak in the series, fashioning a chain of seven back-to-wins from 1961 through 1967.

College Night activities originally involved competition between classes and featured skits, stunts, music and other forms of entertainment. The two-team system was established in 1921 to celebrate the institution's 25th anniversary, with teams being named for traditional school colors of purple and gold.

The site of College Night productions has shifted three times--from Main Hall where it all began to Reynolds Hall in 1927, and three years later to the newly completed Palmer Hall auditorium where productions are presently staged.

College Night became the backdrop for homecoming in 1941.

Coeducation came to Montevallo in 1957 and soon after that the nature of College Night competition took on a wider base. The festival now features a series of athletic events including both football and basketball.

The heart of College Night still remains on stage, however, where students build productions from the ground up. This includes original scripts and music, sets and lighting, and all other elements of stage production.

State Democrats launch year of political unity

State Democratic Party Chairman, Robert S. Vance, has announced that the Jefferson-Jackson Day Banquet, which will be held at the Birmingham Civic Center, February 1, will kick off a new political year of unity and strength for the State Democratic Party.

As evidence of this "dramatic new spirit" within the Democratic Party, Vance said that highest ranking Democrats of all political persuasions will be at the festive gathering. Amon g those that the party chairman listed as expected to attend are Governor Wallace, Senator John Sparkman and Senator Jim Allen. Vance was hopeful that former Senator Lister Hill, the former Democratic governors, the four Democratic Congressmen, and other Democratic officeholders will be in attendance.

Chairman Vance said that this was part of the Democratic Party's "New Year resolution," to reach out to the people so that the people might know more about the Democratic Party and so that the Party might benefit from the ideas and concerns of the people.

While the Democratic Party has always been the strongest Party in Alabama, it has not always been the most "unified". In recent elections, some Democrats have supported Republicans, run as independent candidates or merely chosen not to take part in Democratic campaigns. The Party sees the 1974 trend as definityly running toward unification.

Vance said, "With the New Year, Democrats will be making a special effort to find out what's going on in the minds of the people of Alabama so that the Party can be more representative of their views, and to nominate and elect candidates that support these views. We are determined to develop a meaningful spirit of unity that will reinforce Alabama's voice in national Democratic councils.

RAW MATERIALS – - Ingots of copper-nickel alloy are the raw materials for special flanges being forged at the Dixie Alloy plant in Calera. The factory manufactures custom equipment from stainless steel, nickel and nickel alloys.

FIRST STEP - - The first step in forging a new part is cutting the amount of the metal needed from an alloy bar. Here, Philip Lucas measures exact amount of metal needed before cutting it with a special band saw. The saw is capable of cutting through metal bars 16 inches by 20 inches in size.

Bachelor of science in pulp and paper --

University of Ala. in B'ham gives degree with North Carolina State

A new cooperative program conducted by the University of Alabama in Birmingham and North Carolina State University at Raleigh will enable UAB students to receive a Bachelor of Science degree in pulp and paper science and technology, it was announced today.

Only six institutions in the United States offer a degree program in this field, according to Dean Joseph H. Appleton of the UAB School of Engineering.

The degree is to be granted by North Carolina State to students who complete two years of work on the Birmingham campus and two years at the Raleigh campus.

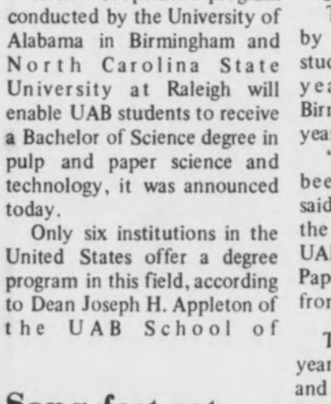
"Arrangements also have been made," Dr. Appleton said, "for a program leading to the B.S. in Engineering from UAB and B.S. in Pulp and Paper Science and Technology from North Carolina State."

This program requires three years in enginneering at UAB and two years in pulp and paper science and technology at North Carolina State.

Dr. Appleton said the joint degree programs were initiated at the request of Alabama industry as a service to state residents wishing to obtain training in pulp and paper technology.

"The rapidly growing pulp and paper industry has an increasing need for engineers in product development, technical service, quality control, chemical research, computer science, environmental disciplines, and many other areas," he added.

Currently enrolled students and new students who meet entrance requirements are eligible for the program. Scholarships are available, as well as financial assistance provided by the Southern Regional Education Board for out-of-state students.



The president of North Carolina State University, John Tyler Caldwell, is widely known throughout Alabama. He served as president of the University of Montevallo for five years, from 1947 to 1952.

Information on the cooperative program may be obtained from the UAB School of Engineering, or School of Forest Resources, North Carolina State University at Raleigh.

SMALL WE DO THINGS, WE COULDN'T DO BIG

. . . and heavy industry

by Marcia M. Sears

When George Frost came to Calera from San Francisco he had in mind building a shop to forge specialty machinery items.

How could he have forseen that first a tornado, and then a business recession would hit before he could get his project completed?

But Frost "stayed with it" and now his forge shop is so successful that three months of back orders are stacked up waiting to be filled.

Dixie Alloy went into production about a year and a half ago. Its specialty is forging flanges and fittings for refineries and nuclear plants, and custom forging in stainless steel, nickel and nickel alloys.

It is thought to be the only forge shop dealing in fine metals in the state.

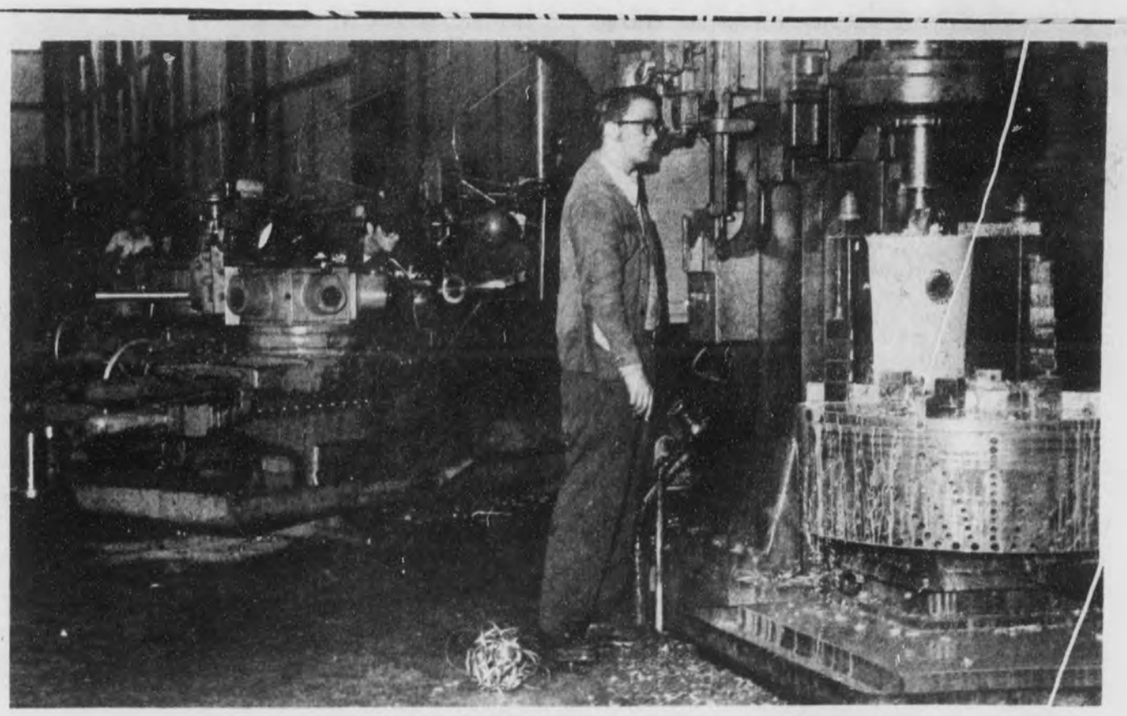
Dixie Alloy buys metals by the bar. Often the bars weigh hundreds of pounds. Machinists cut the metal bars into sections of the correct size and weight to forge whatever the customer needs.

In custom forging, most of the orders come from plants where a broken part has stopped production, Frost explained.

Mass produced parts and fittings are of course much cheaper, but when one is damaged or breaks, replacements are usually not available from a mass producer.

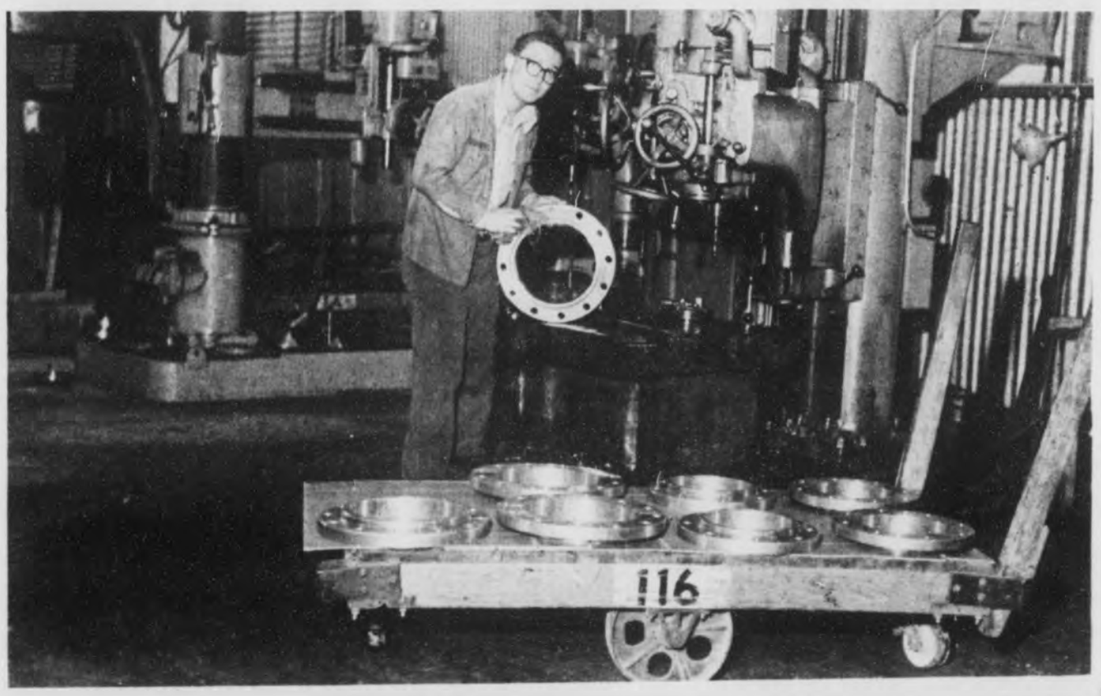
That is when Frost gets a desperate telephone call and goes into overtime to custom forge a part that will fit the customer's needs.

In the Calera forge shop, the precious metal is heated to a temperature where it can be formed into whatever shape is necessary. The metal is not heated to the melting point in a forge shop, Frost emphasized. That is done in foundries.

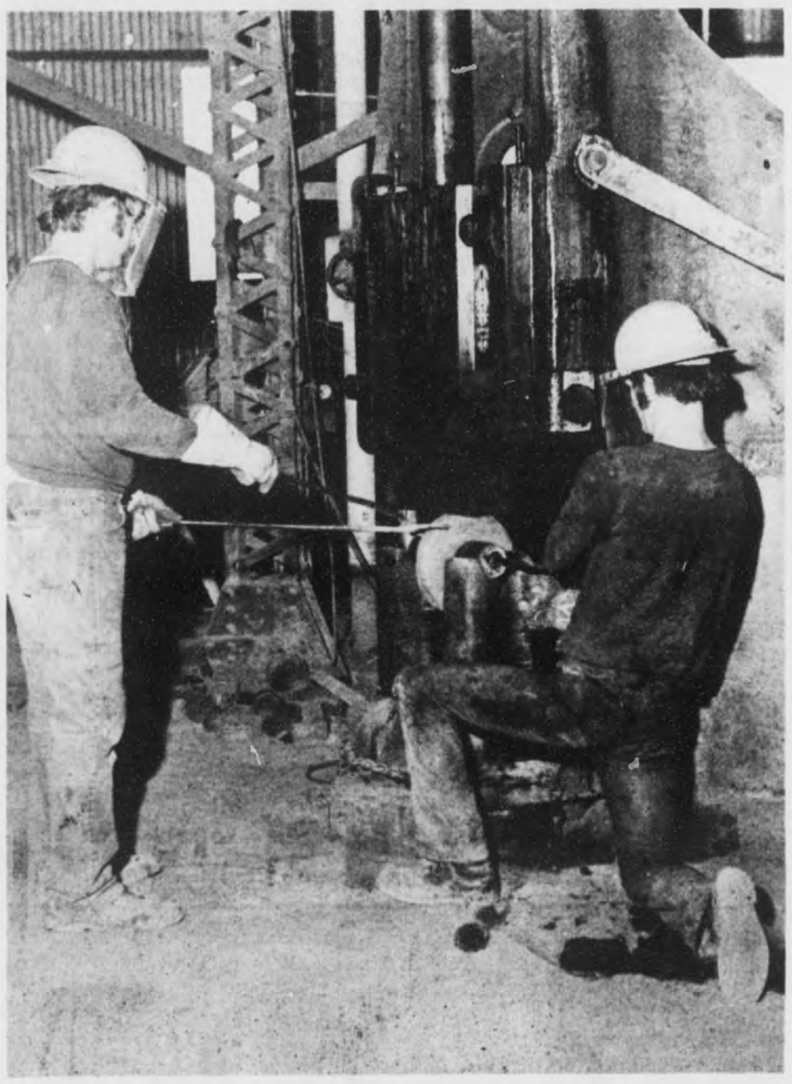


Calera was chosen because of its central location in the Southeastern part of the United States. There are very few forge shops that can fill the types of orders that Dixie Alloy fills. Metals are purchased from foundries throughout the southeast, and finished products are shipped from the Calera plant to locations in the midwest, east and southeast.

When the Shelby County Reporter visited the shop last week, the men were carefully crafting pipe flanges destined for a supplier in Minneapolis, who will send them to a U.S. Navy ship being outfitted on the Great Lakes.



No order is considered too difficult, as long as specifications and measurements are given by the customer, Frost said. The flexibility of custom work in the Dixie Alloy plant is what makes the plant unique.



Obtaining skilled machinists has turned out to be a problem,Frost says. The state of Alabama has helped him with a program to train machinists, but the shortage of skilled men in the field persists.

Frost's days of bad luck seem to be over, with production hitting a high peak every day. But he remembers that he had just completed his building when a 1969 Christmas tornado touched down in Calera and completely demolished the building. Then, just as he finished rebuilding it, the business recession of 1971 set in and demand for machinery items dropped. But once he started production in May of 1972 the story has been good - for Shelby County, for Calera, for Dixie Alloy and George Frost.

IN THE MACHINE SHOP--Kenneth Thrasher operates a large drill (top). Thrasher and the lathe operators in the background precision grind and cut the forged metal parts to the exact dimensions. Thrasher cleans a finished part (below) after drilling the small holes with another drill.

SHAPING UP - -Two workmen use a smaller 2500 pound steam hammer to shape the now doughnut-shaped piece of metal. After attaining the general shape, the forgers send the part to the machine shop to be finished.

Get the facts first on vocational school

By Annie Laurie Gunter

Being fooled about how sy it is to get a good job is e of the worst mistakes that u can make.

Choosing a private cational school is a big cision. You probably want know: "What is the cost?" low hard is it?" "How long es it take?" These are good ngs to find out.

First, and most important, ntact prospective employers. ese are the people who may hiring you. They know what ey want in an employee. eir opinions and general pressions are valuable even if ey don't have the exact swers to your questions. st go to the yellow pages of telephone book. Make a list three companies in your ld of interest who might be ssible employers. Visit, write call the Personnel Offices of se companies to get answers the following questions:

1. Would you hire graduates the school?
2. How many have you ually hired in the last year?
3. Were they hired because school training?
4. Did training make any ference in starting salary?

You may get good training m a school and still have uble getting a job. That is ause there may be few job enings for the skill you have. en schools will say that a tain proportion of their udates get jobs . . . without is in fact. A school may m that a certain job field is le open, when in fact it is . In some fields, vocational ools may even be turning t several times more duates in one vocational ll than there are jobs ilable throughout the entire ted States.

alesmen make money by working hard at being persuasive. In doing this they sometimes have a natural tendency to add a little here and there. That means that you may have to pick out the facts for yourself. When dealing with a vocational school salesman, be especially careful of any of the following "danger signals":

- Salesmen claiming to be "counselor," "advisor", or "educational consultant."
- You must sign a contract immediately in order to be sure to get into the school.
- "Guaranteed" job placement . . . specific top starting salary . . . desperate need for new employees.
- A large percentage of the total tuition cost as down payment.
- Implying a school connection with a major well-known industry or governmental organization.

Don't sign anything until you ask ... What happens if you don't finish the course? Find out what refunds are given. Find out what part of the total payment you get back if for any reason you do not complete the course. Get this information from reading the contract, not just talking with the salesman. Ask questions until you are satisfied.

We in Alabama are fortunate to have 27 vocational technical schools within comm unity distance of anyone wishing to receive vocational training in specific fields. This training is available at nominal cost. We urge you to investigate your State supported technical schools, before obligating yourself to a private vocational school, the benefits from which may be questionable. Write the Office of Consumer Protection for a list of State supported vocational schools.

Best year yet for Shelby County banks

Five county banks offer new improved services

Banking is big business in Shelby County. Ask anyone about it. They'll tell you about their bank, and maybe about a new branch office. The main trends in banking in the county appear to be new services and branch offices. As Shelby County grows so do the county's five banks.

The year 1973 was the biggest year yet for the five area banks. As the county has become more urbanized and more industrialized, the banks have had to gear upwards to handle the growth. And the figures show a tremendous increase in the resources of all the banks.

During the late 1950's and early 60's, there were only four banks in the county. Their assets ranged between $1 and $2 million for Calera, Montevallo, and Alabaster much of the time, while the Columbiana bank handled about $4 million. During 1973 the First Bank of Columbiana nearly reached the $20 million mark; Merchants and Planters, Central State, and the First Bank of Alabaster all operated around the $12 million level. Of course the newest, the Bank of Pelham, is a different story.

The Pelham bank has located in its new building near the Pelham Plaza. It had formerly been housed in a temporary "mini-bank" structure further up the highway. Bank president Garland Horton feels the county's youngest bank has a big future.

The tremendous growth of the Pelham area in the past several years had made it a logical place for a new bank. Having gone into operation on July 13, 1972, the Bank of Pelham now reports assets of $3,723,179. Since Pelham has suddenly become the third largest city in the county according to a special census, the townspeople are anticipating that the bank will grow just as fast.

Donald Latham, chief cashier at the First Bank of Alabaster, reports that his bank has had its biggest year, with increases in deposits and loans. Latham says that the newest service they have offered to their customers is extended hours. They are open until 6 p.m. every Friday night at both the main office and the new branch office in Indian Springs. He adds that the public evidently likes the added hours so that they can bank on their pay day.

The Alabaster bank has long had the main services that any bank has, and Latham adds that the next step upward would appear to be the automatic banking machines. These new mini-banks cost from $30,000 to $60,000 which puts them outside the range of what most area banks are willing to spend at this time. Latham feels that they will soon come to Shelby County banks, but there are no immediate plans for one at Alabaster.

The Merchants and Planters Bank in Montevallo, reports a favorable banking picture for the coming year. President J. Agee Kelly told the Reporter that considering the growth of the area, "It's hard to foresee anything but a good year." The bank is following a plan of maintaining much the same quality and quantity of services.

They are proud of the success of a new type of checking account. Kelly says that their bank is the only one in the county which offers "complete customer checking." Under this plan a family buys a combination of bank services in one package for $3 a month. All checks are furnished, as well as charges on cashier's checks; another part of the package is a $10,000 insurance plan for accidental death cover.ge. Kelly told us that they have customers who began banking at Merchants and Planters Bank to get complete customer checking, since they could not get it elsewhere in the county.

The Montevallo bank has no present plans for branch offices, due to the city's geography. Mr. Kelly told us that under county laws a state bank's branch offices must be located within five miles of the main office. If Merchants and Planters were to establish another office to the north or east, it would overlap into area already well covered. The only new territory within the five-mile radius is in the Bibb and Chilton County direction.

Central State Bank in Calera is beginning its 57th year. The bank has reached a leveling-off place now that it has moved into its new building not yet two years old. Joe Ball, vice president of the bank, says that they are still so new that they do not really need to expand at present. He adds that they have all of the services of a full-service bank, so there does not seem to be any need for additional services.

Central State's president, William Schroeder points out that the bank has shown a 19.7 percent increase in resources over the previous year, an increase of nearly $2 million. The bank has some personnel changes, with Joe Ball now elected to the board of directors. The bank is continuing with a policy of no gimmicks and no giveaways. One innovation is the annual report printed in brochure form.

Schroeder stated at the annual stockholders meeting that "we will strive harder to provide the banking services and financial help that our customers have come to expect and deserve." Vice president Ball adds that the bank intends to continue giving the best service possible to maintain the bank's excellent reputation in the county.

The First National Bank of Columbiana is anticipating a good year under the leadership of president Ross Bob Mullins. As the biggest bank financially, First National has established branch offices in Wilsonville and Cahaba Valley.

The Columbiana bank is the only national bank in the county. In the past year First National bank of Columbiana has also seen phenomenal growth. The bank showed a rise in resources of nearly $4.8 million, an increase of more than 30 percent of its total assets over the previous year.

The two branch offices of First National are experiencing a wave of growth as the county moves forward. Buddy Wyatt, branch manager of the Wilsonville office tells us that they are handling more financial transactions. He feels that the expansion of the Wilsonville steam plant has boosted business at their branch bank.

Richard Trammel, branch manager of the new Cahaba Valley office is faced with anotehr type of expansion. His office, not yet six months old, is in the moddle of one of the county's fastest-growing residential areas. As more families move in from aother areas, the bank feels their presence as many become customers at that location.

The banking picture for the coming year looks good for Shelby County. Banks reflect the total economic picture, and locally that picture appears rosy. New industry, real estate development, and increased income within the county will no doubt be a tremendous boost to the five banks.

Individually some banks may have a better year than the rest. If a rise in development has a direct effect on bank resources, this would mean bigger growth in areas of the county undergoing the greatest expansion. Several bank officials apparently agree with this assumption, predicting immediate effects in the banks and branches in the Highway 31 area.

According to Alabaster's Donald Latham, the banks may be affected by a change discussed by the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation. Since all are FDIC members, they all would be concerned with a big change which could occur with FDIC. The corporation presently insures each depositor for $20,000. However there is talk of raising this sum to $50,000; the results of such an increase are not immediately foreseeable, but doubtless there would be some effects on the banks.

New historical society to cover all of county

The Shelby County Historical Society was officially begun at a meeting held at the Kenneth Penhale home in Helena.

Officers elected were Kenneth Penhale, president; Howard Draper, vice president; and Linda Hinds Conn, secretary.

At the initial meeting on Friday, January 18, plans were made to organize the society on a county-wide basis as the "Shelby County Historical Society." Previous plans were for a local Helena area society, but it was decided to expand it to meet the needs for a county society.

Special guest Mrs. Margaret Sizemore, assistant to the president of Samford University, spoke to the group about how to organize and manage a historical society. She discussed the priorities and projects the society should consider. Mrs. Sizemore, whose descendants came from Helena, showed the group how to draw up their family tree. She found that she shared branches with several people at the meeting.

Mrs. Sizemore, also related some of Helena's history that she had uncovered in her research. She told that the first postmaster of the community was named Naish, and that his salary was $31 a year in 1849. At that time the town was called Hillsboro. The name was changed to Helena in 1872, when Bartharlomew Boyle named the town for his wife Helen Lee Boyle.

Monthly meetings were scheduled for every third Friday of the month. Since the society is to be countywide, the meeting places may change until a permanent place is decided upon.

Those present voted for a small annual dues of $1. Future projects and plans were discussed, including a survey of the county's historical sites and a later placement of roadside markers.

Penhale says that charter membership to the Shelby County Historical Society will be open till March 1, 1974.

Intersection gets light

The Indian Springs Civic Club initiated efforts last May to get improvements made on the Cahaba Valley Road through the Indian Springs area.

Mrs. Virginia Clark, vice president of the ladies auxiliary of the club told the Reporter of several steps that club members have taken to get the road improved and to install a traffic light at the intersection of Cahaba Valley Road and Highway 31.

In May, Leon Ward first wrote to the state highway department on the matter. In late July members of the ladies auxiliary went door to door in the Cahaba Valley and acquired 200 names on a petition to have the road widened and also to have the traffic light, Mrs. Clark said.

On August 17 the auxiliary received a reply from State Highway Director Bass. He told them the project was under study and would be included in the budget for the next fiscal year.

In December Leon Ward again wrote Bass and also talked with Shelby County engineer James Ray. William Pittman, president of the Indian Springs Club Civic Club talked with the fourth Division Corps of Engineers with the state highway department. They told Pittman that a study had been made, and engineers found there is a high percentage of traffic on the Cahaba Valley Road and at the intersection.

Spokesmen for the state highway department promised Pittman that a trip light would be installed at the intersection, Mrs. Clark said.

Mrs. Clark expressed pleasure that others in the Cahaba Valley were also requesting the traffic light, as reported in last week's issue of the Shelby County Reporter.

She is optimistic that improvements can soon be made.

The Cahaba Valley Road is often referred to as the Indian Springs Road. It is officially designated as state highway 119.

Hospital is in the middle of a major building expansion project. Briarcliff Nursing Home continues to expand.

The county school board has a new high school for Pelham and Helena in process and Harpersville has recently re-opened its medical clinic.

These are only a few of the most obvious evidences to support the thesis that good times are at hand in Shelby County and the prospects for the future look bright.

Problems having to do with sewerage are still plaguing some of the county's cities and holding back growth. Problems of garbage and refuse disposal continue to cause headaches to officials, but both of these problems are caused by growth and prosperity. And all the problems are being attacked by city and county governing officials and concenred citizens, who seek solutions in a spirit of good will. This in itself is another sign that good times are at hand.

Auburn expert gives gardening tips

by Rick Moore

Most Shelby Countians are now feeling an economic crunch as all types of consumer goods are soaring in price. Especially hard hit are many families' food budgets. For this reason, as well as a desire for some good home grown vegetables, many residents plan to grow a home garden this summer.

Growing a garden may be a disillusionment to some, however. Many do not anticipate the amount of work and planning required to have a really successful vegetable plot.

One county mercantile store operator remarked about this fact. Last summer he sold seed, plants and equiptment to more people than ever before for planting home gardens. The store owner remarked that many of his garden supply customers knew little or nothing about growing vegetables. Some who invested in seed, fertilizer and other materials ended up not gathering any yield at all because they failed to plan and cultivate properly.

For this reason, Perry M. Smith, horticulturist for the Cooperative extension service at Auburn, spoke about gardening to home demonstration agents Friday morning in a talk at the courthouse. Smith gave the agents information to instruct homemakers -- many of them in the welfare program -- about growing a garden.

Smith explained that anybody can get out of a garden exactly what they put into it, and by careful planning, a gardener can harvest vegetables almost all year in this section of the state.

The size of a good garden is relatively unimportant, he said. Smith continued that a vegetable plot need not require a lot of space. He explained that six tomato plants properly cultivated will produce more tomoatoes than 50 un-cared-for plants will produce.

Most families have to work with a limited number of possibilities for garden locations, but the most important factor in choosing a growing site is the availability of sunlight. If the area does not receive sunshine at least half of the day -- forget it.

Another factor is the soil. Most soils can be improved by adding the proper balance of fertilizer. Smith emphasizes that every garden soil should be tested to determine exactly which type of fertilizer is needed. This is the best way we can use the current short supplies of fertilizer most wisely, he said.

Smith has authorized a pamplet called "Vegetable Garden Handbook" which is available from the county extention office in the courthouse. He recommends that for best results, the gardener should use vegetable varieties most suited for this geographic area. These are listed in the pamplet.

Smith also gave three of the most resistant tomato varieties not listed in the pamplet. These are: Atkinson, Better Boy, and Bonnies Nematode Resistant varieties.

Smith attributes the growing popularity of gardening to the fact that the types of vegetables and fruits which are harvested by hand are expensive and in short supply. Examples of these are okra and strawberries.

The booklet explains how to plan a garden layout and planting schedule. For example, perennial crops such as asparagus and strawberries that take several years to grow need to be planted in their own permanent area of the plot. Types and amounts of vegetables planted should be tailored around a family's eating habits.

Factors determining planting time are many. A family planning a summer vacation should plant so that the major garden production comes when the family is home to harvest it.

Many gardeners prefer to make one large planting rather than to stagger plantings. In this way they can freeze the harvest all at one time. This is especially true with corn and greens.

The vegetable garden handbook gives a sample garden plan, and outlines all aspects of plant care from cultivation to pest control.

Probably the most important feature in the booklet is a table showing planting dates and the best varieties of thirty-three different vegetables grown here in Alabama. This is an invaluable tool when planning a garden.

During his talk, Perry Smith gave other pertinent gardening information. As a starter, he warned that gardeners should not use grocery store potatoes to plant in a garden. Smith explained that some of these supermarket varieties are treated so that they will not sprout. Potatoes for planting purposes should be purchased at a feed store.

Broccoli is another delicious garden crop. Smith recommended that broccoli be seeded in early July in order to have a fall crop. A gardener should plant broccoli in late February or early March for a spring crop.

Oddly enough, Smith said that collards are probably the most nutritious of all vegetables. The plant has 1/6 the food value of meat, as much iron as spinach, and is also loaded with vitamin C and calcium, he said.

Strawberries present another delicacy for home gardeners, although they require two to three years to produce fruit. Smith said that virtually no commercial strawberry growers exist in this state anymore.

Strawberry plants should be set out in March. Best varieties are Alberta, Dixieland, and All Blackmore. Smith commented that certain "ever bearing" varieties do not grow well in our climate.

In conclusion, a quotation from Smith's gardening pamplet gives the best advice to home gardeners. He says that a good garden can give a family three things; (1) savings of money on the food bill, (2) better nutrition, and (3) something to work on together.

However, potential gardeners need to have three things: (1) a site where plants will grow, (2) a willingness to work hard (an essential gardening supply is TLC - "tender loving care" . and (3) a good source of good current gardening information.

Civic Club sponsors meeting

The public is invited to a meeting to be held under sponsorship of the Indian Springs Civic Club at Indian Springs School town hall, Friday, January 25, at 7:30 p.m., according to Mrs. Sandra Button.

The purpose of the meeting is to study the impact of measures being considered to bring Shelby County into compliance with state laws governing collection and disposal of solid waste (Act 771 and ammendments).

The club has invited Mr. Alfred Chipley, director of the division of solid waste, Ala. bureau of environmental health, to explain the laws and necessary response by county and city governments.

Shelby County sanitarian Frank Sloan, and County Engineer James L. Ray, Jr., director of the department of public works, and others will be on hand to explain the proposed collection and disposal program.

The proposed system will, for the first time in Shelby County history, provide every rural household, or business, no matter how isolated, available proper collection and disposal of waste at a reasonable and uniform rate, according to George Starcher of the county public works department.

The law requires a positive response on the part of each rural resident. Attendance to Friday's meeting will help to clarify the law's requirements and possible solutions to the problems presented.

ANYBODY CAN DO IT - - George Starcher says that anybody can raise Brussels sprouts if they want to. He brought this sample by the Reporter office Tuesday, not that he needed to prove his prowess in the garden to anyone in Shelby County. But he had the nerve to add that his garden has not been bothered by insects, or even by freezing temperatures this winter. The moral of the story must be that some people are born with a green thumb, and some are born with a tendency to exaggerate.

New positions filled at Columbiana bank

Ross B. Mullins, President of First National Bank of Columbiana, announces that Hylott L. Armstrong, Jr. has been elected executive vice president of the bank.

J.D. "Buddy" Wyatt is now vice president and continues to be manager of the Bank's Wilsonville Branch.

Mrs. Patsy Johnson has been promoted to assistant vice president and she will be in charge of operations for the Wilsonville branch.

Richard Trammell is now assistant vice president and manager of the Cahaba Valley Branch of First National Bank.

Miss Blenda Hall replaces Mr. Wyatt as cashier of the bank. Michael E. Hill will serve as assistant cashier.

Mailboxes are for mail only!

Mrs. Lois Mc Glawn, postmaster at Helena, reminds the general public that it is illegal to place any notices or other material in rural mail boxes.

Only U.S. mail is to be placed in mail boxes. Advertisements or circulars urging persons to vote one way or the other on an issue, are not to be distributed to mail boxes by individuals.

Items that are properly mailed and handled by the post office are the only items that should be placed in these boxes, Mrs. McGlawn notes.

Falcons end three-game streak defeat Huntingdon College 111-80

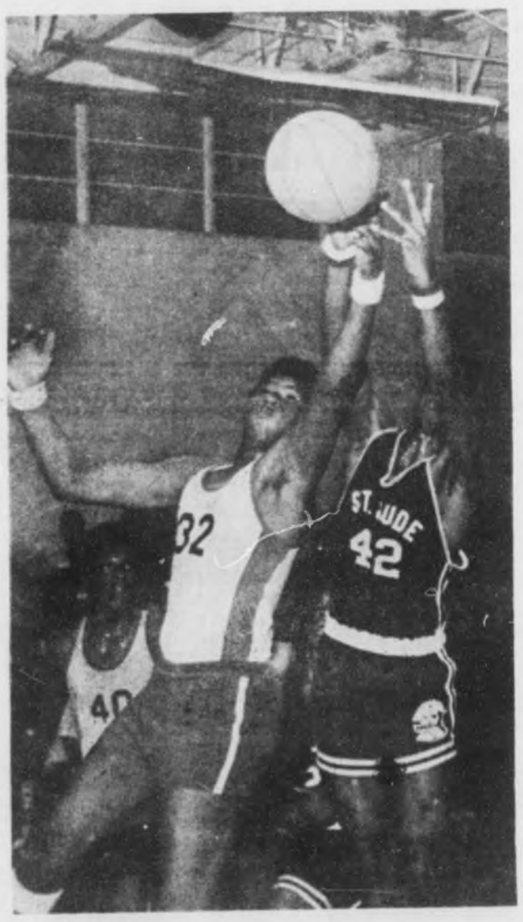
by Rick Moore

The University of Montevallo Falcons seem to be over a mid- season slump after losing to Spring Hill College of Mobile last Wednesday night 64-62. They came back and blew Huntingdon College off the court Saturday 111-80. This big win, televised on statewide educational television, ended a three game loosing streak for the Falcons.

Both games involved members in the Mid States Conference, to which the Falcons belong. The University of Montevallo team is now 11-5 for the season and holds a 3-2 record in the conference.

Bill Jones, head basketball coach for the Falcons, told the Reporter that Spring Hill played a very controled type of game. Spring Hill paced the game at a slow tempo and the Falcons did not run well, Jones commented. "Running is something we have to do to win," the UM coach continued.

The Falcons led throughout the game, but fell behind with five minutes to go. The Montevallo team regained the lead by one point, but Spring Hill tied the score with seconds left. The Mobile college then scored a basket with one second left, winning the game by two points.



Gerald Douglas led the Falcons against Spring Hill scoring 18 points and making seven rebounds.

Falcon player James Newman from Riverview, Alabama, played his second best game of the season Saturday night in the crushing defeat of Huntingdon by scoring 20 points.

Team mate Chris Davis was the second highest scorer for Montevallo with 19 points. David Porterfield had seven rebounds in the game.

Coach Jones played his whole team during Saturday's game with the freshman squad doing most of the work in the second half.

The Falcons meet conference rivals Athens College on Tuesday, January 23, and St. Bernard on Saturday, January 26. Both games are away.

NELSON REBOUNDS - - Recardi Nelson (32) of the Montevallo High School Bulldogs basketball team grabs a rebound from the hands of a St. Jude high school player. The Bulldogs downed St. Jude 66-38 last Friday night at the MHS gymnasium.

County YMCA to offer gymnastics

The Shelby County YMCA will be starting a boys and girls gymnastics class for ages eight years and up. The first two classes will be held on Thursday, January 24, from 3:30 to 5:00 p.m., and Saturday, January 26, from 10-12 a.m.

This class will be the basis for forming a competitive gymnastics team. Participants will perform on the uneven bars, and balance beam as well as doing floor exercises and vaulting.

The instructor for this program will be Cindy Stone. Cindy has competed on a varsity gymnastics team in Atlanta, Georgia for five years. This team won the Georgia state championship twice. She also competed on the Virginia Tech gymnastics team for one year and has taught gymnastics and ballet for the last several years.

Safety officer wins national award

Major B.G. Smith, supervisor of services and education for the Water Safety Division of the Alabama Department of Conservation, has been named the winner of a national boating safety award. He was named the national winner of the Olin Marine Safety Award. The award was made in New York City at ceremonies held in conjunction with the national boat show.

Smith was selected by a panel of judges composed of editors of several boating magazines and the New York Times. The judges' selection was based on nominations submitted by members of the National Association of Boating Law Administrators and U.S. Power Squadrons from across the country.

The award is made to the person who, in the opinion of the boating editors, has made the most significant contribution to the cause of safe boating in the fields of writing, search and rescue operations, or training and education.

Smith's award marks the third time in recent years that Alabama's Water Safety Division has won a national award. The Division has won a Kiekhaefer Award for boating safety recently and Division Director Tom Shackelford was the 1970 recipient of the Olin Marine Award.

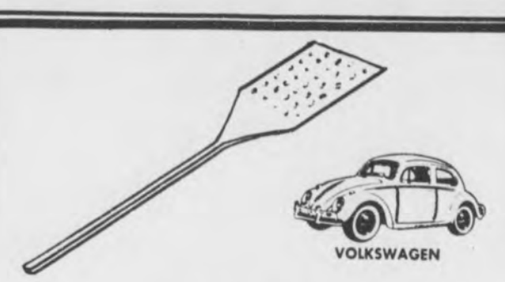
Maj. Smith is a charter member of the Alabama Marine Police. He joined the Water Safety Division 14 years ago as a water patrolman on Lewis Smith Lake and advanced through the ranks to his present position of Marine Police supervisor.

Academy tournament is slated

The Shelby Academy basketball tournament will be held on Thursday and Friday nights January 24 and 25, at the Shelby Academy gymnasium. Bessemer Academy will meet Morgan Academy at 6:30 p.m. Thursday night and Shelby Academy will play Coosa Valley Academy at 8:00 p.m. The championship and consolation games will be played Friday night.

Pine Beetle still active in Shelby County forests

Forester D.L. Duckett of the Alabama Forestry Commission has just issued a report that the Southern Pine Beetle is still active in Shelby County.



"Because of the continued presence of the Southern Pine Beetle in some areas of the county, aerial flights are being made to detect the extent of the infestation," the forester reports.

To insure that all infested trees are controlled, the Alabama Forestry Commission has again initiated the program of subsidy payment contracts. Some small spots of beetle damage not being cut due to the remoteness and rough topography may qualify for the subsidy payment program.

Those who want additional information on the subsidy contracts, may contact Mr. Duckett at the Alabama Forestry Commission Office on McDow Road in Columbiana, or telephone him at 669-7605.

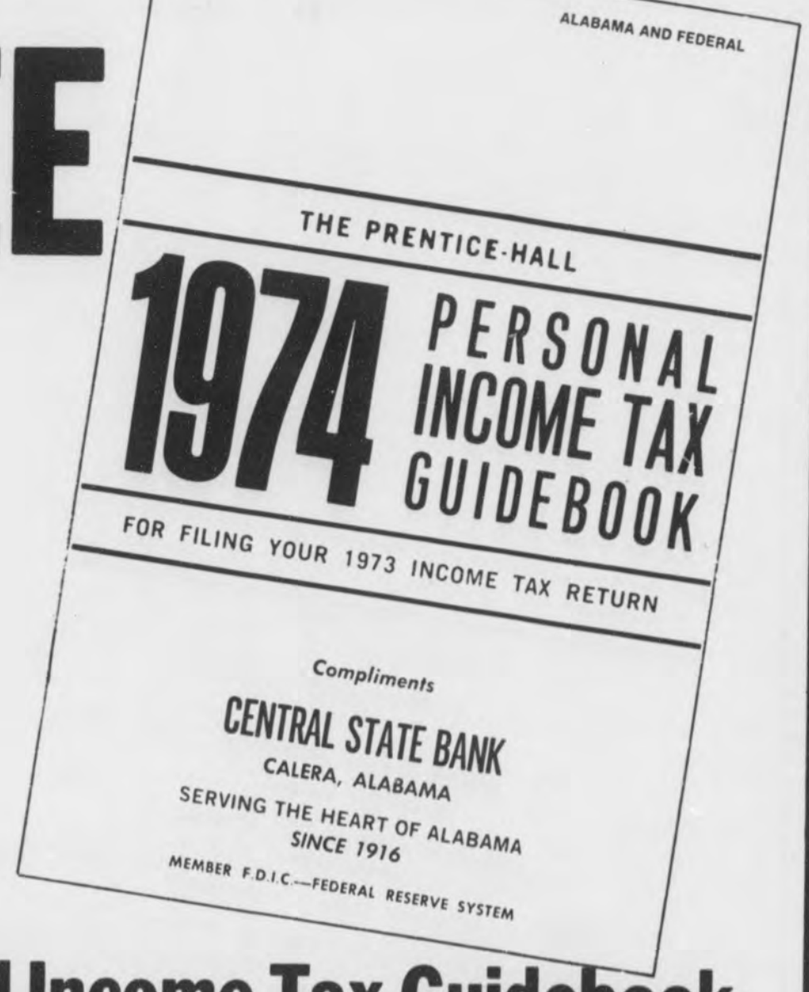
Electric heating. How to use it this winter for all it's worth.

The ideas we're about to give you aren't really limited to electric heating. If you'll put them into practice, they'll help you make better use of the electricity that's involved in in whatever kind of heating system you've got. And they'll help your whole system work at maximum efficiency.

It is generally accepted in the heating industry that your home heating system will operate at its maximum efficiency if you set the thermostat at the minimum comfort level and then leave it alone.



You'd also better be sure you're not heating the great outdoors, instead of the living room. Seal cracks around doors and windows, close dampers and block flues in unused fireplaces, and be sure your house is completely insulated. And, if you think you can't afford storm windows and doors, just remember that they can reduce heat loss by as much as 15 percent. But there's one part of the great outdoors you don't have to keep out, and that's the sunshine. Throw back the drapes, and let it in. On the shady side of the house, though, and at night, drawn drapes will help insulate your windows.

Now that we've given you some ideas, we'd like to give you some more. Not just about electric heating, but about using electricity better all around the house. Because electricity is energy derived from natural resources. And like all energy, it shouldn't be wasted. Just send the coupon for our free booklet. And learn to make electricity work more efficiently for you. Twelve months a year.

At Elliottsville--

June in January

TROPICAL GREENERY - - Robert Butler of Elliottsville (above) stands beside some of the many potted plants he grows in his greenhouse. He grows ferns, vines and other plants in hanging pots as a hobby. His new enclosed greenhouse (below) was built on the side of Butler's store. Light shining through the windows and translucent roof provide sunshine during the daylight hours. Electric heaters keep the indoors garden warm through the coldest days of the winter.

SPROUTING GARDEN PLANTS - - Robert Butler tests seeds for germination in his greenhouse. He started raising vegetable plants and flowers as a hobby three years ago. This interesting pastime has turned into a profitable one. Butler now raises young tomatoes, peppers, egg plants, lettuce and flowers to sell in his store. Two greenhouses provide this green thumb gardener with the space required for the several thousand plants he raises each spring.

A "whodunit"--

An eighty-dollar mystery perplexes Montevallo High

Montevallo High School students and teachers are wondering "Who is the mysterious eighth- grader?" "Who sent the letter with the eight $10 bills?"

W.C. Corbett, principal of the school, told the Reporter that in last month's mail he received an unusual letter, which went something like this:

"As an eighth- grader at Montevallo High School, I used a book for a report, but I did not return it. Enclosed is eighty dollars to pay for the book and to use as you see fit."

There was no name or return address with the letter, and the postmark was illegible Now everyone at the high school is wondering who the mysterious person is and when he went to Montevallo.

Mr. Corbett says that the $80 is being put into the library fund, since that would probably be what the anonymous donor would want.

Crop insurance upgraded

Crop producers in Shelby County will be interested to learn of the improvements made in the insurance program offered by the Federal Crop Insurance Corporation, an agency of the United States Department of Agriculture.

W. Chilsholm Downs, Sales Supervisor for the Corporation, said one of the changes is a higher dollar protection available on soybeans and rice for 1974 that is more in line with today's higher prices.

Another improvement is a higher guarantee available for improved management practices for soybeans, or planting within optimum planting periods for cotton.

The new farm law of 1974 provides payments under certain conditions to producers of feed grains, wheat, and cotton who are prevented by disaster from planting crops or whose crops are severely damaged. These payments are limited to the allotted acreage and may be offset by production on acreage in excess of the allotments.

Disaster payments, at best, are not likely to fully cover the production costs. In contrast, the combination of disaster payments and Federal Crop Insurance indemnities can provide financial security for insured producers.

Local representatives will be calling on producers in the near future to show the improved program of Federal Crop Insurance. If anyone desires specific information, it is available at the local FCIC office at Room 617, County Courthouse, Tuscaloosa, Alabama 35401, telephone 758-6510.

Deadline for taxes near

Alabama employers have just 15 days in which to report Social Security and withheld income taxes for last quarter.

The January 31 deadline does not apply to those employers who make timely deposits in Federal Reserve or approved commercial banks of the full amount of tax due. They are allowed an additional ten days to file Form 941, "Employer's Quarterly Federal Tax Return."

"This year we'd like to stress that those employers who received the preaddressed Form 941 in the mail should use it to file their report," said Dwight Baptist, IRS District Director. "Those persons who did not receive the preaddressed forms can obtain forms from their local IRS office."

Any balance of Federal Unemployment Tax not over $100.00 for 1973 should be paid by January 31, using Form 940. Balances of tax due over $100.00 require the employer to make a deposit with FTD Form 508. As with Form 941, taxpayers who deposit the full amount of tax on time may have ten additional days to file the return.

Allen warns of tax plans

Senator Jim Allen warns against efforts to "saddle the American taxpayer with multi-billion programs to provide cradle -to -the -grave health insurance coverage."

"There are about eight different National Health Insurance bills pending in Congress," he said, and the Senator expressed doubt that any of these bills would pass this year "because I doubt if agreement can be reached on any one plan."

The estimated cost of these various plans runs from around $5 billion a year for the lowest cost plan up to around $75 billion a year for the most expensive plan, Senator Allen explained.

"While we already have Medicare and Medicaid, perhaps a modest additional program covering, say, catastrophic expenses that could wipe out a family financially might be advisable." Senator Allen declared.

* * * *

"When the cry is raised," writes the Arizona Farm Bureau Federation, "that we cannot afford to buy food today, what is really meant is, "I'm having some difficulty making payments on a second car."

Nowhere else but in America - the article continues - does the average wage earner have two cars, an air conditioned home and two TV sets. This is possible, this writer says, because in America we spend a relatively small percentage of our income on food - 15.7 percent this year.

New farm law to benefit Shelby farmers

Farmers in Shelby County and eight other counties in the 7th Congressional District may be eligible for emergency loans from the Department of Agriculture under provisions of a recently enacted law, according to Congressman Walter Flowers.

Flowers said, "This new farm emergency loan law provides benefits for eligible farmers and ranchers who have suffered losses of physical property or production due to natural disasters which occurred after December 26, 1972. In addition to covering physical or production losses, these loans may include annual operating and living expenses essential to continuing normal farming or ranching programs."

Seventh District counties from which applications will be considered are Bibb, Chilton, Choctaw, Greene, Hale, Perry, Shelby Sumter and Tuscaloosa. Applications will be accepted by the Farmers Home Administration in the county offices serving the designated counties through the close of business on April 2, 1974.

Reporter keeps on rolling!

by Mildred White Wallace

Last week, the Reporter -- with its Jan. 17 issue set a new record in its age-old history of service to Shelby County people and their worthwhile progressive achievements. Its pages numbered 30! It was received and read by thousands of subscribers! Some folk -- due to a transient stay -- relied on racks for this weekly news; and rack sales also climbed to an all time high!

There is a reason for the success this over a century-old paper has achieved! Through its historic years (1843-1974) there has always been a dedicated staff of writers. Currently, reporters and photographers maintain around- the-clock vigilance for news items of interest. Alert reporters accurately "tell it like it is". Our reliable advertisers offer the best the market affords at reasonable prices. We, here in the office, at all times, endeavor to employ courtesy and offer personal consideration in dealing with our customers. After all, it is they to whom we look for approval of our endeavor to bring to Shelby County a paper which all may enjoy reading and take pride in presenting to neighbors and friends.

Customers, in fact, provide the vital spoke in the wheels that turn the presses and bring us into your business houses and homes each week. What is a customer you ask? We think the following definition written by a fellow craftsman provides an adequate description of our customers.

A customer is not dependent on us -- we are dependent on him!

A customer is not an interruption of our work -- he is the purpose of it!

We are not doing him a favor by serving him - - he is doing us a favor by giving us the opportunity to do so.

A customer is not a cold statistic -- he is a flesh and blood human being with feelings and emotions like our own.

A customer is a person who brings us his wants. It is our job to handle them profitably to him and to us!

Therefore, we gratefully acknowledge the cooperation, the support and the loyalty our subscribers, customers and friends have given us. It is they who enabled us to print on Jan. 17 the largest edition ever to roll form a Shelby County press! Thanks to you and for you!

Let's keep it rolling!

Physical fitness is work and play

Have you looked into your mirror lately? Did you see a little more than you would like to continue carrying around? If so, this is to inform you that "Operation Physical Fitness" directed by Frieda Holcombe, will be on in full swing at the Columbiana Rec Building each Monday and Thursday evenings beginning Jan 28 at seven o'clock.

If you are interested in working a little playing a little and meeting your friends for an hour of exercising that is designed to bring about the desired results than call Frieda at 669-9290 and talk the matter over with this public spirited little PE instructor.

From the mailbox

Dear M.W.W.

I received the Shelby County Reporter as a thoughtful birthday gift last year and now that I have the habit of reading it, I shall subscribe to it for another year. It brings back so many memories of my "growing up" years spent in Shelby County; graduating from SCHS in 1940 with our small class of only about 16. Names like Bob Bolton who has become mayor of the town, Kathryn Smith Franks, Lorene (Juzan) Falkner and many, many others whom I well remember.

Reading the Reporter is the second best thing to walking "Up and Down Main Street".

Sincerely yours,
Mary Jones Hendrick
South Laguna, Calif.

(Thanks for the letter and for your continued loyalty to Shelby County friends. It will be a pleasure to mark your subscription up for another year. M.W.W.)

PRECEDENT SETTING FAMILY -- When little Rodney Mayhew (held in the arms of his grandmother Gail Mayhew) arrived some months ago his appearance set some kind of a precedent in the families of his mother and father. Rodney became the fifth member of five generations on both the maternal and paternal sides of the house. He has eight living grandmothers. Seated left to right are: Mrs. Arrie McElroy and Mrs. Willie Warren his great-great grandmothers; Mrs. Gail Mayhew (h9lding Rodney) is his grandmother; Mrs. Pauline Warren, great grandmother stands next to R.E. (Boots) Warren - Rodney's great grandfather. Dean Mayhew, standing next to Rodney is his father. The families live in Alabaster.

In Columbiana--

City Police changes listed

There have been many inquiries recently regarding changes in Columbiana's official law enforcement personnel. The writer has contacted a member of the counsel this morning who agrees with us that the people have a perfect right to know who is in charge of this important department.

The following information is authentic and was freely given when we asked for it. Frank Owen, a member of the Town Council is Police Commissioner; Howell Horn, is Chief of Police; Jimmy Thompson is Assistant Policeman; Vincent Gaydon is in charge of Radio.

In order to call the Police Department - if needed - the number is listed as 669-6242.

We were informed also that regular council meetings for the past month -- due to unavoidable circumstances did not have a quorum present -- and no official action on matters pending could be taken. Last week, Jack Upchurch, a member of the council, was out of town due to the death of his brother. Similar occurrences have taken place which have prevented official action but the above information is authentic and the writer hopes it answers the questions you have been asking.

Personals from up and down Main

By Mildred White Wallace

A People to People campaign was launched at the eleven o'clock hour of worship Sunday in First Baptist Church when the clarion call was given by Rev. Charles Stroud with a pictorial film strip message to the congregation. Participation by each department of the church was urged.

The church books are off press and the entire program for 1974 with names of members and their telephone numbers are included.

The music ministry schedule is also listed and a bus ministry schedule is being considered.

The church is expanding and plans to meet the increasing demands are on the agenda for the building committee's consideration.

Bernice Ticen had a happy surprise during the past weekend and not too much of a surprise either for Bernice firmly believes in Horoscopic predictions, and her Horoscope had stated a "surprise would come her way, Saturday". The surprise came in the form of a telphone call from a kinsman of hers whom she had not seen for over 25 years. His architectural firm in California had sent him from the home office into the heart of the deep southland, to transact some business. When he reached the Georgia line, Dayle Hendricks, her cousin, called the Ticen home, and the story ended happily for both when the family reunion took place during the weekend at her home on Myrtle Street in Columbiana.

It is always good to hear from friends who have moved away from Columbiana but who still "remember the good times" they enjoyed while here. So comes across the miles from Heflin such a welcome message from our good friends Mr. and Mrs. Joel Thompson. We deeply appreciate their continued loyalty and the information that they want the Reporter to continue visiting them each week for another year. The "Thompsons" are still sincerely missed in Columbiana in church and community circles and in all worthwhile undertakings. Especially is this true in that "friendly sort o'way!.

Quilting bee creates fun

by Mrs. Elsie A. Jones

A "Quilting Party" was held in the home of Mrs. Elizabeth Davis recently. The guests attending this party were Mrs. Hettie Adams, Mrs. Elma Mitchell, Mrs. Bertha Stinson, and Mrs. Lorraine Hughes. Amid the much laughter, talking, and eating, the quilt did get finished, and some newly-wed couple or grandchild will be awarded this heirloom quilt, which is another almost lost art of our society.

The home of the Douglas Spurgeon family was destroyed by fire ond day last week. As usual, the food people of our community have been contributing clothing, furniture, food, and other necessities to this family. The different churches have been responding with special donations to install a trailer and build a septic tank. Mrs. Otis Harris, a neighbor is acting as chairman for collecting donations. She told me they are still short about $150 for installing the septic tank. Her address is Box 220, Rt. 1, Sterrett, AL.

Life in Westover may have been pretty quiet in some of the past years and the usual question, "Well, what do you know?" might have been answered "Nothing," but for the past few weeks we have been right in the middle of where the action is. I found that the tornadoes gave us much publicity, but it seems that the most of the damage was from losing trees all along from Harpersville through Sterrett, Dunavant, and Double Oak Mountain. We hope those storms have all blown over.

Now, the power company and gas lines have been cutting more paths through our beautiful trees and our citizens are righteously indignant (just plain mad) about the unsightly "stripes" across our hillsides, just so that fuel and power may be transplanted to other states. And, from information which some of us have gathered, some of those states have laws to prohibit such destruction to the ecology of their surroundings, preferring to let these companies supply them with gas ind power. It may now be too late for us to begin thinking about conserving our natural beauty of our woodlands and streams, but unless we do begin to think more about it, it will all soon be gone.

We are happy to have Highway 280 four-laned in order that lives and injuries may be saved, but it, too, is taking its toll of our properties and surroundings. Now that the energy crisis, petroleum shortages, reduced speed limits, and moth-balling of our "gasoline guzzlers" are upon us, possibly we won't need the four-laned highway after all. As one neighbor expressed it, "I wish I had never heard of Highway 280."

The only solution which I have to offer is that we all make up our minds to incorporate our small communities into small towns and begin to reap some of the rewards to which we are entitled form the taxes which we are already paying to these large corporations for their rights of way through our properties. Each of our communities need many of the improvements which may be afforded by the use of these funds which are already provided for us by these businesses. Westover is a large place and is eligible for much revenue from these miles of power lines, gas lines, railroads, highways and other sources.

We are paying for these products and it is only in fairness to ourselves and our future generations that we take the necessary steps to translate these adversities into some useful and profitable assets for the communities. (This article was written by request of some of our citizens who feel very strongly about these matters.)

Grandma had come to pend the holidays and she was ucking Philip, her five-year-old randson under the ocvers. 'Would you like Grandma to ead a bed-time story?" Not onight, muttered Philip. Then, why don't I sing you a ullaby?" "Some other time," he child replied. "I know," aid gregarious Grandma, "I'll o get you a glass of water." 'Not thirsty," was the reply. 'Well, there must be something can do for you, Sweetheart." 'hilip replied, "Why don't you o watch television so I can get ome sleep."

PARK SCENE IN HELENA - - But will it rain when we need it? The Joe Tucker Park lake site filled with water again in last week's continuing rains, making it impossible for machinery to complete the lake bed. Park planners hope it will rain after the lake is completed, to fill up the new lake which will be a scenic attraction in town.

Jurors to be recalled

THOUGHT FOR THE WEEK

To buy happiness, one must spend kindness.

A happy ending . . .

Chelsea group builds Guatemala church

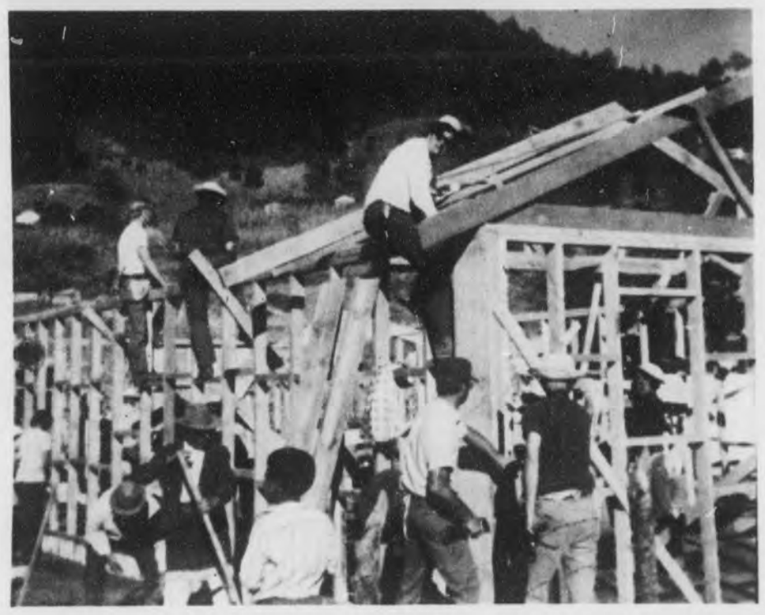
by Shelba S. Nivens

A new church has been built n Guatemala and four Chelsea missionaries" are back home gain. Mrs. Lillian Moore, Ray Shirely, Terry Crumpton and Phillip Moore say they had a reat and exciting trip but were overjoyed to get back to Chelsea where they could take real bath and sleep in a bed gain.

Thirty five Americans, ostly Alabamians and nembers of Church of God ongregations, travelled by lane to Guatemala. On aturday morning, December 9, they set out from Tec pan o the proposed church site on he back of a 2½ ton flat bed ruck. Ropes were stretched round the sides of the truck ed, and for three hours they lung to these ropes and to ach other as they bounced v r six miles of almost unbelievable" road. "There was one curve in that road so sharp," reports Ray Shirley, "that we had to back up twice o get the truck around it. And n some places one of the truck wheels would be hanging off the edge of a bluff that you couldn't even see the bottom of."

Terry Crumpton added, "They have corn down there growing on hills that bulldozers couldn't climb."

The church was to be built of cement blocks at the Indian village, Xochoxol. But when the Americans finally arrived at the building site, ready to begin work, none of the building materials had been delivered.



"We had just so much time to do a big project," said Phil Moore," but time means nothing to people there." (They don't even have clocks.)

The people of the village -- with Rev. Cornelio Rabinal, a native Guatemalian, as their pastor -- had been holding church services in the open. Now, they became much concerned about the Americans who had come to build a church for them but had nothing with which to work. They began to pray about the situation, then got busy.

Gravel and sand ordered for the project, were located at two separate spots several miles back along the road where truck drivers had dumped them because they were afraid of the roads. The Indian people helped gather it up with bare hands and put it onto the flat bed truck to be hauled to the village.

The cement blocks were found on the side of the road near Guatemala City, some sixty miles away. The blocks were much smaller than were expected and were made of a soft, brittle material. Hauling them on the flat bed truck would have broken them, so a landrover was used to haul them to the building site. The builders had no wheelbarrows in which to mix and carry their materials and it took much mimicing and gesticulating by Terry before their native friends understood what was needed. "After the Indians saw what we needed," said Terry, "wheelbarrows came from everywhere around."

It took all the cement blocks, even the broken pieces, to lay the foundation for the church building. "A wooden building is much quicker to build," said Ray, "but the Indian people were afraid of them." He explained that they did not know how to make a wooden building stay together. In the past, they had tried tying them together with vines, but when the ground shook from volcanoes or earthquakes the buildings would fall.

After the people were convinced of the safety of a wooden building, a lumber yard owner back in the city was persuaded to call in his help on a holiday to cut lumber -- by hand. "That lumber was so green," said Ray, "that juice squirted out on me as I drove nails into it."

Most of the people of the village had never before seen electricity. When the Americans cranked up their portable generator, crowds gathered to look at the lights and watch the skill saws at work. They have no machinery in Xocholxol, and their tools consist of a machete, hoe and shovel. With these, they cut trees, tend their crops and build their homes.

The Americans slept near the building site in a tent made of plastic and sheets. The houses of the village are only one small room, built of mud and hay with dirt floors and roofs made of weeds. The people sleep on the floor, sometimes on fresh, green pine straw obtained by climbing the tall, thin pine trees.

The Chelsea group reports that the daytime temperature while they were there was 85 to 90 degrees, but it dropped to about 40 degrees at night. The homes are heated with charcoal which is made in the woods there. Early in the mornings it looked as if all the houses in the village were on fire as the smoke from charcoal came up through the weeds on top of the houses. But although smoke escapes through the roof, rain does not go through it.

The people farm the dark fertile soil, raising their own food. They eat a lot of beans, tortillas made from corn and rice with vegetables cooked in it. Cooking is done on large rocks around a fire, either indoors or out. Industry is primarily farming, and some of the women weave. The Chelsea people bought many beautiful pieces of material, jackets and shawls made by the Indians. A tapestry with the name of the village (Xochoxol) woven into it was presented to the K-Springs Church of God and their pastor, Rev. James F. Luellen, upon the return of the group to Chelsea.

The average wage in this village is 80 cents a day, and most of the people do not have money. They help each other with the work and they bargain and trade with each other for the things they need.

Large rock bins in the village capture and hold water from a stream running from the mountains. Here, the people take baths and wash dishes and clothes. "They use cold water," Mrs. Moore reports, "and homemade lye and sand. The dish rags are made of corn shucks and they really get the dishes clean. But I showed the women how to heat water for the dishes."

The Guatemala people are small, and to them big Terry Crumpton was almost a giant. "One little boy started to take candy from him," said Phil, "then when he looked up to see how big Terry is, he turned and ran without the candy." But Terry managed to visit every house in the village and "Make himself welcome." When an item was needed by the Americans, Terry, with his funny noises and gestures, was sent to communicate the need to the natives of the village.

One night, still hungry after supper of beans and tortillas, Terry got to thinking about how good roasted chicken would taste. He went out into the village, and by flapping his elbows and squawking, showed some of his new friends what he wanted. They sold him a chicken and he started it cooking on a wire over a fire. It took over two hours for the chicken to get done enough to eat, and by that time the evening church service under the trees was well underway.

Famished, Terry stood on the outer rim of the group, sneaking bites and holding the roasted chicken behind his back to keep everyone from knowing that he was eating in church. Then when a prayer circle started forming, he quickly laid the chicken over in a wheelbarrow, wiped greasy hands on his pants legs and joined the circle. When he returned for his chicken it was gone.

After the church was completed, a dedication service was held inside. There were 75 Indians and 40 Americans present. In all of the services, the Americans spoke through an intrepreter. But they learned to sing several songs in Spanish. One of their favorites, which they sang with the Indians at the dedication and again by themselves when touching down at the Birmingham airport on Saturday, was "Gloria A Dios" (Glory to God.)

WORK PROGRESSES -- The church building goes up at Xochocol in Guatemala. Obtaining building materials was a serious problem for the volunteers. Cement blocks and wood were hauled over narrow mountain roads but once there, the volunteers built a church building within a week.

Commission probes beer tax evasion

It's an old trick. I never thought they'd try it here." Cecil Davis explained to the County Commission Monday that as beer tax inspector for the county, he has recently found six-packs of Falstaff beer "in every section of the county" that were not adequately stamped.

He illustrated by showing the Commission several six packs. Four or five of the cans carried the county three cent tax stamp, but one or two cans did not.

Beer distributors are responsible for buying and affixing the stamps to each can of beer sold to Shelby County licensees. When they miss a can, they save three cents.

The tax stamps are purchased through the county and the county allows the distributors an eight percent discount for doing the stamping.

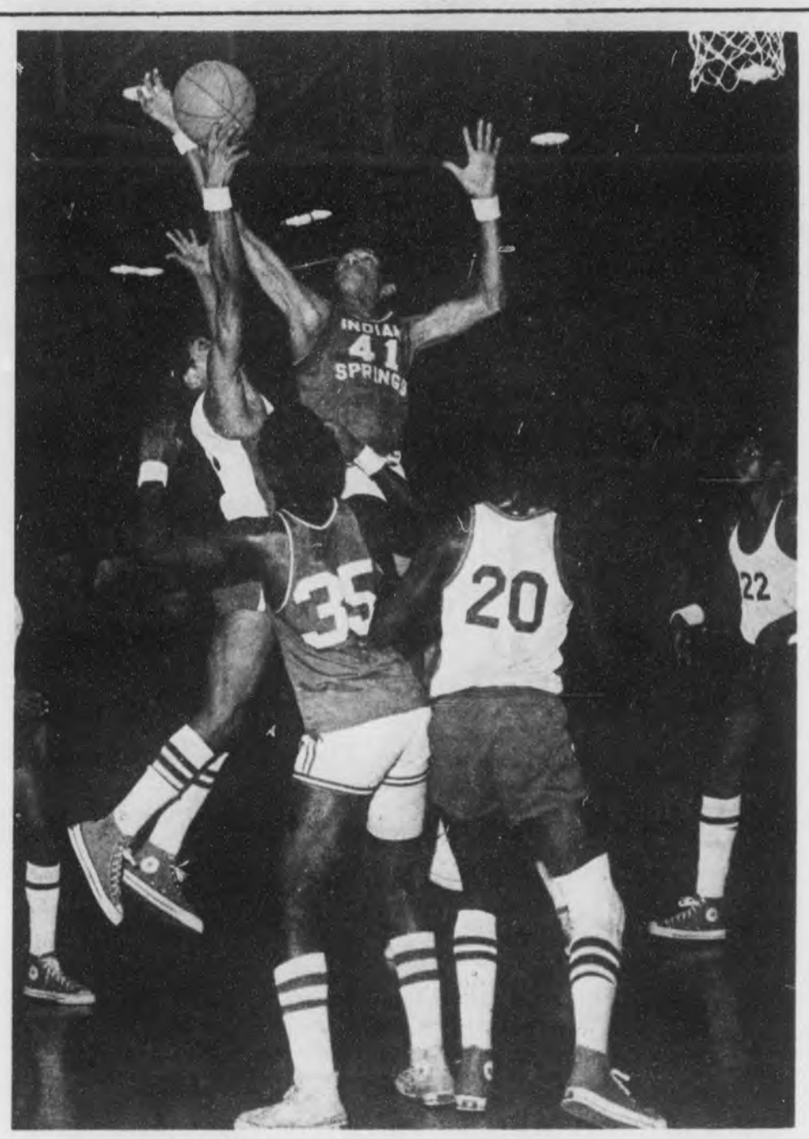
Commission Chairman Conrad Fowler pointed out that the county has the right to take up unstamped beer and sell it at auction.

Davis was advised to take the matter up with the county attorney. The Commission office plans to check the record of the number of beer stamps sold against the number still on hand in the distributor's office in order to clear up the matter.

Licensees and consumers were advised to report any other violations of the stamp law.

The cost of paving Shelby County roads is going out of sight. When the County Commission opened the first bid Monday morning for bituminous treatment asphalt, veteran county engineer James Ray gasped. The next two bids were higher.

The story was repeated when bids were opened for tack coat and plant mix. Commissioners were shaking their heads.



According to representatives of the companies who were bidding, the cost of petroleum products is going up so fast, bidding is almost impossible on long range projects.

Clyde Carden, president of Central Alabama Paving of Calera, told the Reporter, "Last year we had a firm price of eight to ten cents per gallon on asphalt. This year the companies will not even quote a firm price, but they're beginning at 30 cents."

The Carden firm has been told by companies that supply asphalt to expect increases every quarter in 1974 which will double the cost by January of 1975.

Hooper McDonald Company of Andalusia was apparent low bidder at $183,576 for the first bid,

Thompson enters race for sheriff

Billy C. Thompson announced today that he will run for the office of Sheriff of Shelby County in the Democratic primary this spring, ending weeks of speculation that he would make the race.

Thompson indicated he would campaign on the platform, "Under Bill Thompson the Sheriff's Department will be different".

Rick McDow of Columbiana will be chairman of the Thompson campaign and F.L. (Sonny) Dorough will be vice chairman of the campaign.

Thompson has held the office of Shelby County coroner for the past ten years. A native of Vincent, he is widely known throughout the county. His uncle, John H. Thompson, served on the County Commission for over 25 years.

For the past 16 years Thompson has been employed with Bolton- Brown Service Funeral Home as a licensed embalmer and funeral director.

Thompson stated in his announcement that if elected sheriff, he would be a full time sheriff and would be personally available to the citizens of the county.

He stresses that he would establish close ties with state investigators, the district attorney and the coroner to insure a team effort in preparing criminal cases for the grand jury and court trials.

He promises to establish a cooperative relationship with municipal police departments and all state and federal officers assigned to Shelby County. He said he will not insist that only he or his deputies have the right to serve search warrants in Shelby County. He will not object to state officers serving search warrants.

He would require deputies to keep written notes and maintain a file on each for grand jury presentation. He would keep an inventory of county property assigned to the department and proper records of recovered stolen property.

BILLY THOMPSON

On the controversial subjects of alias warrants and pistol permit fees, Thompson is in favor of state troopers or conservation officers serving alias warrants if they obtained the first warrant of arrest. He pledges not to allow alias warrants to accumulate. He believes that pistol permit fees should be paid to the county general fund.

Thompson said that "To be sheriff of Shelby County is to hold a public office clothed with a high degree of public trust, involving the protection of life and property of all the citizens of the county. If elected, I will be true to the trust that accompanies this important office."

Thompson is married to the former Mary Ann Dorough. They have a daughter, Cheryl, who is a sophomore at Jacksonville State University and two sons, Mike and Ronnie, who are students at Shelby County High School.

He is a veteran of the Korean War and holds the Silver

I. D. Stone seeks county re-election

I.D. Stone announces this week his intention to seek re-election to the office of County Commissioner, District 4.

Stone said in announcing, "I will be available 24 hours a day as a full time Commissioner. I will continue to serve the people for the next four years like I did for the last four years."

He said it is his intention to serve not only the people of District 4, but also the entire county.

Stone said he would like to complete the projects already started in his current term. He said that approximately 37 miles of new paving will be completed in District 4 counting what is to be paved in 1974.

He said that District 4 will lack only about 25 miles of having all its county roads paved.

Stone said that if re-elected, he will show no partiality in serving the people of his district.

He and his wife and daughter live at Westover. He is serving his first four year term as a member of the Commission.

Chilton legislator seeks house seat

Lewis W. "Pig" Headley of Clanton will be a candidate for re-election to the state legislature. His district formerly consisted only of Chilton County. But under the new reapportionment plan the district he seeks to represent includes Chilton County and all of Montevallo, Wilton, Pea Ridge and adjoining areas in Shelby County.

Headley serves as one of Governor Wallace's floor leaders, and is vice chairman of the House rules committee. He is a member of the military affairs and state administration committees.

He is chief stockholder in the firm that publishes the "Central Alabama Advertiser", and the free- circulation publication, "Shelby County Advertiser." He is owner of Food Center Super Market and a director of First Federal Savings and Loan of Clanton.

Waggoner will run for legislature

State Representative James T. (Jabo) Waggoner, Jr., announced that he will seek election to his third term in the Alabama House of Representatives from new House District 51.

The district includes portions of northern Shelby County including Helena, Pelham and part of Alabaster. It is also comprised of southern portions of Jefferson County including Vestavia, Hoover, Rocky Ridge and Altadena.

In the state legislature, Waggoner has served on three committees: ways and means, business and labor and constitution and election. He is presently vice chairman of the Jefferson County House delegation.

He was born in Birmingham on January 8, 1937. He attended Birmingham public schools and Auburn University. He holds an A.B. degree from Birmingham Southern and the J.D. and LL.B. degrees from the Birmingham School of Law.

He has taken an active role in civic activities and has served as Jefferson County chairman of the cystic fibrosis fund drive and the March of Dimes.

Waggoner works with the PTA in the Vestavia school system and is a member of the Jefferson County vocational and adult advises committee.

He is also a member of Birmingham Civitan Club, the downtown YMCA, and is a

Harpersville board drills new well

Harpersville is getting a new well, and has struck what water board members think will prove to be a good supply of water for the town's growing needs.

The town's old water supply has proved to be inadequate for the 275 families that use the Harpersville water system, and before Christmas the town took temporary measures by borrowing water from the Westover system.

According to Olin Abbott, member of the water board, the first informal testing of the new well has shown that there will be a good supply of water. The new well is located about one-fourth mile toward Chelsea from the Highway 280 - Highway 25 intersection on the east side of 280.

Abbott says that the water board hopes to complete the work within the next four weeks, but considerably more testing remains to be done.

In addition to the 275 families served by the Harpersville system, there are two trailer courts, two motels and eight businesses that depend upon the town for their water supply.

Cecil Nummy serves as chairman of the Harpersville water Board. Others on the board in addition to Abbott are Dick Wyatt, Morris Gallups and Jack Donahoo.

ALTON PARKER

Alton Parker runs in District 4 race

Alton Parker of Vandiver will be a candidate for the Shelby County Commission from District 4, he announced in Columbiana this week.

Parker represented District 4 from 1966 to 1970 when he was elected over five other candidates.

He stated that if elected, he will "strive for a spirit of unity in the County Commission."

He began his political career as a member of the Democratic Executive Committee in 1960. He was appointed jury commissioner by Governor George Wallace in 1963 and served until he was elected to the County Commission.

He now is serving as a member of the board of directors for the Coosa Valley Electric Coop which serves five counties. He is a board member of the Sterrett-Vandiver water system.

Parker told the Reporter in an interview, "If elected, I would not be dominated by any group. I'm a strong believer in a Commissioner being independent and making up his own mind about issues."

Parker is married to the former Eunice Gardner and they have four children.

Juries hear court cases

A twelve-person jury was struck Monday morning for this week's criminal jury docket in the Shelby County Circuit Court. The jury heard the case of the State of Alabama vs. Kenneth M. The jury returned a "guilty" verdict and the defendant was sentenced to two years.

KEEPING CLEAN -- Bill Pittman, center, president of the Indian Springs Civic Club discusses the proposed county wide garbage pickup service with Mr. and Mrs. J.B. Anthony of Rt. 13 at last Friday's public meeting on the subject.

Club spearheads public meeting

The Indian Springs Civic Club, which doesn't let an issue affecting their section of Shelby County go unnoticed, spearheaded a public meeting last Friday to hear plans that county health and public works departments have in mind for the collection of garbage and trash.

Many of the persons who attended the meeting expressed satisfaction with the private arrangements they now have for garbage collection, and doubt that a county-wide program could be so efficient.

Bill Pittman, president of the Club, presented Alfred Chipley, director of solid waste management for the State Health Department, Frank Sloan, sanitarian of the Shelby County Health Department and George Starcher of the county public works department, all of whom outlined the problems involved.

Trash thrown on the roadsides is a continuing problem and Starcher said the best way to reduce this is for the County Commission to require everyone to subscribe to a collection service.

Tentative agreements have been worked out with four contractors, each of whom would get exclusive rights to collecting garbage in one of the four divisions of the county. Costs to the homeowner would be $3.90 a month for once a week curb service, $5.40 monthly for twice a week curb service; $4.90 monthly for once a week service behind the house and $6.40 for twice weekly service behind the house.

The County Commission has not yet put the plan into effect, but they may do so by March 1.

Companies that have agreed to provide the service and J & J Sanitation, Dependable Garbage Service, Whitfield Sanitation Co. and National Environmental Control Service.

The plan would apply only to persons who live outside municipal limits.

Columbiana school pilots career education program

More than 40 Columbiana business and industry leaders gathered for a 7:15 breakfast Tuesday morning at the Columbiana Middle School.

The guests were invited to hear about the new pilot program the school has been selected to undertake.

The Columbiana Middle School shares with Thompson Elementary School and Chelsea High School a special grant to develop a curriculum in career education among students at all ages.

Heading the middle school program is Mrs. Carol Hill, a science teacher at the school. Mrs. Ann Head and Mrs. Ruth Burbank are committee members.

The business and industry leaders were shown a short movie and a video tape outlining the purposes and expected goals of the program.

Mrs. Bertha Cosper, principal of the Middle School told the assembled group, "We are making our curriculum broader and richer and not dropping or lowering standards."

Mrs. Cosper asked the help of the career people in giving time to middle school students, in encouraging tours through industries, giving talks and in general showing an interest in helping young people choose a career.

The school has already pursued six general career fields, and will expand to 15 "clusters" next year. Mrs. Hill said that the six fields the middle school students are studying now are communications, transportation, construction, health, public service, and fine arts and humanities.

The middle school age child is helped to investigate possibilities of jobs, to study the requirements of careers and to learn about the educational or training requirements of various jobs.

Rooms at the Columbiana Middle School have been decorated by students and teachers to develop themes related to jobs and employment opportunities.

Even window shades are decorated to serve as learning centers.

Mrs. Head says that each teacher in the project hopes to develop a "relevant type of curriculum".

If the pilot program at the three Shelby County schools is successful, the teachers hope it will be adopted on a statewide basis.

Unemployment declines to 2.8 percent in county

Unemployment in Shelby County has dropped to 2.8 percent.

Bill Varden, manager of the Calera office of the Alabama Employment Service, telephoned the Reporter with this good news at press time Tuesday.

The figures are for December and had just been compiled in state offices. Varden said the low figure was reached using the old system of computing unemployment figures. He indicated that as soon as the employment service can start using their new system, the figure will be even lower.

New candidates seek office

Several candidates have thrown their hats in the political ring for Shelby County offices, even before the traditional meeting of the county Democratic Executive Committee meeting which establishes rules for the Democratic primary.

The line up at press time one candidate each for the three legislative districts in which Shelby County is now divided. Calvin Smith of Vincent has announced for District 52 in the House of Representatives. There is no resident incumbent in this newly created district.

James T. (Jabo) Waggoner has announced for District 51. He is serving in the House from Jefferson County. Under the reapportionment plan, this is the first time any part of Shelby County has been included in the district.

Tom Stubbs of Helena resides in this new district and at present holds the office of Representative for all of Shelby County. Under the reapportionment, his district boundaries are changed, and he will have to run against Waggoner if he seeks to keep his legislative seat.

In District 53 Lewis Headley of Clanton has announced his intention to seek re-election. The district has been expanded to include Montevallo and adjoining areas in the district with all of Chilton County.

For office of state Senator representing District 18, which includes most of Shelby County, the incumbent, Obie Littleton has said he will seek re-election.

For Shelby County Commission, District 2, only Doug Ballard of Montevallo has announced. For District 4 on the Commission, there are three candidates. J. Alpha Lowe of Vincent, Alton Parker of Vandiver and I.D. Stone of Westover.

For the race that is sure to create wide interest and voter participation, the office of Sheriff of Shelby County, candidate Bill Thompson has thrown his hat in the ring. The incumbent, L.C. "Red" Walker has not announced, but it is widely assumed that he will be a candidate.

The office of Superintendent of Education and posts on the Board of Education are also up for election this year.

It will not be possible for candidates to file formally for office until after the county Democratic Executive committee meets.

Judge L.C. Payne, chairman of the county committee, told the Reporter that the date of February 7 at 7:30 p.m. has been set for the meeting. It will be held in the main courtroom at the courthouse in Columbiana.

New voting districts to foul up election

by Don Wasson

The hatchet job the federal courts did on the apportionment of the Alabama Legislature is going to produce possibly one of the most confusing elections in Alabama history.

The next legislature will be elected from 105 "single-member" districts for House seats and 35 "single-member" districts for Senate seats. Each Senate district will be made up of three House districts.

Evidence of the confusion is to be found in the question of residency of candidates.

Since the new legislative districts do not necessarily follow county lines, many House and Senate districts are made up of parts of counties. If a candidate wants to represent, then, his home county, but lives in a far corner of the county which is in a different district than the greatest part of his home county, may he?

Likewise, if a prospective candidate lives in a suburban area of a good sized city, and the district line puts him in another district, may he seek to represent the people of his city?

The answer to both questions is "No," according to an opinion issued last fall by the attorney general's office.

Rep. H. L. "Sonny" Callahan of Mobile asked for an opinion on two questions:

1. In order to qualify for a seat either in the Senate or the House of Alabama, must a candidate reside in the district from which he runs? If so, what are the requirements of residence as to length of time and what are the general guidelines for determining residence within the district?"

2. Will residence in the county alone suffice for any district?

The attorney general's opinion, written by Asst. Atty. Gen. Henry Caddell, was that a candidate for the legislature must reside in the district from which he runs. He must reside in that district for one year.

"Resident" means domicilliary, or the place where a person lives and must own or rent living space in the district he occupies for a majority of the time.

If his spouse and children live in the district, that is proof of domicile and there are other guidelines which election officials may take into consideration when determining a candidate's place of residence.

In answer to Callahan's second question, the opinion stated that residency in the county alone does not suffice for candidacy in any district of which that county is a part.

Potential candidates must reside for one year in the district from which they intend to run.

The fact that the district has not existed for a full year does not matter.

This is but one of the many questions facing prospective candidates and election officials this year. It is not a problem to many, but is a great problem to some.

The provisions of the Ethics Code are causing a lot of problems, so many in fact that Atty. Gen. Bill Baxley has called a question and answer session in the Capital to answer any questions prospective candidates might have on the Corrupt Practices Act.

And the new Ethics Commission promises to have some guidelines prepared by the time qualifying opens in Birmingham this weekend.

Add to these problems the ones of redesigned voting precincts and the necessity for voter reidentification and what will happen on May 14, if it happens at all, will be a day of magnificent confusion.

Gulf State Park opens new lodge

Another of Alabama's park sorts officially opens ruary 1, according to John ods, operations manager for bama State Park Resorts.

Or an individual can relax on a beautiful, uncluttered, white sandy beach. A 1,000-car parking area is nearby.

Employment at Gulf State will number around 160, Woods said.

REMINDER OF A BYGONE ERA -- Water still cascades over the Davis Lake dam on Buck Creek in Helena. According to Helena historian Kenneth Penhale, this dam, built in the 1880's, replaced an earlier wooden structure. This harnessed water power operated a series of grist mills located on this site. The first mill was erected in the 1870's and the last one was blown away by a tornado in 1932. The pumphouse in the background was once used to divert water to a reservoir at a nearby filling station for steam locomotives.

Arabs ready to ease oil prices

by Jack Anderson

(Copyright, 1974, by United Feature Syndicate, Inc.)

WASHINGTON — The oil squeeze has caused world oil prices to skyrocket. The increase will add an estimated $75 billion to the price that oil-consuming countries must pay for their economic lifeblood.

This is simply more than most nations can afford without inviting economic disaster.

World leaders have been communicating secretly over how to cope with the oil crisis. The United States has taken the lead in urging the oil consumers to join together in planning a common strategy.

Most nations have been reluctant to challenge the Arabs openly for fear of losing their oil supply. A few nations, such as Britain and France, have sought to make their own private deals with the Arab oil producers.

But secretly, many world leaders are saying that prices must be rolled back. Some are ready to use force, if necessary, to prevent an oil depression.

Apparently, the message is getting through to the Arab leaders. Intelligence reports claim the Arab leaders are prepared to ease prices.

Even the Russians, who originally encouraged the Arab price squeeze, are growing wary. Intelligence reports say Kremlin leaders now fear that prices could cause such severe economic dislocations that it could lead to a rise in fascism rather than Communism.

It is beginning to look as if world pressure may force the Arabs to reduce oil prices.

Behind Mills' Offer: House Ways and Means Chairman Wilbur Mills, probably the most powerful member of Congress, has offered to introduce legislation granting President Nixon immunity from prosecution if he will resign. Here's the story behind this extraordinary offer:

Mills is conducting the investigation into President Nixon's tax returns. This was requested by the President himself to determine whether he owes more taxes. The central controversy is over the $576,000 tax deduction he claimed for giving his vice presidential papers to the government.

Mills' investigators have now established that the deed, turning over the papers, was backdated to make it appear that they were donated before July 25, 1969. Thereafter, tax deductions were no longer allowed for historical papers.

The investigators have also uncovered that Ralph Newman, the appraiser, didn't even select which papers should be donated until November 1969 — four months after the deadline.

The use of a backdated deed to gain more than a half-million dollar tax deduction could indicate possible fraud and tax evasion. The Nixon tax returns, of course, were signed by the President and the First Lady who are legally responsible for the statements therein.

It's the possibility of tax fraud that prompted Wilbur Mills to seek immunity from prosecution for the President in return for his resignation.

Foreign Fears: Almost desperately, President Nixon is stressing his foreign policy skills as the trump card in his struggle to stay in office. He has told friends fiercely that no one else is as qualified as he is to play the delicate balance-of-power game with the two Communist superpowers. He has reminded them of his diplomatic achievements in Peking, Moscow and the Middle East.

The White House took pains to inform newsmen that the President sent Secretary of State Henry Kissinger daily guidance instructions during the sensitive negotiations in the Middle East.

But the secret diplomatic messages from around the world indicate that Nixon is hurting, not helping, American foreign policy. The dispatches from Europe, in particular, suggest that our European allies have lost confidence in Nixon and are worried about his ability to commit the United States. It is clear from the secret messages that the Western alliance is deteriorating.

In the Middle East, Kissinger encountered guarded but anxious inquiries about Nixon. The Israelis, who had counted heavily upon Nixon's support, expressed special concern that he is losing his power.

Even in the Kremlin, according to the secret intelligence reports, there is an understanding that Nixon has been mortally weakened. The messages from Peking, typically, are more enigmatic. But increasingly, Kissinger appears as the man who is holding American foreign policy together.

Privately, State Department strategists are saying Kissinger could do this even better under a President Ford than President Nixon.

An Antitax Year: The Internal Revenue Service is afraid 1974 might be a bad year. Voluntary compliance is the bedrock of the tax system. Audits are run only on a random basis. Therefore, the government must depend upon the honesty of its citizens to collect taxes.

The IRS is afraid that the voluntary system has been eroded by the events of the past year. First, ex-Vice President Spiro Agnew was caught cheating on his taxes. Now President Nixon, himself, is in tax trouble.

But more than anything else, the high profits and low taxes of the oil companies are stirring up antitax feelings. Many Americans no longer feel they are taxed fairly. For every dollar that the oil companies escape paying in taxes must be made up by the rest of the taxpayers.

The energy crisis has also persuaded some people that they can get away with cheating on their taxes. For weeks now, the IRS has been receiving complaints about price gouging at the gas pumps. Yet only a few stations have been taken to court. The IRS simply doesn't have the manpower to run down all the complaints.

So Americans have seen many stations get away with charging outrageous prices. The aura of enforcement around the IRS has been damaged and our IRS sources say some people may be encouraged to fudge on their tax returns.

The revelations of 1973, in other words, might have serious consequences for the IRS in 1974.

Two Dothan sisters are 'Alumni of Year'

Two of Alabama's leading citizens - Mrs. Evelyn Ellis Mullen and Mrs. LouiseEllis Crammer, sisters from Dothan and co-directors of the women's division of City National Bank there - will add another honor to their lengthy list of special awards during the University of Montevallo's annual homecoming festivities on Saturday, February 9.

They have been named as the 1974 "Alumni of the Year" and will appear as guests of honor at major homecoming and College Night events throughout the day.

This year's honorees are natives of Columbiana and are daughters of Mrs. L.H. Ellis and the late Judge Handy Ellis, who served as a state legislator and Lt. Governor in the mid-1940's.

Both have held positions of leadership in the Dothan area for many years in education, civic, church and service groups.

Mrs. Crammer was a classroom teacher in Dothan for some sixteen years and served as principal of the Selma Street Elementary School for eighteen years before her retirement. She was director of the Recreational Center in Jacksonville, Ala. during World War II.

Mrs. Mullen was a teacher at Dothan's Young Junior High School and city schools attendance supervisor during some 22 years' service in public education. She served a six year tenure with the Department of Welfare there.

Both women retired from active service in education in May 1972, and were honored the following month at a special "Two Sisters Day" observance in Dothan.

Their joint community service activities include leadership roles at the Wiregrass Reading Disability Clinic, of which Mrs. Crammer was president and co-founder, and the Dothan Association for Retarded Children.

Each has received numerous local, state and national awards for outstanding citizenship.

Their selection as "Alumni of the Year" sets a new precedent at the University of Montevallo. Since the selection began in 1945, the honor has gone to only one person each year.

They will be formerly presented to U.M. alumni and guests at the noon Homecoming luncheon, and will receive special recognition at an afternoon tea in King House and at intermission of College Night stage productions Saturday evening in Palmer Auditorium.

Alabaster hears 26 new cases

Andrea Burgess, Alabaster court clerk, reports that the City of Alabaster considered 26 new cases, 12 old cases, and 31 alias cases at that city's municipal court last week.

Of these cases, 12 cases were paid, two were nol prossed, 17 were continued, nine new alias warrants were issued and 29 old alias cases were outstanding.

Yet hope exists--

Bleak future looms in coming months

by Congressman Walter Flowers

Almost all of the predictions for our nation's future in the year ahead are bleak. The fuel crisis -- other shortages -- inflation -- Watergate -- lack of confidence in government -- unemployment -- on all of these counts there seems to be trouble ahead for America.

During the Christmas Congressional recess, I was able to spend a full month in Alabama. Through many personal contacts with people, I learned that major areas of concern seem to be the energy problem and the status of our economy. Of course, everyone is deeply concerned for the leadership of our nation, whether they are inclined to support or oppose the President individually. Conversations with other Members of Congress this past week report similar findings with their constituents.

The issue of impeachment is a first priority in this new year. The inquiry must go forward -- everyone agrees -- and it must be thorough and complete -- but it must also be expeditious and the earliest possible conclusion is imperative for the good of the country.

The people are also saying loud and clear, "Do not forget the practical problems of our lives or the needs of our nation, in your preoccupation with the President's fate." That means Congress will be judged by its willingness to share responsibility in hard policy choices facing the nation -- allocation of scarce resources of energy, materials and revenues -- management of forces of inflation and recession -- balancing of domestic needs and our international obligations. In recent years, Congress may have shown a tendency to waver, procrastinate or pass the buck on tough issues. Congress should realize the crisis of confidence which infects our land is not only a disease of the Executive Branch.

In the aftermath of a long war, in the midst of national scandal of Watergate and afflicted by so many grave economic problems, there is certainly cause for despair and gloom. But there is a great fighting spirit in our country that comes forth most forcefully in times of trouble.

There is a remarkable resilience in our system of democracy and in our people. We shall learn how to overcome these new economic problems in the same way we have dealt with other great problems of the past.

On every side there is evidence of hope and opportunity offering great rewards to those willing to work and sacrifice in order to fulfill their own special vision of life's work. Throughout our history we've been characterized as a warm and generous people willing to work and to share with the less fortunate what the successful have been able to achieve. The basic decency and goodness so evident in the many forms of voluntary effort and charity are uniquely American.

There is a special satisfaction at living in this decisive time in history. There is special meaning and opportunity to everything that we do these days. Indeed, our very existence and survival depend on how we cope with today's problems.

I firmly believe that the cause of future generations of Americans is worthy of our strongest energies at this time.

Antique shops offer charm to Shelby County

by Willard Harrison

Antique shops are mushrooming in Shelby County. Two years ago there were four dealers in the county. At last count there are seven antique stores in the county . . . unless another one has popped up since last week.

And the strange thing is that there seems to be no limit to the number of antique shops Shelby County can contain. There seems to be no competition between them, mainly because each one is so different from any other. Each shop handles a constantly changing inventory of almost one-of- a-kind merchandise; and if one shop doesn't have what the customer is looking for, the store owner will refer the shopper to another local shop that might have the item.

Another reason for this friendship between the shops is love for the business. Mrs. Gene Bryant told the Reporter that she has been in the antique business for over 20 years, much of that at her shop near Saginaw. After opening her shop in the county, Mrs. Bryant got many of her friends interested in selling antiques. In a few years time, several had begun operating antique stalls inside Bryant's Antiques Mall. Before long some of them had branched out to start their own shops in Shelby County.

Antique shops seem to lack cut-throat competition for customers. Mrs. James Hackney commented that the people who browse through one county antique shop inevitably visit them all, some every week or so. The antique shopper might find one thing that interests him in one store, something else in another, and so on. She added that a person might come to her shop for months admiring a piece of furniture before he finally buys

Sales are consistently good with all types on antiques, according to the dealers. Many people buy antiques as an investment, since prices are constantly on the rise. Nor does it depreciate in value. For that reason many young people are buying antiques rather than new furniture, since after a short while new furniture becomes used furniture while antiques become even more valuable. Although modern copies of antique furniture are readily available, many people consider the originals to be sturdier and of a higher quality than new furniture.

Since each antique shop is distinctively different, each is able to specialize and offer something new (or old) to the buying public. Some offer primitive furnishing, others more formalized furniture, and still others specialize in glassware, farm implements, and modern collectibles.

Bryant's Antiques specializes in 17th and 18th century furniture and accessories. Their building, formerly a bowling alley, is filled with a variety of furniture from formal to the more exotic. Items range from grandfather clocks to wicker bird cage stands. Mrs. Gene Bryant commented that art sells very well, from traditional portraits to oriental pictures. Another part of Bryant's business is the regularly scheduled public auctions in their antique auction gallery. Mrs. Bryant stated that people come from miles around and from out-of- state for the auctions.

Pelham Mall sports a two-in-one antique shop, Janie's and Hobson's Antiques. One part of the stock is owned by Mrs. James Hackney while the other half is the inventory of Mrs. C.F. Hobson. Mrs. Hackney stated that the two have a very good partnership. Each buys her own type of antiques to sell in the shop, and their different tastes give a variety to the store. Mrs. Hackney told the Reporter that she got started in the business purely as a hobby. Her husband told her that she was getting so many antiques in their home that she should stop buying and start selling. She took him up on it, and after working for fourteen months at Bryant's, she and Mrs. Hobson rented a place in Pelham and began their own business.

A TOUCH OF ANTIQUITY -- The world of antiques holds something for everyone. One of the biggest pleasures is finding that special treasure, whether it be furniture, pottery, cut glass, tapestry, china, art works, or curios. The antique shops in Shelby County offer a wide range of items, from flea market miscellany to expensive handmade furniture pieces.

Ann's Antiques at Pelham offers an outdoorsy atmosphere with cannon balls, ironwork, steer horns and other items on display outside. Ann Gilpin has been at her present location next to Collins Curb Market for about a year. Her antiques include a large selection of depression glass, dishes made in occupied Japan, primitives, and antique furniture. She commented that many of her customers were newlyweds and young marrieds, plus a number of young single people.

Aurelia Hughes specializes in early country American furniture. She found such a demand for that kind of furniture that she searches the country for those pieces. Mrs. Hughes keeps a staff of refinishers busy working on the old furniture. She also has a cabinetmaker who makes new items to order for antique collectors who need a matching piece of furniture. Her antique shop is located on the Cahaba Valley Road near the north entrance of Oak Mountain State Park.

Mrs. Hughes has been in the antique business in the county for eighteen years. She told the Reporter that she still handles quite a lot of pewter, silver, china, and cut glass. She said that her stock is down because she is discriminating in regard to what she will sell.

Now that her husband has retired he has joined her in the business. They have recently expanded their line to include more gift items and rustic furniture. Mrs. Hughes told us that her annual Christmas open house at the shop had drawn 2,000 people to see the antique holiday decorations.

Calera has an antique shop as well. Eleanor Anderson runs Eleanor's Flowers, Gifts and Antiques shop. She has combined the three businesses under one roof. Her customers can select whatever type of home furnishing they want, whether is is old or modern or floral.

Eleanor's antiques are located in one half of the store, since she is selling them for her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Eddie Downs. The items run the gamut from oddly- shaped tables and bread boards, to mule collars and other farm tools and paraphenalia.

Asked to describe the contents of Myers' Antique Shop, Mrs. Myers said, "We have a few antiques and a lot of junk." While as a general rule antiques are considered to be over 100 years old, many items of more recent origin are selling phenomenally. Mrs. Myers stated that they have quite a bit of merchandise such as bottles, watches, and other items which are regular sellers. She commented that many of the items they have on hand are "farm implements, utensils, and things many of us grew up with."

Mrs. Gracie Hutchison stated that she had gotten into the antique business to support her family. Oak Ridge Antiques, across from Valley School, is a relative newcomer to the field in Shelby County. Mrs. Hutchison says that her best customers are antique dealers, because "private people are only interested in buying specific things." She stated that much of her merchandise is from the 1920's and later.

An interest in history and nostalgia is contributing to the antique boom in Shelby County. The higher standard of living coupled with uncertain economic conditions are causing many people to buy items of solid value in the antique field. They want something with quality, charm, and the magic of "the good old days." More than ever antiques have become a reflection of individuality that to many would be stifled by the mass-produced products of today's retail market.

Wilsonville group honors clergy

Conrad M. Fowler, Judge of Probate, will address the Wilsonville Civitan Club at its annual observance of International Clergy Week, which is set for February 3-9 this year.

Mr. A.B. Carder, Club President, said the Wilsonville Club's observance would be held at 7 p.m. at the Wilsonville School lunchroom.

The dates of Clergy Week were set to include the anniversary of the sinking of the USS Dorchester during World War II.

When the Dorchester sank within 27 minutes of being torpedoed on February 3, 1943, four chaplains gave their life jackets to others and went down with the ship, arms locked together and voices raised in prayer. This heroic deed of brotherhood and love has been a source of inspiration to others.

"These four 'Men of God', a rabbi, a priest and two ministers, are remembered in the International Clergy Week programs", said Mr. Carder.

The four chaplains who gave their lives for others on the Dorchester were George L. Fox and Clark V. Poling, the Protestants: John P. Washington, the Roman Catholic; and Alexander D. Goode, the Jew.

The International Observance program is scheduled for February 8 at Washington, D.C.

Retired Astronaut James Irwin, the eighth man to walk on the moon, is Civitan's Honorary Chairman for Clergy Week. Irwin, who reported a spiritual experience while on the moon, is now in evangelical work with the organization he founded, "High Flight".

The Alburquerque, New Mexico Civitan Club originated the idea to honor the four chaplains in mid-1960. Since then Civitans have spread the original plan to show appreciation to all clergymen.

Discrimination suit filed

A black woman has filed suit in federal court that she lost her job teaching in Valley Elementary School in Pelham because of her race.

In the suit filed Friday, January 25 in Birmingham, Mrs. Johnnie Mae Warmley of Bessemer is asking for back pay and $150,000 in damages. She is suing School Superintendent Elvin Hill and the members of the Shelby County Board of Education.

According to a local daily paper, the suit says that her teaching contract was not renewed at the end of the 1972-1973 school year, and that Hill had written her saying that her contract was not renewed because she was unable to discipline small reading groups.

Mrs. Warmley claims in the suit that this allegation was "false and defamatory" and was made "maliciously and with knowledge of its falsity." According to the suit, this hurt her ability to get work in Alabama as a school teacher.

Superintendent Hill told the Reporter he would have no comment until the suit is served and the school board's attorneys study the suit.

Quarrel leads to shooting in Alabaster area

A family quarrel led to the shotgun shooting of Leon Doaks of Alabaster on Friday, January 25. His wife, Sara May Doaks was arrested for the shooting, which left her husband in cricital condition in University Hospital.

According to police reports, the couple had been having disagreements for nearly a week. Mrs. Doaks told the police that she had gone to the doctor the Friday before, and when she returned her husband had gone. When he returned on Sunday they began to quarrel at the home of a neighbor.

In her statement for police reports, Mrs. Doaks said that her husband later went to visit with his mother. When he returned to their house on Friday, the 25th, Leon Doaks reportedly told his wife that he didn't plan to move back in with her and the children.

Sara May Doaks told the police that she asked him if she had done wrong. When he answered no, the shooting ensued.

Neighbors called the Alabaster police, who arrived at 6:20 p.m. at the Doaks home on Simmsville Road. Police lieutenant Sonny Davenport stated that when he entered the house Leon Doaks was shot in the chest. The officers determined that Doaks had been shot with a 20-guage shotgun loaded with number eight shot. Mrs. Doaks was arrested for the shooting, and her husband was taken to Birmingham's University Hospital

Briarcliff handles fire

By Willard Harrison

A careless cigarette caused a mattress to catch on fire, but because everybody at Briarcliff Nursing Home had thought ahead and planned for such an emergency, the fire was quickly extinguished, all patients were quickly evacuated, and the story had a happy ending.

Fire alarms sent fire trucks speeding to the Alabaster nursing home Thursday afternoon. A smoldering mattress had triggered smoke detectors, which automatically caused smoke doors to lock and contain the trouble.

The smoke came from a resident's room in the north wing of the hospital. She had been smoking, and according to Briarcliff's administrator C.L. Hyche, the patient had left her cigarette on the bed when she went to another room to...

Before any damage could result, automatic smoke detectors set off alarms in the nursing home and the Alabaster fire stations. The city's fire trucks were on the scene within minutes. At the first detected sign of smoke, the automatic smoke doors locked to prevent oxygen from getting in to fuel any flames.

The employees of the nursing home carried out their emergency duties quite smoothly. The door to the smokefilled room was pulled closed to contain as much smoke as possible.

The nurses and employees began evacuating all the patients in the area, beginning with the bed-ridden. According to Hyche, the evacuation plan was carried out with no panic or disorderliness, as it had been done so many times before in fire drills. The only difference was, he added, that this time it was not a drill.

Residents were removed from the halls by way of predetermined escape routes, bypassing the smoke doors which prevented the spread of smoke into the rest of the nursing home. The staff and residents used several exits located along the one-floor building.

The smoking mattress was dragged from the building and sprayed with a powder-type fire extinguisher.

Once the excitement had died down, staff members attempted to remove the smoke from the building with an exhaust fan, but they found the gasoline-powered fan was out of fuel.

When one of the nursing home employees went up to a policeman at the scene and asked him to get some gasoline, eyebrows went way up, but after some fast explaining about the engine for the fan, the gasoline was obtained, and the nursing home was soon back to normal.

Honeycutt are troop cookie managers.

In Calera, Mrs. Carl Vance, Mrs. Carlton West and Mrs. W.G. Holocmbe are troop managers.

In Montevallo, Mrs. Nolan Hardin, Mrs. Ed Zhumensky, Mrs. Robert Kunkel and Mrs. Jose Hernandez are cookie troop managers.

At the Valley school, Mrs. Gene Wrobel and Mrs. Jean Harmon will be managing troop cookie supplies.

Scout cookies are a dollar a box this year, but because the Shelby County girls decided to conduct an early campaign, the cookie supply house is giving them a bigger commission than in former years, according to Mrs. Hugh Youngblood, neighborhood chairman.

This is the tenth cookie sale conducted by the Cahaba Council. Benefits from provious sales have brought tremendous growth to Camp Gertrude Coleman and Camp Blossom Hill. Swimming pools, winterized lodges, dining halls, kitchens, bath houses, trucks and a tractor are just a few of the items cookie sale dollars have purchased.

Each troop also retains a portion of the purchase price for use on local troop projects.

Zeigler walks in campaign

Jim Zeigler,a 25-year-old Sylacauga native, has announced his candidacy for the Alabama Public Service Commission with a pledge to walk across Alabama.

Zeigler, who tried to get a reduction in electric bills last year, says he will use the technique of walking over areas of the state because he does not have a large campaign budget.

Zeigler is opposing incumbent P.S.C member C.C. (Jack) Owens. Zeigler says he is running because "the P.S.C. has failed to do its job."

According to Zeigler, the job of the P.S.C. is "to hold utility bills down to a reasonable level and to maintain good utility service."

Zeigler challenged electric rates of Alabama Power Company last year, accusing the utility of making exorbitant profits.

He says he will investigate all utility rate increases over the past three years and will make cut-backs when possible.

"The way the P.S.C. is set up works in favor of the special interests and works against the consumer," Zeigler says.

which covered Type A and Type AJG bituminous treatment asphalt.

Central Alabama Paving was apparent low bidder on the tack coat and plant mix for a total of $192,600.

The Commission then heard Joe Tidmore, of Gulf Oil Corporation and Bill Seale of Standard Oil describe the difficulties and expenses they might expect in gasoline, oil, and grease supplies for the county machinery. The theme of the message was, increased prices and short supplies.

In other action, the Commission signed an agreement with Task Consultants of Huntsville to provide a study of indirect costs of government operation that can be applied to the county's credit when seeking federal grants. The contract was in the amount of $9,500.

Montevallo council OK's more paydays

Montevallo's municipal employees will soon have two extra pay days per year.

Montevallo's city council, acting on a request from the employees, voted Monday night to issue checks every other Firday, beginning February 1.

Total pay per person will not be altered, according to a city spokesman. Instead of issuing pay checks twice a month, the new system will call for pay periods every other week. The new result is 26 pay checks per year instead of 24.

In other action Monday night, the council voted to impose two dog detention periods per year instead of one.

The dog detention period is a week set aside when all dogs must be kept either on leash or penned up. All dogs running loose during these periods are subject to impoundment at a veterinarian's office until inoculated and assigned a dog tax number.

The action follows a series of complaints about dogs in the city's residential areas.

The council voted to have a detention period in April and in October.

Councilman J.D. Holsomback informed the council that the University of Montevallo had donated its old non-operative fire truck to the city. The truck will be put up on blocks in the city park for children to play on.

Councilmen J.A. Brown and Grady Parker led discussions on the city's proposed fire hall. Parker and Brown told of visiting numerous buildings throughout Alabama and their efforts to incorporate the best features into Montevallo's new building.

Preparation of the site for the new building is nearing completion.

In final action Monday night the council opened bids for a compact car for general municipal use. The contract was awarded to Leach Pontiac for a LeMans four- door sedan.

Pelham police officer injured in 2-car collision

Pelham policeman Howard Brogden was hospitalized following a two-car collision on Sunday, January 27 at 8:45 p.m. Brogden's car was hit by another car at the intersection near Shelby Memorial Hospital.

According to investigating officers, Brogden's patrol car was heading north on Highway 31, when he passed through a green light at the intersection. Apparently a car on the southbound lane attempted a left turn on the rain-slicked roads, and collided with Brogden's left rear door. Pelham police Chief David Watson stated that the other driver was unhurt, but that Brogden had a head cut, bruises, and abrasions.

Officer Brogden was taken to Shelby Memorial Hospital, where he was kept over night. Chief Watson said that he expects the hospital to release Brogden shortly.

Watson told the Reporter that officers present at the scene estimated about $800 damage to each car.

In county tournament--

Montevallo HS wins championship

Seven local basketball teams saw action last week as the Shelby County Basketball Tournament got underway last Tuesday night at the University of Montevallo gymnasium. In the first round, Indian Springs played Calera, Shelby County met Chelsea, and Thompson squared off with Vincent. Last year's county champions, the Montevallo Bulldogs, were awarded a bye.

Indian Springs edged past Calera in the first game by the score of 45-43. Joe Simonetti and Rusty Ruston were the high scorers for Indian Springs scoring 15 and 12 points, respectively. Willie Lacy shot for 15 points to lead Calera's scoring.

In the second game Tuesday night, the Shelby County Wildcats downed the Chelsea Hornets 55-52. Dickie Porter was the high man for the Wildcats with 15 points. He was followed by teammate Bobby Madison who scored 13 points. Mike Young shot for 27 points for the Hornets and Gary Fulmer scored 21 points for Chelsea.

Thompson defeated Vincent by a substantial margin, 71-46. Mike Oden and Steve Luker had 22 and 17 points for Thompson while Maurice Robinson scored 10 points for Vincent.

In the first game of the semi-finals Shelby County jumped to an early lead over Thompson and were out front at the end of the first quarter. The Wildcat's lead didn't last long, however. Thompson player James Tanniehill made two quick baskets during the final seconds of the first half to put the Warriors ahead 26-23 when the buzzer sounded. Thompson was still leading 42-35 at the end of three quarters. The Warriors turned on the steam to win it 58-43 over Shelby County.

James Tanniehill scored 21 points for the Warriors and Mike Oden shot for 19 more THS points. Don Portis made 13 points in the game for the Wildcats followed by teammate Dickie Porter with 10 points.

In the following game the Montevallo Bulldogs made their first appearance on the tournament court meeting Indian Springs. The Bulldogs led 19-16 at the end of the first quarter, 20-22 at the half, 53-30 at the end of the third quarter, and won the contest 65-44.

Percy Brown, playing only two quarters for Montevallo, led the scoring with 13 points. Eddie Tyus was in second place in the Montevallo scoring department with 12 points. Bruce Lilly led the Indian Springs offense by shooting for 12 points.

In the consolation game played on Friday night, Shelby County went up against Indian Springs. The Wildcats from Columbiana won the contest 60-41. Shelby led all the way. The score was 8-6 at the end of the first quarter, 24-16 at the half, and 40-26 at the end of three quarters.

Don Portis gained the most points for the Wildcats by scoring 15. Rusty Rushton, Gary Morrow and Jim McCaul all scored nine points each to lead Indian Spring's offensive attack.

Montevallo won the tournament championship game in a contest that went right down to the wire. Thompson led 18-17 at the end of the starting period of play. At halftime it was the Montevallo Bulldogs who led by one point, 29-28. The Bulldogs led by five points, 47-42 at the end of the third quarter, but Thompson came back and closed the gap so that Montevallo edged the Warriors by a single point, 55-54.

Slip in conference rating--

UM Falcons lose two games on north Ala. road trips

The University of Montevallo Falcons went on the road last week traveling to Athens on Tuesday night, January 22. There the Falcons lost a 90-94 contest to Athens College.

"I was pleased with the performance at Athens," commented University of Montevallo head coach Bill Jones. "They're a top-notch club with some outstanding shooters, but we played good ball and made them run for the money!"

Gerald Douglas, the leading Falcon rebounder and scorer, was the top shooter in the Athens game with 33 points. Douglas missed a key jump shot with time running out. At that time the score was 92-90 in favor of Athens, but an Athens player was fouled in the closing seconds and hit two free throws for the 94-90 score.

The University of Montevallo dropped another close game Thursday night in Cullman to St. Bernard college. The score of that game was 77-76.

This loss gave the Falcons a losing record in the Southern States basketball tournament for the first time this season. The University team is now 3-4 in conference play and 11-7 overall so far this year.

Assistant Falcon coach Ron Bell commented that the UM cagers played well enough to win with good hustle and rebounding, but had an off night in the shooting department. Bell disclosed that the Falcons only hit 40 percent of their shots and was 14 for 24 on free throws. "It's a tough way to loose," he added.

Falcon ace Charles Averhart led Montevallo's attack with 17 points and 18 rebounds. Charles Dickenson, a six foot, five inch freshman from Birmingham, made his appearance on the court scoring 15 points for the Falcons and grabbing nine rebounds. Other UM high scorers were Gerald Douglas with 13 points and David Porterfield with 12 points.

Ronnie Tyus scored 13 points to lead the Bulldogs to victory. Tyus was followed by teammate Percy Brown who shot for eleven points. Mike Oden led Thomspon in scoring with 30 points.

Oden was also named the most valuable player in the tournament. Other players from Thompson High on the all-county team were James Tanniehill and Steve Luker. Ronnie Tyus, Percy Brown and Willie Moore were Montevallo's contribution to the all-star ranks. Other all-conference players and their schools were Dickie Porter, Shelby County; Gary Morrow, Indian Springs; Kenneth Fair, Vincent; Willie Lacy, Calera; and Mike Young, Chelsea.

Henke also reports that Charles Glen who lives on the Saginaw road and Bobby Boyles of Wilsonville caught a string of bass on Sunday that weighed 33 pounds three ounces. The largest fish in this group weighed six pounds.

Warrior Drive nets funds for charity

The Thompson High School Warrior Drive was held last Wednesday, Thursday and Friday. The student council sponsored a three-day series of events for the school student body. Admission was charged each day, and the proceeds given to charity.

Events in the drive included a student, faculty basketball game, two hours of "Goofey Games", and a talent show.

Student Debbie Seagle was in charge of the drive. Also on the program committee of the student council- sponsored event were Joe Janeway, Kathy Hutchison, Kim White, Debbie Parker, David Finley and Chester Gauntt.

The Warrior Drive was started in 1956 and was a single large effort each to raise money for charity. Charities patronized by the drive this year include: the March of Dimes, Mental Health, Heart Fund, and the American Cancer Society.

BASKETBALL RELAY - - Thompson High School students try to ring a basket as part of a relay race held in the school's gym. The event was part of a three day fund raising drive last week sponsored by the student council. Money collected will be donated to charity.

THE NOSE ROLLS - - A T.H.S. student pushes a roll of toilet paper across the floor with his nose as part of the fun and frolics of the Warrior Drive.

A letter from Bill Baxley

by Bill Baxley
Attorney General

My staff and I along with the Montgomery County District Attorney's Office have been involved this week in the trial of one of the co-defendants in the Alabama Highway Department fraud case. These trials are the result of an intensive investigation which uncovered one of the largest scandals in the history of our State.

Ruby Latham was convicted in the Circuit Court of Montgomery County on Wednesday of this week in connection with the Highway Department scandal. Miss Latham was convicted of grand larceny and false pretense. More specificially, she was charged with taking money from the State of Alabama in return for non- existent machinery parts. The evidence in the case showed that Miss Latham and others concocted a scheme whereby they defrauded the State of Alabama out of nearly $150,000 dollars.

I am hopeful that the conviction of Miss Latham will lead to others who were involved in the scheme. It is difficult for me to believe that she came up with this scheme without help from "higher-up" individuals.

The Highway Department cases are an excellent example of the "white collar" crime crisis that we face in America today. Tax evasion schemes, election violations, bribes, and consumer fraud are rampant in this country today. Our courts, for the most part still spend a large portion of their time in the trial of "nickel and dime" criminals who have participated in some form of petty theft. These "nickel and dime" criminals are punished as they should be, however, millions of dollars are stolen by the "white collar" criminals every year and most of these criminals go unpunished.

I hope that during my tenure of office governmental corruption and "white collar" crime can be exposed fully to the public of this State. No criminal, whatever his class or wealth, should go unpunished. I pledge to the people of this State that I will continue to pursue crime whatever it is and whoever commits it.

Classes offered in Montevallo

Eric Stipe, Montevallo's recreation director, reports that the ever popular slimnastics course will be offered starting at 6:30 every Thursday at the Montevallo High School symnasium.

Stipe also reports that an organizational meeting of the Senior Citizens club will be held at 10 a.m. next Thursday at the Montevallo American Legion hall.

He reminds interested persons that there is still room for new students in the beginning karate class held on Thursday nights at 6:30 p.m. at the Montevallo High School gym.

The recreation director also reports that Montevallo men's basketball league kicked off this Monday night.

Beef business is up in highest yearly volume

Alabama Cattlemen in the past 12 months sold about 250 million dollars worth of cattle, making 1973 the highest volume year in the history of the state.

During the past 12 months more than 700,000 calves weighing from 250 to 650 pounds were shipped from Alabama into about 35 states, including the mid-west and as far west as Californai. Prices received were the best ever.

Alabama now has more than one million head of brood cows and ranks 16th in the nation in the total number of beef cows. Beef cattle production now accounts for one of the largest segments of the state's agricultural income and offers great potential for additional expansion.

'Frisco firm owns plant

In last week's feature story on Dixie Alloy Co. of Calera, the Reporter failed to clarify that Dixie Alloy is operating as a wholly owned subsidiary of Hawley Forge Co. of San Francisco.

George Frost is the general superintendent of the Calera plant.

It's easy. Just mail or bring to our office a photograph of the bride or bride-to-be. Black and white photographs are best. Attach to the picture a write up including the names of bride and groom, names of parents, and grandparents, schools attended, time and place of ceremony, and any other information you think of interest.

If the write up is of a wedding that has already taken place, include a brief description of the bride's dress and the attendants' dresses.

Include your telephone number so that our writers may reach you for any details we may need.

To avoid mix-ups, the Reporter takes engagement and wedding announcements from members of the families only. We do not deal directly with photographers. If the photo has appeared in any other local publication first, we will probably not consider it for publication.

Deadline is noon on Fridays for the following week's paper. If it is impossible for you to meet that deadline, notify us on Friday and we will try to accomodate you on Monday morning.

Miss Morgan marries Mr. Minor in Calera

The marriage of Miss Vesta Theresa Morgan, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Burl W. Morgan of Calera, and Randy William Minor, son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles P. Minor also of Calera took place on Jan 26 in a candlelight service at the Calera Nazarene Church.

Rev. John Osborne, pastor of the church officiated in the double ring ceremony. Preceding the ceremony a program of organ music was presented by Miss Anita Collum.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a floor length A-line gown of white Peau-de- soie, empire styled with Victorian neckline. The sleeves were fitted and cuffed with lace at the wrist and the skirt ended in a chapel length train. Her chapel veil of illusion and aleucon lace was attached to her headpiece of lace leaves accented by pearls. The bride carried a cascade of white carnations and baby's breath centered with a white orchid which she wore on her wedding trip.

Miss Linda Alverson was her maid of honor. Miss Cindy Morgan, sister of the bride and Miss Susan Minor, sister of the groom were her bridesmaids. All wore floor length gowns of pink and lavendar. Master Bryan Glass served as ring bearer and little miss Beverly Cost was flower girl. Mr. Minor was his son's best man. Ushers and groomsmen included Danny Davis, David Morgan, and Ronnie Davis. David Morgan and Ronnie Davis also served as candle lighters.

A reception was held in the annex of the church which was decorated in pink, white and lavendar.

After a wedding trip, the couple will be at home in Calera where the groom is employed at Martin Marietta.

Safety tips

"Darkness is a new safety hazard for children going to school in the mornings", State Public Safety Director, Colonel E.C. Dothard, said today.

"While the return of Daylight Savings Time may help alleviate the energy crisis, it does increase the possibility of automobile and pedestrian crashes, especially young school children", the Director pointed out.

Public Safety records show that seven pedestrian deaths ocurred during the first 24 days of this month, five of which were during hours of darkness.

Motorists driving to work in the dark need to remember that children also are out there walking to school or waiting for their bus.

To make themselves more visible to motorists, Colonel Dothard advised all early-morning pedestrians to wear light - colored clothing. He also suggested applying reflectorized tape, available at most hardware or drug stores, to lunch boxes, books, briefcases, or outer clothing.

"In addition, parents of school children should give special instructions on where to stand while waiting for their bus, and where and how to cross streets. With drivers, pedestrians, and parents being extra cautious, we can prevent the pedestrian death rate from rising", Colonel Dothard said.

Ward promoted

Marine PFC. William R Ward, son of Mr. and Mrs. H.E Ward of Calera, was promoted to his present rank while serving at the Marine Corps Air Station at New River, N.C.

He is assigned to duties as 1st mechanic.

A 1972 graduate of Calera High School, he joined the Marine Corps in November 1972.

Artist retires in Shelby County to pursue painting, drawing and woodworking

by Rick Moore

How many times have you heard a person tell of how he plans to retire to a nice home in the woods, travel, and spend his time actively pursuing the activity he likes best. Probably quite a few. But how many of these talkers actually achieve their dreams? Unfortunately, it's only a few.

Orville Allen of the Spring Creek community near Montevallo is one of the few who has seen his plans become reality.

Allen retired from the Birmingham fire department last March and built a beautiful new home on a wooded lot in Shelby County over a near ago. This in itself is not very unusual. What makes Allen's story an interesting one is that he is now following a second career as an artist.

"I began painting as a kid -- about nine or ten years old," Allen explained. He has been fascinated with art ever since. About 15 years ago he began seriously working on his art, building up to the point where he could devote all his time to painting as he does now.

Allen went on to say that he has been studying art for a long time working with many accomplished artists over the years.

Allen paints with oils, acrylics, water color, and does pen and ink drawings. He also makes his own frames in a workshop he has behind his house.

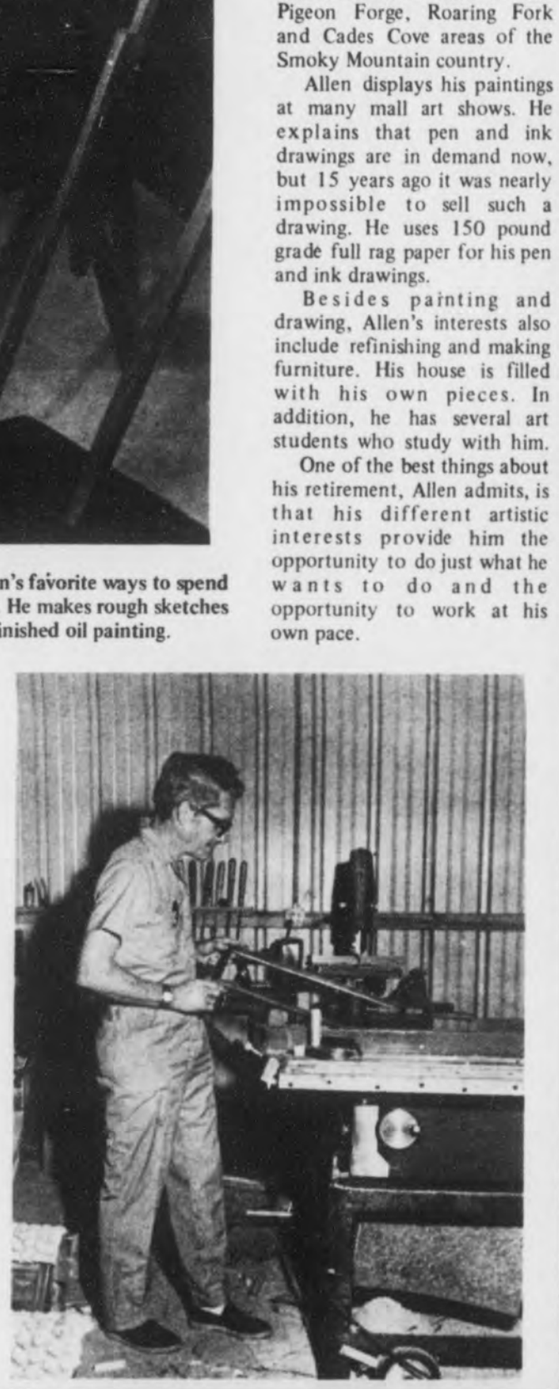
The artist explains that he enjoys architectural art the best -- painting pictures of old houses, barns and grist mills. He also paints people, landscapes, florals, landscapes and birds.

Allen makes trips to the different buildings and scenes he paints. He takes pictures of the subject with his camera and makes a rough sketch and notes, all of which he puts on file. When the time comes to make a painting or drawing of the scene he has an accurate record of its appearance.

Orville Allen now has paintings hanging in his studio of scenes from New Orleans; Natchez, Miss.; and of the Pigeon Forge, Roaring Fork and Cades Cove areas of the Smoky Mountain country.

Allen displays his paintings at many mall art shows. He explains that pen and ink drawings are in demand now, but 15 years ago it was nearly impossible to sell such a drawing. He uses 150 pound grade full rag paper for his pen and ink drawings.

Besides painting and drawing, Allen's interests also include refinishing and making furniture. His house is filled with his own pieces. In addition, he has several art students who study with him.



One of the best things about his retirement, Allen admits, is that his different artistic interests provide him the opportunity to do just what he wants to do and the opportunity to work at his own pace.

OILS GIVE VARIETY -- Painting with oil is one of Orville Allen's favorite ways to spend a day. The house he is working on here is located in Mississippi. He makes rough sketches at the scene and also works from photographs to complete the finished oil painting.

PEN AND INK DRAWINGS -- Orville Allen says it takes about six hours for him to complete a pen and ink drawing. He enjoys doing homes and other buildings and finds pen and ink well suited to many of his favorite subjects.

FRAMES SET OFF THE WORK -- Like many painters, Allen likes to make his own frames so they will give the right border to the painting or drawing. Here he works on new frames at the bench saw at his home near Montevallo. (Photos by Rick Moore)

Soaring propane prices hurt elderly and poor

by Alabama LP-Gas Association

The rapidly increasing price of propane has been a point of great concern to all of the Alabama consumers of LP-Gas.

Claude F. Allison, Executive Director of the Alabama LP-Gas Association, pointed out in a letter sent to all LP-Gas dealer members this week that the increases are largely due to a practice allowed by the Cost of Living Council on the pass-through provision for increased costs of crude oil.

Producers and refiners are allowed to pass on increased costs of crude to ANY petroleum product other than gasoline, diesel and fuel oil. Unfortunately, a very substantial part of the crude oil price has been passed on to propane consumers. The suppliers, being allowed to distribute the increased costs on uncontrolled products in any proportion or ratio they desire, have passed a very substantial part of these increases to propane.

"In fact, this unfair and inequitable practice has caused some suppliers to raise the wholesale price of propane as much as 400 percent in the past year while many other petroleum products have increased less than 25 percent," Allison stated. "Further, only about 34 percent of our propane supply comes from crude oil including imports and domestic production. The remaining supply comes from natural gas plants. So actually, only a very small percentage of the increased costs should be charged against propane."

"I see no justification for the people of rural America to be forced to carry more than their fair share of the energy crisis. Many of the elderly and rural poor are being severly hurt, I only hope that we won't have to wait until some elderly person freezes before the government regulations are changed," Allison added.

William McEwen dies at age 70

William Mabry McEwen, 70, Anniston, died at his residence after a short illness.

Survivors include three sisters, Mrs. Ida Odell Ritchie and Mrs. Athlena Graham, both of Anniston, and Mrs. Mary Mintor of Akron, Ohio; two brothers, T.K. McEwen of Anniston, and Parrish McEwen of Tuscaloosa.

Mr. McEwen was a native of Wilsonville, employed at B.F. Goodrich Tire Co., of Akron, Ohio, 40 years, a member of United Rubber Workers Union No. 5 of Akron, Ohio and lived in Anniston four months.

'Shoplifting is big problem,' say Shelby County store managers

by Willard Harrison

Shoplifting in Shelby County--it is a very real problem. According to various store managers around the county, shoplifters come in all shapes and sizes, ranging from children to older prople.

An apparent rise in shoplifting is causing a rise in prices at some stores, the unpleasantness of arrest and prosecution of those apprehended, and increased suspicion of the innocent shoppers.

Mrs. Lucille Wooten, manager of the Calera Bargain Town store, stated that shoplifting has caused a 2% rise in prices of their merchandise in 1973. As a result, the store chain has begun a program rewarding employees for the apprehension and conviction of shoplifters. During 1973, the chain paid out $1,350.00 to employees under this program, and 135 persons were arrested for shoplifting throughout the chain.

Harvey Rochester, owner - manager of Rochester's in Montevallo, told the Reporter that shoplifting is a small problem for them, but it does exist. He said that much of the pilferage is done by people who don't need to steal. He stated that though he can understand why a poor person steals, it is difficult to know why more affluent people do it. Rochester said that in the past the store has even bought back merchandise stolen from them. The thieves bring items back claiming they are unsatisfactory, and the store gives them the money the person supposedly paid. Rochester added that he has remedied that problem lately, however.

Jim Strickland of Strickland's in Columbiana told us that shoplifting is negligible at their clothing store. He said he feels sure that it does exist, but their smaller building and efficient staff is able to curb any temptation. He added that when the store expands into its larger quarters, the shoplifting problem could begin to affect them.

The bigger department store is the most common target for urban shoplifters. This holds true in Shelby County according to Howard Prater, manager of the Elmore store in Alabaster. Prater says that the problem is so serious at the store that it accounts for 4 percent of their merchandise. He told us that the largest number of shoplifters are children aged eight to sixteen. He added that in respect to the price of articles, the most expensive items are taken by people from ages twenty-four to thirty.

Prater told us several reasons shoplifters take items from stores. "Many take things because their budgets are so tight that they can't afford them. They see something the Joneses have, and they feel that they must own one also." He pointed out that in his opinion the public is brainwashed by television commercials, which make them want new merchandise. "They see something they want that they otherwise wouldn't think they need." He said that he feels that many younger shoplifters probably do not realize the seriousness of the crime, but there is little doubt about the 24-30 year age group. Kleptomaniacs are also part of the problem, but they are in the minority, stated Prater. The main cause seems to be pressure from others in a group who practice shoplifting.

The bigger store chains allow for a certain percentage of theft, by adding it unto the unit prices paid by individual stores. Prater stated that at some outlets of the V.J. Elmore chain the shoplifting rate has risen to 10% or 12%, and that such a rate forces the store to use stern measures to curb the problem.

Shoplifting is a very serious problem in Shelby County, though it can range from a near-zero level to rather high rates. It appears that the amount of theft is based on several factors, including store type and size, the number of store employees, the type of merchandise offered, and the kind of people who shop at the stores.

The larger the volume of business, the larger the risk of shoplifting. But it can occur in small stores while it is controlled in bigger ones. Most of the store managers act on the belief that there is no way to solve the problem completely. Their best bet is to keep it in check.

In 1943, Miss Olive Fulton, a draft board clerk, tried over and over again to get an electric fan from the government for her office.

When the draft board dissolved at the end of the war, she still had not received her fan.

Last August the Draft Board was re-activated and Miss Fulton again became clerk.

Recently, she received a package from the government on one of the coldest days of the season. It contained--the electric fan!

Westover woman dies at age 100

Mrs. Ida Laura Cummings, age 100 years, last October, died January 19, in the Leeds Hospital. A native of Cedartown, Georgia, she had lived most of her life in Alabama. She was the wife of the late James Pasqual Cummings, who was active in the sawmill industry in Shelby County. They were long-time residents of the Westover area, and their family here included, also, Mr. Cummings mother, and her mother, "Granny Kilgore", both of whom are affectionately remembered by those of us who were their neighbors. The family were members of the Mr. Tabor Methodist Church while living here.

Survivors of Mrs. Cummings are Mrs. Ella Lybrand, Westover; Mr. Claude Cummings, and Mrs. Ollie Ryan, of Leeds; 12 grandchildren; 15 great-grandchildren; and 5 great-great-grandchildren. Her two youngest children, Frank Cummings and Mrs. Bessie Maxey, had preceded her in death.

Funeral services were held at the Leeds Methodist Church on January 20.

"Going one step further"

Political drama opens

by Mildred White Wallace

EING'S RESPONSIBILITY
he smallest bird performs his best ough few may hear him sing, e newest leaf is adequate forests wild with Spring.
e shyest daisy in the field n tenderly assume ing's responsibility
pacity to bloom.
stinguished most unto himself man in his conceit jects the privilege to serve r Power to compete".

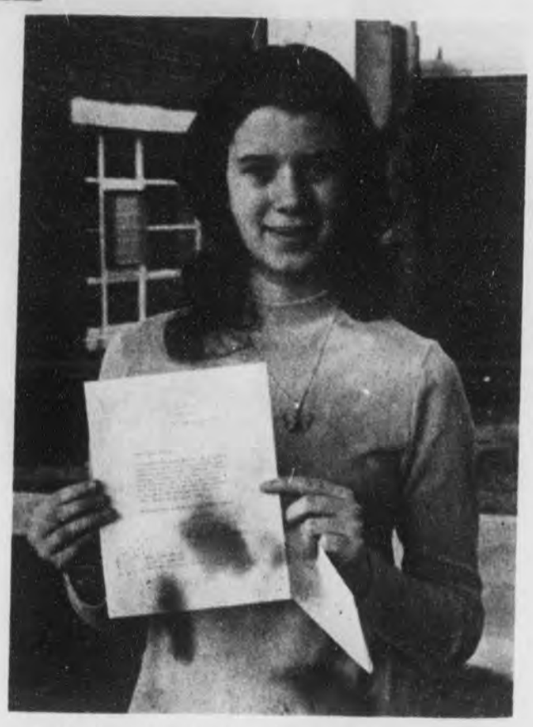
The above poem reminds us it soon politicians will be ting the road seeking your tes and influence as they efully select the material m which they will fashion planks in their platforms which they will take their nd in the upcoming win, e or draw election scheduled May 7. Various powerful icial positions are up for the proval or disapproval of Mr. d Mrs. John Q. Public this ar.



The writer -- in contacting se potential candidates -- tices a new note of polite nsideration now pervades r encounters with these interesting and refreshing characters. They now take "time out" for a "let's talk it over" - as far as controversial issues are concerned. There are no "brush offs"! Some former potential candidates-- taking a second fling for political prestige-- even take time to share memories of former races we have been through together. Their ambitious dreams failed-- that time to materialize -- but it just might be a happier ending this time.

All aspirants are optimistic; and all are confident of winning their respective objectives. Certainly the largest number of eligible voters ever recorded on any poll list in this county will have the privilege of declaring the final verdict. It is they who will furnish the determining factor of the outcome of the county's races. For instance, Shelby County voters will elect a Sheriff, Superintendent of Education, two members of Board of Commissioners, two members Board of Education, District Attorney and Representatives in House and Senate in State Legislature -- Perhaps others. In addition there are State official candidates in which already we "see by the papers" that pants, petticoats and pantaloons will make for interesting viewing from a ring side seat near the state arena.

Preparations of the ingredients for these forthcoming political races are currently being garnered. They will be tossed in the ring soon after the State Democratic Executive Committee's rules and regulations for qualification of candidates have been complied with. After this time political prognosticators will begin to keep their ears keenly attuned close to the ground as they listen for the first political rumble. Next, you will likely perceive well known political figures grouped together on the courthouse grounds, or at the coffee tables or cafes where pertinent matters will be under verbal discussion. it is at this time the political pot will begin to bubble and sputter and you will realize that the battle for ballots is on in full swing in your county and mine!

We have recently talked with several potential candidates about whom we shall have more to say as time goes by. At present the chatter is "off the record". However, you might be on the look out for several dark horses who, unless plans are changed may enter some of these races for political recognition and -- before the final sprint for the goal post is completed -- you might be surprised when the winner is announced.

We hope when the official tabulation of votes is completed that no bitterness will be left to cloud the present cherubic faces; and that no sudden paralysis may ensue to check the friendly outstretched hand of good old comradeship we are now enjoying. Life is happier while these amenities linger.

Old houses give way to business growth

More old houses in Columbiana come tumbling down. The home of Mrs. Kitty Norris, deceased, on College Street, is reported to have been purchased by the First National Bank. It is being torn down this week and age- old trees along this street are also being felled. A surprising amount of firewood for re-opened fireplaces -- now available -- from these giant oaks may help solve the heating problem. So, if you feel inclined to go all the way back to the so-called "good old days" -- try lighting a few candles while enjoying a cup of java with an old friend and watching the blue flames curl up the chimney.

Valley Mills is reported to have bought the old Roy Lester home on West College Street which has also been torn down.

An interested citizen seeking to keep garbage off our highways and trying to prevent dumping trash in places other than those designated for this purpose tells us of having recently taken a trip through the dirt road leading by the old rock house Westover-Harpersville area. On this road she found quite a collection of unsightly garbage. Among the debris were several last year car tags -- which probably would, if traced by number, lead to the person guilty of throwing this garbage around. She offers it as a suggestion for Kitti Klean to follow through. We hope Kitti Klean will "scat" right on this project and catch the culprit who so carelessly ruined the scenery along this rural highway.

Cooking deer meat in Chelsea

By Shelba S. Nivens

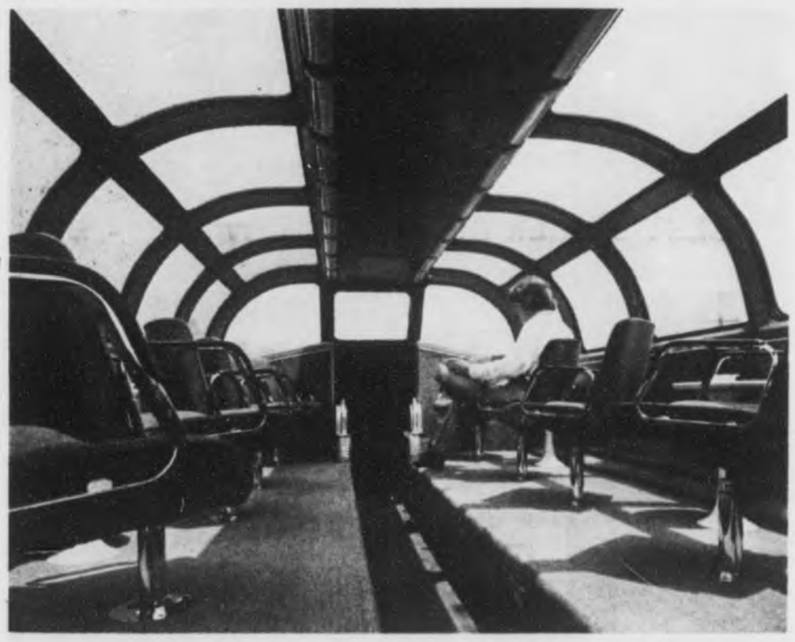
Another hunting season has ended for deer hunters of Shelby County, but memories of successful hunts linger on in freezers about the county. Two teenage brothers from Chelsea each bagged a deer during the last week of the season and one day last week women of the family spent a day bagging the meat. Randy Nivens, age 19, killed a big six-point buck on Saturday, January 19, but younger brother, Larry, age 16, topped this with an eight-pointer on the following Monday.

On Tuesday, their mother, Dean Nivens, grandmother, Lucille Kelly, and two great-aunts, Georgia Smith and Lulla Mae Benton, cut, wrapped and labeled an estimated 125 pounds of meat from the two deer. Using large meat saws, carving knives and an axe, they cut steaks, chops, roasts, stew meat and ribs for basbecuing on a large chopping board on the Nivens' kitchen table. With an electric food and meat grinder, they made "deerburger."

Mrs. Nivens wraps each steak individually for the freezer. "Then when one of the boys wants one, they come and get it and put it on the grill," she said.

The boys and some neighbors took advantage of the spring -like weather the first of last week and grilled some of the tasty meat over hickory wood in the barbeque pit. All of the meat was not eaten that night, and the next day Mrs. Nivens put barbeque sauce over the leftovers and heated them in the oven. "Actually, they eat deer-meat fried better than any other way," she said. She rolls thin slices with flour and fries it in hot grease. Another of the family's favorite menus for the meat, is to boil a roast slowly in water for two to three hours, then use the water and a little milk to make gravy. Then slice the roast in thin servings and let it simmer for 20 or 30 minutes in the gravy. Very good with hot biscuits!

When grinding the deer-meat, small amounts of fat pork were added. "This helps hold the meat together and keeps it from sticking when you grill deerburgers from it," Mrs. Nivens explained.



The ground venison can be used in any menu where you would normally use ground beef. The Nivens cook deer in the very same way they would cook the same cuts of beef or pork.

NIVENS WITH TROPHY - - Randy Nivens helps out the family freezer with hunting skill.

ALL ABOARD - - It's a different all aboard, when it's for an automobile, but the auto-train service carries autos and passengers. The first service runs from the Washington, D.C. area to central Florida. The new service is planned to go through Shelby County on its way from Sanford, Florida to Louisville, Ky.

VIEW FROM THE TOP - - Passengers enjoy wide vistas from a dome passenger car. They will see Shelby County from the tracks of the Seaboard Coastline Railroad.

MORE FUN THAN DRIVING - - Passengers enjoy an overnight train ride aboard the Auto train as it takes them and their automobiles to their destination.

Auto-train coming through

By Marcia M. Sears

A new train service will be coming through Shelby County this spring, when the Auto-train corporation starts its new schedule from Sanford, Florida to Louisville, Ky.

Eugene Garfield, president of Auto-train, told the Reporter in a telephone interview from his Washington, D.C. office that Auto-train will lease tracks in Shelby County from the Seaboard Coastline railroad for its new passenger-automobile ferry service.

It will be the second route established by the two-year old corporation. The success of their first route, which runs from the Washington, D.C. area to Sanford, Florida encouraged the company to apply for permission to set up this new route, which is designed to aid travelers from Florida to the Chicago area.

In a day when many railroads are operating in the red, the Auto-train corporation has found a way to provide profitable train service.

The new service will unfortunately, not provide for any stops in Shelby County. In fact, the service will not allow anyone to get on or off throughout the length of its trip.

The idea of the service is to allow passengers to drive their automobile onto the train. Then the passengers ride in comfort inside well appointed passenger cars equipped with all the modern comforts.

When they reach the end of the line, the passengers get into their own automobiles and drive to their destination.

Garfield told the Reporter that one reason for the popularity of the service is that many people like to spend part of the year in Florida. They need their automobiles when they are in Florida, but they prefer not to drive them the long distance from the Washington - New York area. It is not primarily a tourist operation. Most of the Auto-train users own homes in Florida, Garfield said.

In the two years of operation, Garfield has found a great demand for the service, with reservations booked months in advance.

He hopes that there will be similar demand for the new route, serving the Chicago - Detroit and midwest area.

He says that autos are put in enclosed auto carriers when they board the train. Passengers enjoy buffet food service, television, live entertainment and a good night's rest. The next morning they are in Florida or Washington, depending on the direction of their trip.

When the new route starts, the trains will speed through Shelby County and stop for crew changes and service in Birmingham. However, no passengers or automobiles will get on or off there.

Garfield explained that Auto-train is an independent contractor with the railroads. Auto-train leases tracks from railroads, but is not part of any railroad.

The auto - on -train service has operated sucessfully in Europe for years, and in 1965 the U.S. Congress authorized a $3 million study to determine the feasibility of such service in the United States. The report concluded that it could be profitable, and Congress determined that it should be pursued by private industry.

The report came to the attention of Garfield, who was then an assistant to the Secretary of Transportation. He left government service in 1969 to form the Auto-Train corporation with a group of investors.

Auto-Train is the first railroad common carrier to be formed in the U.S. in 50 years. When a public offering of its stock was made on July 15, 1971, the offering raised $7 million and was completely sold out the first day.

POPULAR SERVICE - - Passengers board the auto train after loading their autos on special auto carrier cars. Similar trains will be speeding through Shelby County soon.

PRIZE WINNING NEWSPAPER 1973

Historical Society signs 150 members

The newly-formed Shelby County Historical Society is off to a dynamic start. Within two weeks of the first meeting, the club has already signed more than 150 charter members from all parts of the county.

Society president Kenneth Penhale told the Reporter that most areas of the county are well represented in numbers, especially Columbiana, Montevallo, and Westover. He added that the response has not been as large from the northeast part of the county, but that hopefully members will later represent that area.

The first public meeting of the Historical Society is being planned for the third week of February. Special guest at the meeting will be Warner Floyd, president of the Alabama State Historical Commission.

The initial project of the society is a survey of historic buildings and places in Shelby County. The society hopes to catalogue all of the old houses, churches, cemeteries, and sites of historic events in the county. The club needs any information on older buildings and places, and their exact locations.

Once the information is collected, the Birmingham Regional Planning Board will undertake the actual survey of

Wilsonville board floats bond issue

The Industrial Development Board of Wilsonville, announced today that it will offer for sale 19.6 million dollars of 30-year pollution control revenue bonds to finance pollution control facilities of Alabama Power Company. The offering will be made on or about February 20.

The bond issue will provide funds for electro static precipitators and cooling towers at an 880,000 - kilowatt steam electric generating unit which Alabama Power Company is constructing at the Ernest C. Gaston Steam Plant near Wilsonville. The unit, which will be coal-fired, is scheduled for commercial operation in June, 1974. Its electro static precipitators will remove electrically the solid matter, of fly ash, from stacked emissions and the cooling towers will prevent adverse thermal effects on the nearby Coosa River as a result of the unit's operation.

Interest paid on the revenue bonds will be exempt from Federal and Alabama income taxes. The bonds will be limited obligations of the Wilsonville Industrial Development Board and will be secured by payments due under an agreement with Alabama Power. These payments will be secured by first mortgage bonds of the company.

Alabama Power, an operating affiliate of The Southern Company system, serves most of the State of Alabama.

The pollution control bonds will be offered through an underwriting group managed by Victor Scott to run for District 2 place

Victor Scott, resident of District Two for 50 years and son of one of Shelby County's oldest families, announced this week that he will be a candidate for the position of County Commissioner representing District Two.

Scott is widely known throughout the district and the county with his 25 year successful career in the automobile, insurance, and real estate business.

Scott said, "Shelby County has been good to me and I would like to offer my services toward helping the county in the future."

Scott has long taken an active interest in civic affairs in Montevallo. He served as a member of the town council, and has been a leader in the Chamber of Commerce and business and industrial development for many years. He has developed subdivisions and apartment complexes in Montevallo, and is in the process of opening another subdivision.

He attended Camp Branch elementary school and is a graduate of Baylor High School. He holds a Bachelor of Science degree in mechanical engineering from Auburn University, and was affiliated with Kappa Alpha Fraternity and Pi Tau Sigma Honorary Engineering Fraternity there. He served in the Air force during World War II.

Scott favors a workable county-wide garbage pickup and disposal program. He strongly believes that the growth of the county should not get ahead of the services that the county provides. He believes that schools, water supplies, sewerage systems, law enforcement, and roads should keep up with the amount of growth, but said, "The way the county is growing, if we get behind in services, it will be very difficult and much more costly to catch up."

If elected to the County Commission he said he would favor proposals that provide for orderly growth of business,

In announcing his candidacy, Flowers said, "At a time when Americans everywhere are yearning for confidence in their government, I repeat my pledge to the citizens of the Seventh District to continue my close contact with them, to represent them faithfully, and to keep them informed on the major issues. It will be my continuing purpose to speak out for the people of our District and our State when the situation calls for it and respond to their needs as best I can."

College Night drama opens tonight at UM

Action gets under way in earnest this week in annual College Night competition at the University of Montevallo, with the curtain rising on Purple and Gold stage productions Thursday night in Palmer Auditorium.

Activities will continue through Saturday, Feb. 9, and will provide the setting for Saturday's annual Homecoming festivities.

Productions were unveiled in a joint dress rehearsal Wednesday evening, and although built from the ground up with neither team knowing of the other's plans, both productions have remarkably similar lines of thought this year.

Each appears to have as its prime objective the reflection of humanity to itself.

The Golds are going for a repeat of their 1973 win with a play entitled "Living Carries Life," in which animals are humanized to portray a theme that life is available to all who are willing to seek it.

Gold director James "Bo" Crowe, Birmingham, said his players seek to "portray life that is both physical and spiritual... and it is our individual choice as to what degree of integration and cooperation the two basic traits will establish and sustain."

"We want our audience to realize they have a choice," he said, "and they will choose! We are not, however, trying to choose for them ... in fact, we can't decide for anyone but ourselves. Final decisions always rest with the individual."

Lead roles in the '74 Gold production are played by Ron Jones, Decatur; Suzy Wade, Sylacauga; Robert Knox and

Payne to qualify for commission post

L.C. (Curt) Payne, Judge of Inferior Court of Shelby County, will be a candidate for the Shelby County Commission. He announces his intention to qualify for the Democratic Party primary in Columbiana on February 7th.

He will seek the commission post in District 2, now held by Lynder Henry of Alabaster.

District 2 covers the South Western section of the county, which includes Alabaster, Montevallo, Calera, Pea Ridge, Maylene, Dogwood and Wilton.

Payne is a life time resident of Shelby County. He worked for Buck Creek Cotton Mill for fifteen years, and has been in business in Alabaster for the last twenty-five years. He served on the Alabaster City Council for two terms. He served the people of Alabaster as their Mayor for two terms.

Payne is presently serving as the Judge of the Inferior Court, a position he has held for the past three years. He is also presently serving as chairman of the Democratic Executive Committee.

He is widely known through District 2 because of the many services he has rendered to his many friends. He states that the reason for his qualifying for the commission post is that the recent passing of Amendment 2 could eliminate his present position at the next session of the Legislature.

Payne said that he feels that he can serve the people in District 2 and the entire county as a member of the Shelby County Commission well.

Helena gets fire truck from Plantation Pipeline

Officials from the Plantation Pipe Line Company presented a fire truck to the town of Helena Monday afternoon. J.W. Kaley, manager of the Helena office of Plantation Pipe Line, presented the fire truck papers to mayor Charles Penhale. The truck was one used by the fire station at the Helena pipeline complex.

Plantation has purchased a new foam-type fire fighting truck designed for their industrial fire protection needs. The older water pumping truck given to Helena is ideally suited for a municipal fire department.

The Helena town council met Monday night and authorized the mayor to sign a contract with one of two low bidding companies to construct a new town fire station. The tentative location for the new station will be at the intersection of highways 261, 17 and 52.

The new two-bay station will house two trucks and the other truck will be kept at the old fire station at the city hall.

In other action Monday night the Helena town council hired two new auxiliary policemen.

Stubbs seeks senate seat

TOM STUBBS

Tom Stubbs of Helena has announced that he will seek election to the Senate in the newly created District 17.

He has been Shelby County's representative in the House for the past two terms.

Under the re-apportionment plan, District 17 will include parts of Shelby County, Jefferson County and Tuscaloosa County. In Shelby County, the areas included are Pelham, Helena, north Alabaster, Beat 12 and nearby areas.

Stubbs says that if elected he will re-introduce legislation to protect the Cahaba River, would favor a state program to aid cities and counties to build adequate sewerage treatment plants and would work to speed the completion of highway systems in District 17.

The candidate operates a foundry near Helena which employs about 40 people. He is a graduate of Phillips High School and attended Auburn.

During World War II he served the 2nd Infantry Division as a captain.

He and his wife, LaJuana, have two daughters and two sons.

Gulf States taps Loper for land use office

Gulf States Paper Company's land holdings in Shelby County will be subject to new land-use study following the creation of a new company office.

Company president Jack Warner announced last week the addition of a new top-level company position of executive vice president, corporate land officer. E.E. (Jack) Loper, currently head of the forestry division, has been named to the new post.

"We cannot continue to use company lands only as we have in the past," said Warner in announcing the change. "We are in the land business; and as a major landowner we must balance the use of land against the nation's needs for minerals, energy, recreation, environment, timber, real estate and many other pressures. This position on my staff will help assure all these needs receive appropriate consideration in our planning for the future."

The new position makes possible a more effective use of minerals as well as the acquisition, sale and leasing of land, he said.

Jim Montgomery, public relations director of Gulf States, told the Reporter last Friday that the company's Shelby County land, along with the rest of its holdings, will be reviewed to determine its best possible use however. He said the present land use may be deemed as the best utilization of resources.

Since the land utilization study is yet in the early stages, no long-range development programs for the Shelby County area have been cited. Montgomery pointed to Gulf States' development of real estate property on Lay Lake and the leasing of Kewahatchie Springs to the City of Columbiana for its water supply.

Gulf States Paper land holdings are in 19 counties in west and central Alabama, ranging from the Warrior coal basin to the Tombigbee River. A wide variety of terrain, vegetation and size of tract is included in the more than 400,000 acres the firm owns or has under lease.

Calera employment service promises computer hookup for job hunters

by Willard Harrison

More Shelby County people are working than ever before. As late as two weeks ago, the Reporter quoted an unemployment rate of 3.6, the lowest the county had ever seen. Since that time the unemployment rate has shrunk to a level of 2.8 people out of a hundred who cannot find work.

Who is responsible for this drop in the number of unemployed? "The credit is due to all of the people who have served in a responsible position in the county for the past fifteen years," said Billie J. (Bill) Varden, manager of the Calera office of the state Employment Service. "No single office or individual is wholly responsible for this; everyone involved in business and industry should be proud of the achievement."

Varden added that the latest figure of 2.8 percent is based on outdated survey methods. Under this system, unemployment figures are arrived at by figuring the number of people who are employed at businesses in the county. A new survey method is being formulated by the federal government. This system bases its figures on the number of individuals who are employed anywhere, but living in the county.

The rise in the number of people employed in the county has been caused by a number of factors. Varden lists a number of things involved in Shelby County's tremendous business boom, including the location between the Birmingham and Montgomery metropolitan areas. He added that a rise in the level of the labor force has also been an asset, as well as efficient county government and law enforcement.

One of the main causes of the drop in unemployment is the Calera employment office itself. After all, it is their job to place workers in any openings in business. Varden told the Reporter that the county office of the Employment Service currently administers twenty-six programs which make it "an all-around manpower service." Some of these special programs include finding employment for special special groups, dealing with immigrants, and managing training programs for business and industry.

The newest wrinkle in public employment services is a nationwide computer network linking all state employment offices. This system is already in operation at a multi- county level, with a workable national hookup due within six months to a year. This countrywide network will, in effect, create a labor pool with millions of people, thus revolutionizing the economic picture for the nation, Varden said.

If an engineer in Alabama, for instance, wants a job in Hawaii, the computer searches its data banks for an opening of that type and clears the way for hiring procedures. Or if an Alaska fishing fleet needed ship captains, the computer might find a surplus of fishing boat captains in New England. They would be contacted to find out if they wanted a new job in that area.

FULL EMPLOYMENT AT LAST - - With full employment for Shelby County citizens at hand, Bill Varden, manager of the Calera office of the Alabama Employment Service for the past two decades, talks about the work of his office in helping bring about the happy situation in the accompanying article.

The results of this upcoming computer system will be tremendous, Varden says. Every state office will feed information into computers at the state capitals, which will be connected to one at Washington, D.C. At the end of every day, the nation's leaders will know exactly how many people were hired every day, and in what type of job in every geographic area.

The present computer system now covers an eight-county area, according to Varden. They can hook up with other localities or the state capital, but with some difficulty. At present the network resembles a telephone coverage area wherein a person can call another area long-distance. The new set-up will be similar to a national coverage area in which all "calls" are handled "locally."

Varden stated that although the computer will make their job easier in the long run, it requires more technical precision. Already the five employees at the Calera office have well over a dozen manuals to consult in their work, and the new system will require more guidelines and attention to detail. If a worker makes a mistake at an employment office the computer records it in a complete log of the activity in the office.

The county employment office already places a hundred people per month in job openings. In the future, Varden expects that figure to increase due to the national labor pool.

The county has had a branch of the state employment service for about forty years, said Varden. The Calera office was recently made the headquarters of the West Alabama portion of the state. Under the office are branches in Selma, Jasper, Tuscaloosa, and three other locations. All state employment offices are under the Alabama Department of Industrial Relations, and under the Department of Labor on the national level. The regional office is in Atlanta.

Varden offered a number of reasons why a person should come to the employment office first when they are looking for a job. First of all, unlike many professional job services, the state offices are free to both the applicant and the business which needs workers. Also the offices follow federal guidelines in order to receive funds from Washington. Varden emphasized that the 26 different programs enables state employment offices to better find a niche for the unemployed. When the computer services becomes fully operational, all member offices will offer nearly 100 percent efficiency in finding the right job for the right person.

Any company with a job opening can contact Calera's computer bank by telephoning 322-8771. Individuals who are looking for work should come by the employment office at 103 Montgomery Highway on the main street of Calera.

College night is unique to Montevallo

by Fred Cooper

At the University of Wisconsin, in Madison, students are probably slogging through the snow, getting ready for the annual Winter Carnival.

UCLA scholars are basking in the sun or hiding from the rain and making their plans to follow the school's top-ranked basketball team to the NCAA finals.

Little Slippery Rock is simply lying around, waiting for another foolball season when every game is noted in the Sunday sports sections all over the country because, for some unfathomable reason, Slippery Rock has become an institution.

And all of these places of learning have one thing in common.

None of them have College Night.

Only one school in all of this great country, count 'em, one, has College Night.

Guess which one.

If you guessed the University of Montevallo, you win the turkey or the cigar or the brass ring or, if you're lucky, the play, 'cause that's what it's all about over yonder at that lovely little campus that somebody set up in 1896.

College Night is billed as the University of Montevallo's unique tradition. This has got to be one of the most accurate bits of press agentry around. Calera High School comes closest to matching it with their Blue and Gold night but College Night is all UM's.

It has as its reason for continued existence, Homecoming activities. All us old grads are supposed to come streaming back to cheer for either the Purples or the Golds as we did in our innocent youth.

And surprisingly, most of the old grads do.

See, College Night is really two plays, written, directed, produced, and acted in by UM students. One side is the Gold bunch, the other Purple. The Golds rally around a lion and the Purples follow loyally a cow.

Try to explain this to an outsider.

Anyway, for a month before the big week, the uniform of the day around the campus is blearly eyes, sore muscles, and hoarse throats from yelling GV or PV and singing side songs.

The kids involved, and there are a bunch of them, carry on the equivalent of two fulltime jobs for four weeks building toward the climax that will come this Saturday night when one side or the other of stately old Palmer Hall will erupt with the announcement of the College Night winner for the year.

College Night lends itself to cynicism and it is easy to sit back and poke fun at those involved. The idea of "winning" a play has always been a curious one and grown people singing about "Purple Pride" or "Hey, Ho . . . Loyal Gold" with ten million more serious things to think about can seem foolish.

I never thought I would find myself in the position of supporting UM's "unique tradition" and I'm sure that folks like Judy Gibbs and Steve Huffstutler and Chuck King are going to look askance because, even though I wrote two of the plays produced and appeared in a third, I've never been an avid supporter of the program.

In fact, I was one of the original "Greens", a really harmless group that simply wanted to improve the theatrical aspect of the spectacle.

As I accumulate years, however, to go along with my increasing weight, as my arteries harden and my muscles soften in tandem, as I look around I find different things important.

In school, I rejected all fraternities because I didn't like the idea of forced brotherhood. I now count as one of my proudest achievements being an honor initiate of UM's ATO fraternity. It's not a forced brotherhood and neither is the closeness that exists between these Purples and Golds, no matter what year they are in or what year they graduated. They are all together.

On a cold Saturday night in February, every one of them that has ever participated can come home to their school far better than any football game and pre-game party could ever manage. It's a Homecoming that gives them back their youth.

You can't find anything wrong with that.

NEW ROAD IN BEAT 5 - - Construction moves along on a new road near Turner, west of Helena in Beat 5. The developer of the land is building the road to county specifications. When completed, it will be turned over to the county.

Pelham mayor will head planning commission

Paul Yeager, Sr., Mayor of Pelham, was installed as chairman of the Birmingham Regional Planning Commission on Thursday, January 31 at the commission's annual meeting. A number of reports were given at the meeting held in Homewood, concerning the commission's six-county area including Shelby, Jefferson, Walker, Blount, St. Clair and Chilton counties.

Yeager had previously served as vice- chairman of the planning commission during 1973. He was automatically installed as chairman of the commission at the Thursday night meeting held in Homewood.

Yeager's son, Paul Yeager, Jr., is involved with similar work with the Shelby County Planning Commission. The younger Yeager is director of the county planning commission and has been with the group for about five years.

Both Yeagers have been actively involved with the present and future planning of the area, playing a big part in the tremendous growth of Shelby County. And with that growth the Birmingham Regional Planning Commission has expanded during the past year with large increases in staff and operations.

Executive director of the BRPC, William Bondrenko, reported at the meeting that the staff of the commission has increased from 24 to 40 because of sponsorship of two new programs for the aging and child developement. A larger staff was needed to handle the increase of operations required of the commission.

The 1973 financial report showed receipts of $701,000 and expenditures of about 660,000, with an excess of $41,000 not spent in 1973.

The commission received $100,000 to revise a 1990 study for major highway network plans which had been discussed in 1971. The original plan called for only 5 percent of all urban transportation to be public mass transit, but Bondarenko says that he hopes the new study will raise that figure to about 15 percent.

The Birmingham Regional Planning Commission was created by the state legislature's Act 1126, which divided Alabama into twelve planning developement districts. The BRPC is District Three, composed of the governments of the six member counties and most of the municipalities in the region. Though created by the state, the BRPC is primarily funded by the more than sixty member governments.

Road signs show beat designations

by Conrad Fowler
Chairman, County Commission

The County Commission has directed that signs be erected designating the beat lines on the highways in Shelby County. The markers will serve to inform citizens of the designation of the election beat in which they live. This is of particular importance to the Board of Registrars. When registering a new voter, the Board must indicate the beat in which the person is to be placed on the qualified voter list. Many new residents in the county simply do not know the designation of the beat in which they live. Beat marker signs, such as the one pictured above, will be of assistance to persons registering to vote and to the Board of Registrars.

Persons who wish to change their voting place from one beat to another so that their names will be on the voter list of the beat in which they live should call Mrs. Sue Jones at 669-2951 and request a form be mailed to them that will give the custodian of the voter records proper information for this purpose.

The federal court order that required county commissions to re-arrange beat lines to conform to census tract lines where the tract line was a part of the boundry of a legislative district has caused some changing of voters from one beat to another. The County Commission has employed persons to go door to door in each of six areas affected and advise residents of their new voting place. Recently, in the zoning election in beat 12 it came to light that only a small percentage of the voters affected by the change had been notified. The commission hopes that a better job has been done in other areas.

Maps of the new beat lines will be distributed throughout the six affected areas in the near future. The voter list for all of the county will be published in late March.

Subdivision access roads must be okayed by county

by George Starcher
Highway Department
Shelby County

Sometimes land developers find the land they wish to develop for profit are not served by existing county highways. This is more frequently true as Shelby County's building boom gathers momentum.

The Shelby County Commission scrupulously prohibits use of county funds for construction or paving of roads for private benefit. This county policy sometimes involves the developers in building access roads (usually short ones leading from existing county highways) in addition to streets within their subdivision.

In the case of planned subdivisions outside municipal limits, where streets will ultimately become county responsibility for maintenance there must be prior approval by the County Planning Commission. Also a thorough check of design followed by construction inspections by the County Engineer's staff is required. Access roads must likewise receive similar approval.

James L. Ray, Jr., Director of the Department of Public Works reports he occasionally receives calls from citizens who do not understand this procedure. "Far from being a case of costing the taxpayers money," he says, "it is saving them money not only in building roads but in maintenance costs for many years in the future."

"Constant inspection by this department insures reasonable quality of roadbeds, drainage and paving to protect both the subdivision dweller's investment and the county government."

In the accompanying photo, equipment of the R.C. Shirley Construction Co. is building an access road in Beat Five near Turner. More than a quarter mile long, on a 60 foot right of way, the completed road will be dedicated to Shelby County. The pickup truck shown is driven by an employer of a commercial testing company who will have to certify that compaction (density) of roadbed fill embackments are satisfactory at all stages of construction. These tests, paid for by the developer, are required before the road can be considered for acceptance.

Some misunderstanding of county involvement in the subdivisions in rural Shelby County is occasioned by the fact that some subdivisions were begun prior to the adoption of subdivision regulations, March 8, 1971.

BEAT DESIGNATION- -Over 250 signs designating beat line locations have been erected in Shelby County by the County Highway Department. Purpose of the signs is to enable citizens to be sure that they are listed on the voter rolls in the beat of their residence.

Why the raids on rec center?

Letter to the Editor:

Youths from around the Montevallo- Alabaster- Calera area were excited during the past week about a small recreation building that would open at Moores Crossroads on Highway 119 between Alabaster and Montevallo.

Last Thursday afternoon it seemed at last that young people had a place that they could go to enjoy such games as Air hockey, electronic tennis, foose ball, and pool as well as music.

After being open only four days this recreation area has been raided twice, hoping to succeed in closing it down.

In the past 6 years, there have been only two places that young people could go and be with friends and enjoy a few games. These places were closed shortly after they were open.

Why are we young people denied this opportunity? It seem's unfair that this should happen, after all we're only human.

I only hope that as years go by that there could be more sources of entertainment such as these where other youngsters can enjoy these activities, as well as parents having the assurance of knowing that there will be a lot less traffic tickets, less automobile accidents, and maybe even a few lives saved because the youths had this place to go and be off the highway.

We ask that you the people of this area, please study our program out, we invite parent's to drop in and view it, and please help us to keep our only source of entertainment open.

Thank You!
Bonnie Anderson

BRIGHT RED TOMATOES - - When frost arrived, the Cecil Lanes of Valleydale Road brought six of their Atkinson variety tomato plants into their greenhouse to see what would happen. The plants, developed at Auburn, kept on producing and the tomatoes have ripened to a full red. In photo at top Merle Lane gets ready to pick a ripe tomato for salad. In photo at bottom, Cecil Lane displays some of the many plants he has grown from rootings. He had to construct a greenhouse to hold all of his gardenias, camellias and azaleas. Plants were his hobby for many years, but the hobby is getting away from him and he is starting to sell some of his plants. During the work week he keeps busy as an electrician at the Alabama Power complex at Wilsonville.

No place to park--

Car pool faces problem

There is so much verbage these days about saving gasoline by joining car pools to drive to work. This message comes through all forms of the media by an assortment of government agencies and large and small companies - -to mention a few. However, some people wonder if all this public lip service is little more than that when they find that commuting to work in a group poses as many problems as driving separately.

As an example, last week the Reporter heard about a group of four men who commute daily to Leeds. Three of the men live along Highway 31 from Clanton to Calera. Every day they drive in a car pool to Pelham, where they meet another co-worker who lives west of Pelham and comes in from his home six or seven miles west of Pelham. They have been leaving one automobile in Pelham while they all drive together to Leeds.

This arrangement has now met with difficulties. The car pool foursome reports that there is no place where they can leave a car in Pelham without fear of having the automobile towed away. They say that Pelham has many vacant parking lots -- by churches for example -- but they have found no one willing to allow them to park there.

The Shelby County Reporter will be glad to pass along suggestions if landowners in the Pelham area will offer parking spaces for commuters. The same applies to any other area in the county where commuters meet in order to form car pools. The Reporter's telephone number is 669-2731.

College Night

Henry Smith, both of Moultrie, Ga.; and featuring Ron Wilder, Clanton.

Appearing in the cast from Shelby County are Cindy Duke, Jamie Putnam, Paul Roberts, Carol Medders, Montevallo; Barbara Gamble, Alabaster.

The Purples make a bid to re-enter the winner's circle with a production entitled "Freak Show." Directed by Larry Snipes, Tuscaloosa, the play utilizes a multitude of visual techniques springing from a circus backdrop -- actors entering, exiting and roaming freely through the audience -- to make its point that all people are the same, and the only reason they appear different from one another is that we simply think they are different.

Snipes uses a large cast in a free- wheeling, fast moving format to entertain his audience and bring out the central theme of mankind's unity.

Appearing in lead roles of the Purple production are Debby Isley, Birmingham; Stan Nelson, Boaz; Doug Trotter, Eufaula; and Kathye Kerwan, Alexandria, Va.

Featured players from Shelby County are Warren Betts, Calera; Jeanne Wright, Montevallo.

Other cast members from Shelby County are: Delores Adkins, Terri Chambers, Carol Kirkland, Judy Lien, Kirk Lightfoot, Sheri Mills, Montevallo; Patricia Betts, Calera; Ted Fenn, Calcis; Rhonda Short, Helena.

The Golds are attempting to knot the score in the overall College Night win column this year -- their Purple opponents hold a one-win edge 27-26 in the total count since the two-team system was introduced in 1921.

The tradition dates from 1919, when competition was staged among classes.

Capacity crowds are expected at all three nightly performances -- the finale on Saturday is traditionally a standing- room-only affair.

Following the final curtain Saturday, a panel of visiting judges -- experts in the field of drama and stage production -- will name their choice, points from all other areas of competition will be totaled, and the 1974 winner will be declared.

General Store has antiques

Part II

by Willard Harrison

Shelby County's interest in antiques seems to be constantly growing. To that ever- expanding list add General Store Antiques in Montevallo, perhaps the largest in the area

General Store has been at the former Jeter Store location in Montevallo since September, when owner Jack Pruitt enrolled at the University of Montevallo.

Pruitt stated that in antique display area, his store is the largest in Shelby County. Over 6,000 sq. ft. of floor space is devoted to antiques, with balcony areas housing the Europa Art Gallery and This 'n That Gifts.

This three-in-one store a general line of antiques along with its gift shop and art gallery. In keeping with its name, General Store Antiques has a pot-bellied stove and an antiquated embossed ceiling. Stairs lead to the art gallery on the right part of the balcony and a gift shop on the left. Pruitt added that he intends to add hoop cheese, pickle, and cracker barrels to maintain the general store appearance.

Pruitt and his wife have been in the antique business for over 15 years, at various locations in Germany, Florida, and Georgia. Pruitt said that their last shop, in Atlanta, was half the size of the Montevallo store building. When they moved to Montevallo, the Pruitts had to expand their stock.

Their unusual items give an added variety to the antique hunter in Shelby County.

Pruitt said that in the past six months they have received three large shipments of antiques. Most of their stock is imported from Europe, with the majority from Austria and France. The art for the gallery is also primarily from the continent, hence the name Europa.

The specialty at the General Store is antique clocks. Pruitt noted, "The shop also has quite a lot of furniture, porcelain, dolls, and glassware." The Pruitts and a co-worker, Mrs. Baggett, are busy keeping the store stocked while trying to restore the building to its former appearance.

"We are pleased with our new location in Montevallo, and especially with the building," stated Jack Pruitt. He and his wife are happy with their home in Montevallo, and hope to expand their business.

Reese writes alma mater

Carlton Reese, the director of the Thompson Middle School chorus, has written a new alma mater for that school. The lyrics to that song follow.

Alma Mater

Hail to Thompson Middle School
How we love your golden rule
Let your light shine bright and high
Build your radium o'er the sky
Alma Mater sweet and true
Thompson Middle School, we love you.

We pledge you our loyalty
For you are our royalty
We strive with all our might
To create a broad insight
Alma mater sweet and true
Thompson Middle School, we love you.

As we leave our halls of learning
Memories linger in our mind
We will always cherish three Kind and true we'll always be
Alma mater sweet and true
Thompson Middle School, we love you.

The TMS chorus has been invited to sing at the Shelby County teacher's association February 7.

Their last performance was the Christmas presentation at Thompson Middle School where they received a warm reception by many in spite of a snowfall.

The chorus anticipates a spring concert in the near future at which time the newly formed ensemble will be presented.

Carlton Reese is the director and accompanist of the group.

Lane named chief of agriculture board

McMillan Lane, a Montgomery County cattleman, was named Wednesday as interim commissioner of agriculture and industries.

He will succeed the late M.D. (Pete) Gilmer who succeeded Richard Beard upon Beard's death in 1972.

The office comes open next year and Lane is expected to qualify as a candidate for a full term.

He was selected for the top job in agriculture by Gov. George C. Wallace, who also named Gilmer to the job when Beard died.

Gilmer died two weeks ago. Lane had been serving as his assistant commissioner ever since his appointment in February 1973.

Lane, a resident of Montgomery for 32 years, received a B.S. degree in agriculture from Clemson University and taught vocational agriculture for several years.

He served in both World War II and the Korean War and as a lieutenant colonel was deputy provost marshal of the Far East Air Force. He received the Bronze Star for action in Korea.

In 1954 he bought the Brunson Milling Co. and operated it for 16 years. He has been actively engaged in beef cattle production for the past 20 years and now owns and operates a cattle ranch in Montgomery County.

He served two terms as president of the Alabama Feed Association and has been a director of the Alabama Poultry Association.

He is a member of the Alabama Farm Bureau Federation, the South- eastern Livestock Exposition, vice-president of the Montgomery County Cattlemen's Association, and a member of the Montgomery Rotary Club.

the sites. The board has agreed to visit and evaluate the historical significance of each place the historical society learns about.

This survey will enable the group to establish priorities when planning to restore a building or place an historic marker. The older buildings will be eligible for listing in national registers of historic sites, and can thus qualify for federal and state funds for restoration.

Anyone having information about older buildings or historic places in the county should write to Penhale giving the location and date it was built, and something about its past. Write to the Shelby County Historical Society, P.O. Box 28, Helena, AL 35080.

AN ALABAMA 'FIRST' -- The First National Bank of Childersburg opens a branchin Vincent, the first time a bank in Alabama has crossed county lines to open a branch. Pictured cutting the ribbon are, Robert Cleckler, Jr., Vincent; Mayor J.A. Lowe, Judge James Sharbutt, and Robert Cleckler, Sr.

Democratic Executive Committee meets tonight

The Democratic Executive Committee will meet in the courthouse tonight at 7:30 p.m., according to an announcement by the Committee chairman, L.C. "Curt" Payne.

Purpose of the meeting will be to set up rules for candidates to qualify for county offices and to conduct other business of the party.

At the conclusion of the business meeting, any candidates who wish to qualify as candidates for the May primary may do so.

Vincent bank

"Several years ago, Judge Jimmy Sharbutt started telling us it was possible to cross county lines with a branch bank. We lightly passed it off as an impossible dream, but Jimmy persisted. He must have told me 100 times over the years that it could be done. And finally with his counsel, subtle prodding and leadership, we are here."

Judge Sharbutt was asked to address the ceremony participants. He stated the establishment of the branch bank was a tribute to the founding fathers of Vincent as well as its present citizens. He predicted it would lend economic support to the community for "generations yet to come."

At the conclusion of the ceremonies, Vincent Mayor J.A. Lowe cut the ribbon officially opening the bank office

The two teller positions inside the bank will be manned by Rebecca Galloway, assistant cashier of the Childersburg bank, and Yvonne Clinkscales.

The first deposit in the branch was made by Mrs. Rosemary Bouchet of Vincent and Rev. Ellison opened the first account at the facility.

CASE NO. E-176-74
TO: The following described land: The E½ of SW¼ of Section 6, Township 20, Range 2 West, Shelby County, Alabama; Birmingham Coal, Coke and Iron Company, a corporation, or a dissolved corporation, and the unknown stockholders of Birmingham Coal, Coke and Iron Company; and the following named persons, or, if deceased, their heirs or devisees; Addie B. The automobile's owner, Von Arthur, Sr., plans to race the car at a split 100 lap event at the Daytona Speedway on February 9 and 10. Birmingham driver Richard Orton will pilot the vehicle around the 3.84-mile oval at Daytona. Orton won the Midfield Speedway championships in 1969 and 1972.

Regional games set in state playoffs

The Alabama High School Athletic Association tournaments leading up to the state championship will start this month. Area tournaments will start the week of February 25. The winners will progress to the area tournaments scheduled to be played Saturday, March 2. Area winners will then proceed to the state basketball tournament to be played at the University of Alabama March 6, 7, 8, and 9.

Thompson High School will play in the 3-A Region IV Area 8 tournament held at the Chilton County High School gym. Montevallo, Shelby County and Vincent High Schools will play in the 2-A Region IV Area 7 tournament held at West Blocton. Calera High School will play in the 1-A region IV Area 8 tournament in Marbary while Chelsea High will be in the Region VIII Area 13 tournament in Hayden.

Herman L. Scott, the executive secretary of the Alabama High School Athletic Association, told the Reporter on Monday that state basketball play has been very enthusiastic this year. He reports that many close games were played in county and conference tournaments around the state. These developments add to a good statewide basketball program which is needed for successful area and regional tournaments. Scott also added that there have been less sportsmanship problems among high schools than ever this year.

Crappie top fishing stories

Saturday and Sunday, January 26 and 27 were a boon to fishermen on Lay Lake as anglers turned out in droves. One fish camp operator gave a sigh of relief when she recalled the weekend business. "There were so many people down here, I fired hamburgers for them all day long," she said. At the end of the day I went home and fixed supper. Then I came back and had more customers."

Ernest Armstrong at Armstrong's Camp on Waxahatchee Creek reported that G.J. Glenn caught ten pounds of bass weighing 58 pounds all together. The largest weighed seven pounds nine ounces.

Armstrong also tells of seeing several strings of over 40 crappie. Fishermen were getting best results catching crappie using jiggs and minnows, Armstrong continued.

Bass and crappie were again the story at Lacoosa marina. Many of both types of fish were brought in there over the weekend. The best results for bass fishing were gotten by fishermen using spinner baits.

As last week, crappie were again the big story at Spring Creek, but bass were being taken as well. Bud Spears of route one Shelby brought in seven bass weighing over 15 pounds. The largest one is reported to have tipped the scales at four and one half pounds.

J.T. Boykin at Bozo's camp reported again that crappie were being taken by almost everyone who went out on the lake. Boykin said that the best crappie fishing was in the brush and the best baits were spinners and minnows.

A.D. Pharmacies Support The American Heart Association

In days gone by, neighbors pooled their resources to help a troubled friend get back on his feet. A.D. Pharmacists are proudly carrying on this great tradition. Each month we are supporting one of the nationally recognized non-profit health related organizations. By the end of this year we will have invested thousands of dollars to these causes.

This month we have chosen The American Heart Association whose program to fight heart disease by prevention, cure, education and research has made a significant contribution in the battle against the nation's number-one killer.

It takes money to support this very important program, so our check for $1,000 will go to The American Heart Association, 44 East 23rd St., New York, N.Y.

Personal mention--

New found friends

by Mildred White Wallace

Some years ago we were in Birmingham on professional assignments and it was our good fortune to accompany the late Frank Willis Barnett, columnist with Birmingham News -- to the old Terminal Depot each week and interview passengers who came to and went from the Magic City. We met many interesting people.

A few nights ago - while dining at a local cafe, we thought of those by-gone days as we talked with some new found friends who, some months ago, came from their native home in Pennsylvania to become temporary residents of our town. Their names are Mr. and Mrs. Norman Resch. He is employed by National Standard. They currently reside near Columbiana on the Ferry Road but will -- when his assignment with this company has been completed, move to Oklahoma.

Both Mr. and Mrs. Resch possess sparkling personalities. Both love the out-of- doors. They have travelled extensively through the U.S.A. Congeniality in both work and play has furnished the cornerstone for their happy marriage and with their four children they have enjoyed life together.

We asked them how they like the South. Both admitted they "loved it". We are numbered among the friends they have made since coming to Columbiana who wish we might have been fortunate enough to have persuaded them to stay with us "for keeps".

* * * *

Friends of Mr. and Mrs. Joe Wallace in Columbiana extended congratulations to Mr. Wallace last week when they learned that he had been appointed Admission Counsellor to Florence State University. There were also regrets mingled with their congratulatory messages, for the new assignment will necessitate a move in residence for this splendid young couple who had just recently purchased a home in Columbiana and were taking a vitally important part in the life of the town. However, we are glad the wheel of fortune is beginning to turn for the Wallaces in a broader and wider field for service.

In addition to his responsibilities as Counsellor, Wallace will act in a recruiting capacity visiting high schools and junior colleges throughout the state. He will also evaluate transcripts. He is currently employed as an auditor in the Blue Cross office in Birmingham. The Wallaces will move to their new home in Florence, March first.

A "Bicycle built for two" was once a popular song. It might well become the theme song around Main during the upcoming Spring Season. This little two-wheeler is blossoming forth with all modern conveniences including radio, thermos jug, lighted wall tires and headlights. It is gaining popularity as thrifty folk hasten home after a work-a-day world to mount their bikes for a whirl around the countryside. No doubt about this means of transportation getting you where you want to go and saving gas, too.

Among those we saw enjoying a DST ride today were: Jane and Rux Carter, Kay and Buck Clark, Shirley Wallace, Anita Sloan, Dot Hildredth and Barbara Joiner, The writer has been invited to "join the club" and we just might do that very thing.

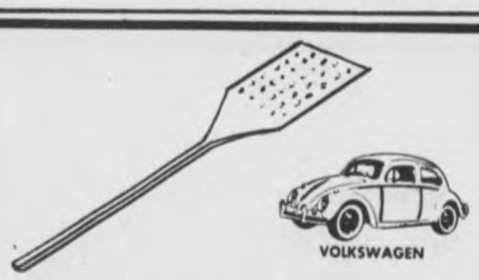
Mims Roberts friends on Main are missing him this week. He is a patient in Baptist Medical (Montclair).

Victor Herbert's birthday

Members of ASCAP (American Society of Composers, Authors and Publishers) paid their musical tributes on Feb. 1 to the immortal Victor Herbert. He was not on this earth to hear his melodies played and sung by orchestras and artists throughout the land, but most all of his unforgettable music has long found a resting place in the hearts of the entire universe.



Herbert was one of the founders of ASCAP. Every composer covets the honor and strives hard to attain a musical standard that will warrant holding membership in this organization. Who has not heard and thrilled to Herbert's "Serenades" - "Gypsy Love Song" - "Ah! Sweet Mystery of Life" - "Kiss Me Again" etc. How often have these musical cadences fallen at the close of a work a day world and lifted droopoing spirits far above the mundane. Thus does great music always come and touch every key of memory and stir all the hidden springs of joy and sorrow.

Victor Herbert evidently found the key to happiness through his musical compositions. He combined and blended both music and love into a colorful life weaving a melodic rainbow which now spans across the earth and reaches and mingles in glorious harmony among the stars.

True -- the "song may be ended -- but the melody lingers on "in the hearts of lovers of Victor Herbert's incomparable melodies.

The tribute he received on Feb. 1 from great artists everywhere -- on stage, theatre, radio, and tv marked him as one of the unforgettable personalities whose life and melodies will always remain cherished in the hearts of music lovers everywhere!

Boy Scouts observe sixty-fourth birthday

by Mildred White Wallace

Members of the Boy Scouts of America and their leaders are enjoying the thrill of observing the 64th anniversary of its founding during the month of February. With some 6.5 million members, it now stands the largest youth organization in the free world.

In this part of Alabama Bob

Hume and Boy Scouts are synonomous terms. It would be impossible to speak of Boy Scouts without immediately bringing to mind Beaver Awarded Bob Hume who has devoted so much of his time toward keeping alive the Scout organization in Columbiana.

Calendar years have not changed the purpose of scouting. Building character, creating awareness of citizenship responsibilities and promoting mental and physical fitness remain scouts objectives. But under a new and improved Scouting Program adopted after three years study, the approach toward reaching these goals has been modified to meet the changing conditions of today.

For instance, to remove the inference of immaturity Boy Scouts are now called just plain Scouts. They are delegated more responsibility for guiding troop programs. Recognition for progress in this way seems to come more rapidly and more often. There is a tendency to employ more flexibility in choosing scout programs to fit the areas in which Scouts actually live rather than some wilderness conditions of some distant forest they may never even see. Nothing however, is being done to change the fact that boys and girls, too, must become men and women of faith and integrity, able to cope successfully with problems that now beset a complex world.

The Boy Scouts of America, with its improved Scouting, Program, extends a helping hand. The Scouts deserve a special salute along with our thanks, our good wishes and our support. We covet the privilege of offering it.

Sheila Jane Johnson engaged to Mr. Frye

Mrs. Mildred F. Johnson of Marvel announces the engagement and forthcoming wedding of her daughter, Sheila Jane, to Mack Troy Frye, son of Mr. and Mrs. C.A. Frye of Wilton.

'Community School' talk set for PTO

The Columbiana Parent Teachers Organization will hear a program on the "Community School" concept at its meeting on Feb. 12.

Dr. Delbert Long, head of the Community Education Department at University of Alabama in Birmingham, will be the speaker. Dr. Long plans to run a film which shows how the community school is organized and how it functions. Following the film there will be a question and answer period.

The meeting will be at Shelby County High School at 7:30 p.m.

The idea of the community school was conceived by John R. Mott. Mr. Mott was foreign secretary and general secretary of the YMCA for many years. He believed that small towns should offer many of the same cultural, educational and recreational activities which are available in cities. It seemed to him that the local school was the logical place for the center of these activities. The particular activities offered in such a program are chosen by the people of the community. They can encompass anything from cake decorating to karate. It is designed to provide wholesome recreation for every age group. The Mott Foundation provides funds for the promotion and development of the community school.

Miss Mooney is honored at luncheon

A pre-bridal luncheon was given at the home of Pat Dove on Jan. 30 hosted by the ladies of First National Bank of Columbiana, Wilsonville Branch, and Cahaba Valley Branch for Retta Mooney whose marriage to Mike Etress will be an event of Feb. 16.

Following the delectable luncheon served at the noon hour, the honoree was presented with a number of beautiful and useful wedding gifts.

Each week we scan our news columns for those little gremlins (typographical errors) that sometimes -- no matter how careful we are -- creep into print. However, it is comforting to know that we are not alone in this field. For instance: In a daily news paper we read today appeared the following ad: "Howdy Podnuhs! Ole Diz here saying: Don't fail to miss the third Annual Birmingham Sport, Boat and Camping Show" --

Feel sure this negative approach to an ad that indicated a "Come - Come - Come" -- was really wanted -- truly falls into the category of a "Typographical Error", but we felt rather good about it as we received a bit of comfort in experiencing the fact that "misery loves company".

U.S. housing costs could be worse

Housing facilities continue to be the topic of conversation. The lack of it would be more specifically true - if we are to believe what new citizens tell us who are seeking a place to rent or build. However, there is an old theory that you can never have it so bad that someone else doesn't have it worse. As far as the matter of housing goes - costs and mortage payments - worry every home owner in the U.S. But it could be and is even worse elesewhere. That is if we can give credence to the U.S. News and World Report - read what their writers have to say on the subject! A five- room house, far from the center of Tokyo, may cost as much as $150,000. A prefabricated home ten miles from Zurich sells for $100,000. In a London suburb, a "two room shed" -- that had never been lived in sold for $24,000."

So, buying a home in America may sometimes seem to be a financial tragedy of gigantic proportions. But, in comparison to putting a roof over your head in many other countries, it can be as a fairy tale with the happiest of endings.

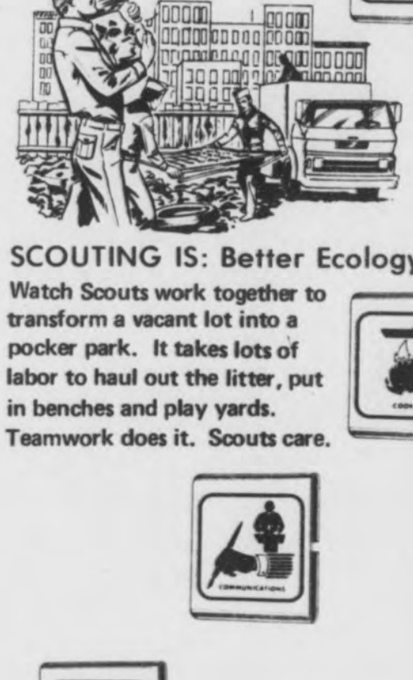
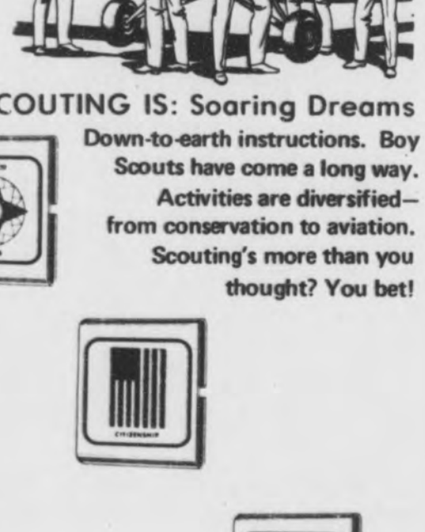
SCOUTING'S 64th ANNIVERSARY CELEBRATION



There are no city limits or county lines in Scouting. A boy is a boy, whether he comes from a big metropolis or a farming community. His interests may differ, but his high goals never vary — working to better the community or working at developing a personal skill. He will give his all to achieve good sportsmanship as well as to conservation. He is a realist who deals honestly with himself on all counts. Bright, alert and proud of what he stands for, the only limit he might strive for is the sky. We think he'll make it.

SCOUTING IS: Nurturing Life



It's caring about and doing. Like helping the environment to maintain its balance. By planting new trees . . . and seeing that the fruits of their labor blossom for everyone.

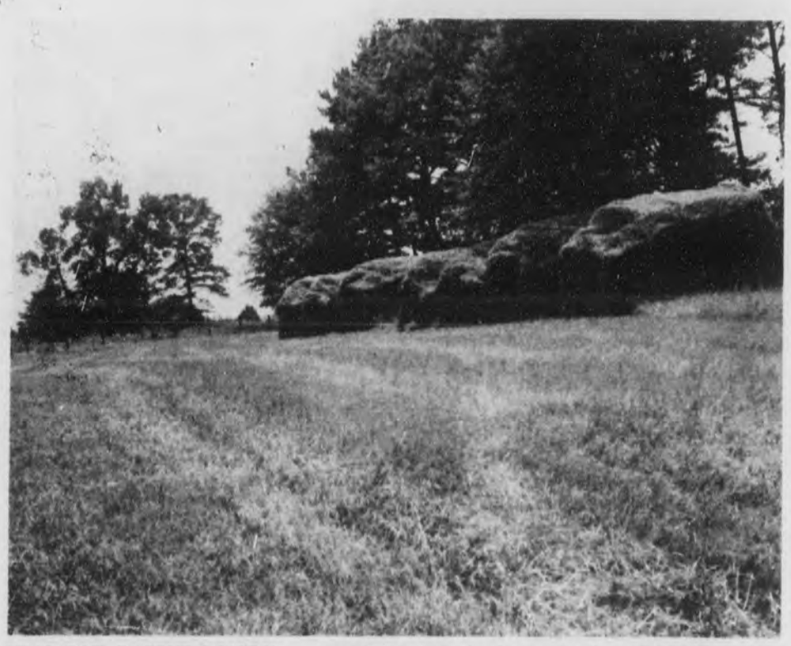
SCOUTING IS: Better Ecology

Watch Scouts work together to transform a vacant lot into a pocker park. It takes lots of labor to haul out the litter, put in benches and play yards. Teamwork does it. Scouts care.

SCOUTING TODAY'S A LOT MORE THAN YOU THINK

SCOUTING IS: Soaring Dreams

Down-to-earth instructions. Boy Scouts have come a long way. Activities are diversified—from conservation to aviation. Scouting's more than you thought? You bet!



SCOUTING IS: Love of Nature

Scouts learn not only to love the wilderness but to respect it and function in it. Nature studies and camping techniques are basic parts of the Scouting program. Scouts can cope.

This salute to Scouting is sponsored by these civic-minded firms and businesses:

TIME FOR PASTURE WORK - - A good hay crop is the result of careful pasture care. The Soil Conservation Service suggests ways to improve pastures, so they will produce like the pasture pictured at the Russell farm near the University of Montevallo.

Two men injured in car-truck collision

Two people were injured in a car-truck collision on a foggy Thursday morning at 8:30 January 31. The driver of a truck was apparently unable to stop at a red light at the Valleydale -- Highway 31 intersection. The truck crashed into a Volkswagen, injuring both drivers in the wreck.

The two men were taken to Shelby Memorial Hospital. The truck driver, Dan Smith of Bessemer, was reported to have superficial head injuries and multiple bruises. He was treated and released from the hospital. John Eric Lyerly of Saginaw, the driver of the car, was admitted to the hospital with apparent back injury.

According to Alabaster policeman Larry Rollin, the truck was headed west on Valleydale Road, but was unable to stop at the traffic light at the junction of Valleydale and Highway 31. Rollin said that the driver told him that he did not have enough brakes to stop the nearly two-ton truck.

Also on the scene of the accident was Helena police chief Lawrence Seales. Chief Seales told the Reporter that he and Rollin arrived at the accident site and proceeded to clear the wrecked vehicles off the road. The two accident victims were rushed to the hospital after an ambulance was summoned. According to Seales and other witnesses, the car driven by Lyerly was in the northbound lane of Highway 31 with a green light when it was hit by the truck.

Both officers agreed that the pea-soup fog could have been a contributing factor to the accident. The dense fog apparently obscured the visibility range of the traffic. Rollin stated that other causes could be given for the accident. Alabama State Troopers are in charge of investigation of the wreck, including details of why it occurred.

Pastures need care for best results

Many of the pastures that were planted several years ago are getting in bad shape,according to Robert Kelley of the County Soil Conservation office. He says, "If you would like pretty green grasses and more profit from your pastureland, now is the time to begin doing something about it."

The first step is to collect some soil samples and have tests run to see if the land needs lime. Tests will also reveal what kind of fertilizer to use.

In early spring old grass should be mowed close. Then fertilizer should be applied and mowing should take place as often as needed to control weeks. If the pasture is not good, overseed the old pasture and disc lightly. Discing will cover the seed and break the crust to allow old grasses a new start.

''Proper pasture management will give you good quality grazing and hay of such good value that it will offset your expense many times," Kelley advises.

CHAPEL ADDS - - Two Sunday School rooms are being added to Wildwood Chapel, located on the Columbiana-Saginaw Cutoff. The Chapel is sponsoring a singing Saturday night to raise funds for the project.

Wildwood sponsors singing

Wildwood Chapel is in the midst of a building program, adding two Sunday School rooms to the church.

In order to raise funds for the project, the church is sponsoring a singing on Saturday, February 9, beginning at 7 p.m. Guest singers will be the Sounds of Joy and the Joy Tones.

The public is invited to attend the singing, which will be held at the Chapel on the Columbiana - Saginaw cutoff.

The Rev. Dwight Joyner is pastor of the church.

Area farmers producing more meat

Commercial and custom slaughter plants in Alabama produced 14% more red meat during December 1973 than in December 1972, quotes the Alabama Crop and Livestock Reporting Service, in figures just released.

December cattle slaughter totaled 11,900 head, 9% below November but 43% above the December 1972 kill. Calf slaughter, at 500 head, was less than half the November slaughter but 67% above December 1972. December hog slaughter totaled 69,000 down 5% from November but equal to the December 1972 slaughter.

The mid- January All Commodity Index of Prices received by Alabama farmers was 192% of the 1966-68 base, according to the Alabama Crop and Livestock Reporting Service. The Index at this level was 20 points (38 percent) above January 1973.

The Index of Prices paid by farmers for commodities and services, interest, taxes, and farm wage rates for mid-January was 157, up 3 points (2 percent) from a month earlier. Price increases were reported for most production and family living items. Interest on farm mortage indebtedness is up sharply for 1974 and taxes for farm real estate are up moderately. The index was 23 points (17 percent) above a year earlier.

Mean Mary Jean, Superstar of our Economy Team, says:
Think again.

The VW Super Bug is bigger than our Duster in one important category—sticker price.*
That's something to think about. Especially when you consider that Duster seats five adults comfortably. Volkswagen—only four. Duster offers three times the trunk space. Duster has a standard electronic ignition that virtually eliminates ignition tune-ups. VW doesn't even offer one.
And finally, Duster still looks and acts like a compact. With easy handling and parking. Good gas mileage on regular gas.
So c'mon down! And let a member of our economy Team show you how easy it is to own a Duster.

*Manufacturer's suggested retail price, excluding destination charges, dealer preparation, state and local taxes, Whitewalls ($27.45) and wheel covers ($25.75) as shown are optional. Prices effective 1-21-74.

Non-voters' names purged from active voter list

The Board of Registrars has completed its bi-annual task of purging the voters' list, according to Mrs. Doris Turner, chairman.

The Registrars have removed the names of persons who are known to have moved away from Shelby County, or who are deceased. They have gone over the lists carefully and have sought advice from many persons.

Errors may have occrrred, however, and Mrs. Turner encourages persons to telephone her home if they have any questions or protests to make about the names of persons removed from the list of eligible voters in Shelby County. Her number is 669-7649.

The list was photographically reduced from the computer print-outs furnished to the Reporter by the Board of Registrars. It is printed here as a public service. Only names of persons removed from the list appear here.

The list of qualified voters will be printed in late March.

Grandbabies bring joy

by Mrs. Elsie A. Jones

The new year has brought much joy into three of our homes by the arrival of new grandbabies. For the Thomas Nance and the Carl Dean Moore families, it is a new grandson, born to Mr. and Mrs. Stanley Nance, on January 17, at University Hospital. The mother, CArol Moore Nance, has returned home, but the "wee" baby will have to remain in the hospital until it has grown-up some more. He has been named Darren Karl Nance.

The Luther Hatchers are the proud grandparents of a new granddaughter, born to Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Kerr, Jr., of Wilmington, N.C., on January 18. This little lady has been named Wendy Marie. Mrs. Kerr is the former Joyce Hatcher of Westover. For the Hatchers, this is the second granddaughter and seven grandsons. The Hatchers have just returned from a visit to Wilmington to get acquainted with the "young miss".

Mr. and Mrs. James Hatcher spent last weekend in Atlanta visiting Mr. and Mrs. Fred Higgins. Mrs. Hatcher (Dorothy Sue Strother) and Mrs. Higgins were roommates at Jacksonville University, and this is their first reunion since their college days.

Friends of Mrs. Charles White, of Sterrett, (nee Beulah Moore) will regret to learn that she is critically ill at Baptist Medical Center, Montclair. Mrs. White was the postmaster at Sterrett for many years prior to her retirement.

Mrs. Esther Sherrell, of Vincent, who is the mother of Mrs. Thelma Payne, James Sherrell, and T.A. Sherrell, all of Westover, is critically ill at Baptist Medical Center, Montclair, following surgery. Mrs. Sherrell has been ill for quite a long time. She has many friends and relatives in Westover who wish for her recovery.

Mrs. Nell Shelton has been confined to her home for some time just too sick to be out and participating in all her activities in which she is always interested.

Rev. J.C. Denny attended the Methodist Bishops' Conference at Birmingham-Southern last week. While Rev. Denny was attending Conference, Mrs. Denny spent several days at her home in Scottsboro, just visiting friends. She especially enjoyed attending the meeting of her OES Chapter while there.

Roy Wyatt has returned home from Baptist Medical Center Montclair after undergoing some tests.

Recent visitors in the home of the J.C. Robertsons were Mr. and Mrs. W.B. Harris of Sylacauga, Mr. and Mrs. Addison Hand, and Mrs. Josie Vanderslice of Shelby.

Mia Dawn Bertram, daughter of Mrs. Wade Spradlin, fell out of a tree, while playing at Sterrett, and had the misfortune to break several bones in her body. She is a patient at the Brookwood Hospital, and I understand that she is in a body-cast, and will be contained within a cast for several weeks even after she is released from the hospital.

The good news of the Spurgeon family whose home was destroyed by fire is that they are comfortably situated in their new trailer home and are very grateful to all the people who went to their assistance after their misfortune.

Mrs. Zollie Falkner, age 40 years, of Sewell Hill, died at her home on Sunday, January 27. She was a native of St. Clair County, but had lived in the Westover area about 20 years. Her survivors include her husband and five children, which are: Mary Ellen Falkner, Mrs. Novia Dorough, Miss Sheila Falkner, and Albert and Anthony Falkner, all of Westover; two brothers -- Edward Whalen, Sterrett and Charlie Whalen, of Mullins W.Va.; four sisters -- Mrs. Charlotte Melvin, of Pinson; Mrs. Jessie Mae Johnston, of Irondale; Mrs. Minnie Sullin, of Bessemer; and Mrs. Brachard Chappel, of Warrior.

Funeral services were held in the Pleasant Grove Church on Bear Creek Road, on Monday, with Rev. James A. Johnson and Rev. Eugene Howard conducting the services. The pallbearers were: Earl Reynolds, Howard Webb, Dale Brasher, Odell Ford, Charlie Brown, and Virgil Kleeschulte.

Young people haven't really changed much from when we were young. They still grow up, go to school, get a job, get married and have children. The difference is they don't necessarily do it in that order.

REYNOLDS RENOVATION - - Work on University of Montevallo's Reynolds Hall is proceeding apace. The back of the building reveals a number of changes as the building crew begins to bring new life to the antebellum structure. Plans call for a newly designed theatre in the upstairs central portion and refurnishing of offices for the Speech department.

EXTENSION - - A new portion is being added to the back of Reynolds Hall. Construction appears to be going smoothly on the addition to the back of the building where Montevallo soldiers met to leave for the Civil War. Later when Reynolds evolved from an academy to a girl's college, the building housed everything from the post office to the original Tea House.

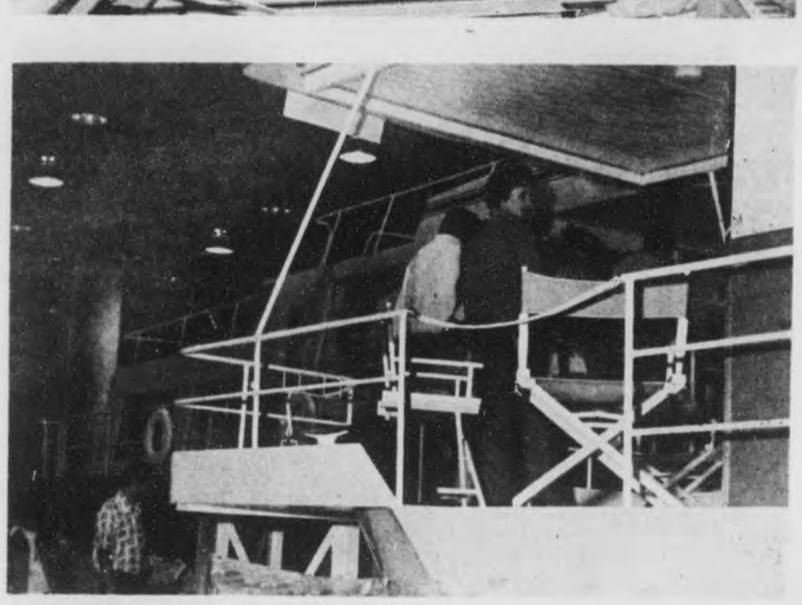
Hank Aaron at age 40 still winning

Hank Aaron was 40 years old last Friday.

Many guys his age have trouble climbing a flight of stairs or walking around the block. Most athletes his age belong to the "ex-" category; they've long since retired.



Not so with Aaron. He's got one more active season left as an Atlanta Braves outfielder, and in many ways it'll be the most significant time of his 21-year Major League career. Nearly everyone knows Aaron will start 1974 with 713 home runs, one shy of Babe Ruth's all-time record. Barring the unforeseen, it's just a matter of when and by how many Aaron will pass that long-unapproachable goal.

There is every reason to believe that Aaron will have another productive season. Last year he batted .301, hit 40 homers and had 96 RBI's playing in three-fourths of the Braves' games. Obviously, he shows few signs of slowing down.

Birthdays are times of both expectations and rememberances. Aaron is the holder of 13 major league records including: most years with 100 or more runs scored, 15; most years leading the league in total bases, eight; and most home runs in one league, 713.

In addition, Aaron holds 19 all-time National League records. These included most years with 600 or more at bats, 10; most years with 40 or more home runs, eight; amd most years with 100 or more runs scored, 15.

BIRMINGHAM BOAT AND CAMPING SHOW -- Thousands viewed the latest in outdoor living luxury at the Birmingham Boat and Camping show held in that city's civic center last week. The newest lines in boats, campers, motor homes and outdoor equipment were displayed there as well as representatives from lakeside marinas and resorts from across the state. Three Shelby County businesses, Lacoosa Marina, Alabaster Marine and Indian Valley Marine had displays in the show.

Health Dept. makes appeal to eliminate death traps

The division of primary prevention, Alabama Department of Public Health, is again calling on citizens to help eradicate the potential death- traps of discarded, abandoned and unattended airtight containers.

Discarded or unused freezers, refrigerators and other airtight cabinets present a serious problem. To eliminate the possibility of death by suffocation, either:

(1) remove the door

(2) remove the latch stop or magnetic stop

(3) drill holes in the cabinet and remove the gasket (these steps together but not singly will unseal a box and let air in) or

(4) destroy the box altogether.

If a freezer, refrigerator or other airtight cabinet is temporarily out of use, either:

(1) remove the latch stop or magnetic stop

(2) move the box so that the door is against a wall

(3) tie a wire or stout rope around the box or

(4) padlock the appliance, where handles are so constructed.

The above is from the "Home Accidents" pamplet printed by the State Health Department. The publication also contains many other safety tips which include protecting the family from fires, poisoning, electrical shock and other potentially death- dealing hazards. A copy can be obtained by writing: Division of Primary Prevention, State Department of Public Health, Room 206, State Office Building, Montgomery, Alabama 36104.

Candidates file at Demo meeting

The county's Democratic Executive Committee met last Thursday, to set up rules for candidates who plan to run in the upcoming election. At the meeting a number of candidates announced that they would run for office. The committee voted to set qualifying fees at 2% of the first year's salary for each office.

Candidates running for county sheriff in the Democratic primary are incumbent Sheriff C.P. (Red) Walker; coroner Billy C. Thompson; and Pelham town councilman Allen Wilson. Thompson had already publicly announced his intention to run. Walker had not announced his plans to run for re-election prior to the meeting, due to a heavy workload and a recent illness. Wilson quipped that he had been campaigning for the office for more than a year.

Only one candidate each announced plans to run for the office of county coroner and that of superintendent of education. Ed Burdett of Aldrich had told the Reporter last week that he planned to run for coroner. Elvin Hill stated that he will qualify to run for re-election as superintendent of education.

Three men are running for the office of county commissioner, District 4. They are present commissioner I.D. Stone of Westover, former commissioner Alton Parker of Vandiver, and Vincent mayor J. Alpha Lowe.

In the race for the county commission seat, District 2, are Montevallo businessman Victor Scott, Inferior Court Judge L.C. (Curt) Payne of Alabaster, and Doug Ballard of Montevallo.

Other candidates present at the meeting were Tom Stubbs, state senate candidate for District 17, and Calvin Smith, who is running for State representative. State Senator Obie Littleton was unable to be at the meeting, and his wife Jeanette spoke about his plans to run for re-election in District 18.

In the business portion of the meeting, the committee voted to adopt the rules set up by the state Democratic committee. It was decided that the committee would follow state recommendations for a 2 percent salary qualifying fee. The fee is set at two percent of a year's salary for each office, not including expense accounts.

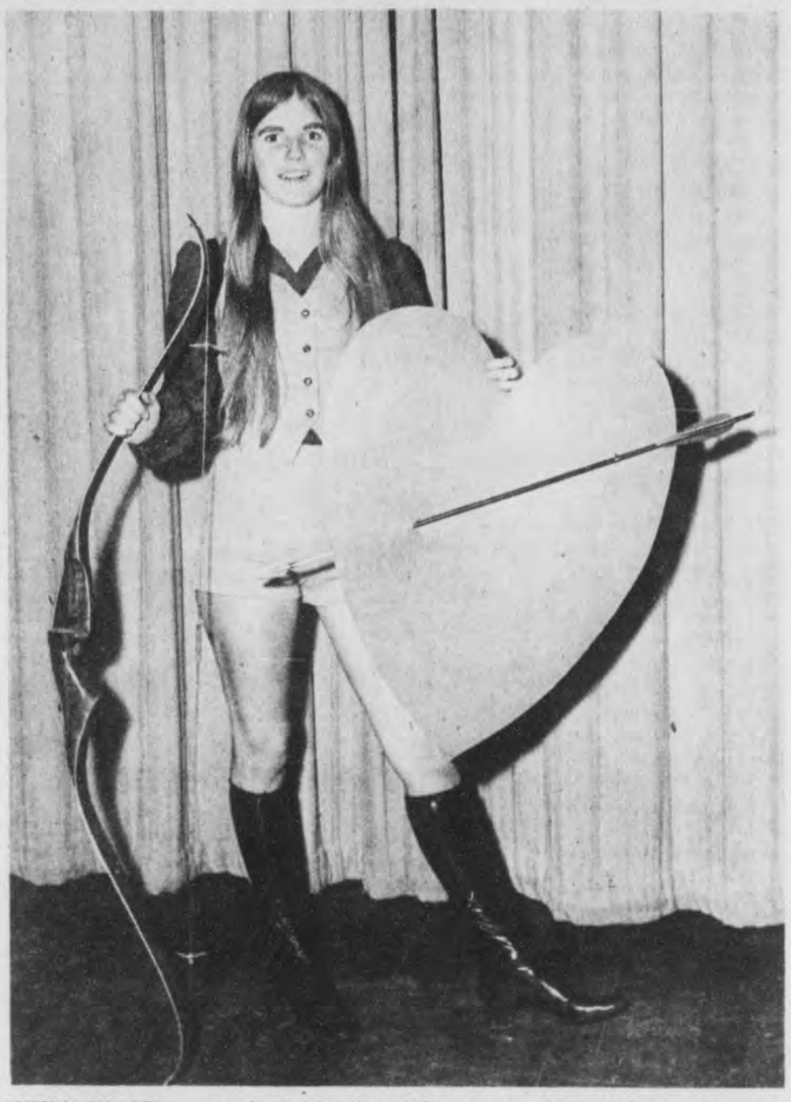
This amounts to a fee of $300 to run as a Democratic candidate for sheriff; $48 to run for a seat on the County Commission; and $20 to qualify as a candidate for the office of coroner in the primary.

When asked for a financial report, Judge Payne replied, "We're broke!" According to the committee treasurer, the County Democratic Executive Committee has $36.34 in the bank.

Following the meeting, the committee shared a period of fellowship as candidates and committeemen mingled with old friends. Many people present gathered to examine the map of the county beats and districts which was prepared by the office of the probate judge.

Republicans meet, discuss finances

The county's Republican Executive Committee held a meeting Friday night, February 8, at the county courthouse. Amid scattered snowflakes and a near absence of gasoline, a small core of the Republican party planned their campaign and finances in this year's election.



One of the main areas of business discussed at the meeting was money for the party's finances. J. Arthur Jones, chairman of the county committee, stated that they had about $250 in their treasury, having bought a new addressing machine for $300. He said that nearly $100 was spent a few months ago in an advertisement supporting President Nixon.

Plans for fund-raising include pledges from party members and a dinner. The county party is negotiating to bring a celebrity speaker for a rally to be held along with a movie about the man. The members were urged to contribute to the state GOP fund, especially since 20 percent rebate would be returned to the local group.

J. Danny Cooper, also of the county executive committee, pointed out that state Republicans have agreed to disclose the names of everyone who gives more than $10 to the campaign. Cooper noted that state Democrats had refused a similar policy when it was suggested by one of their own members, instead opting to disclose only the names of donors who give $101 or more.

The committee voted to set qualifying fees at two percent of the job's salary. There was some discussion about setting such a high fee, but it was decided to keep the fee at $300 for the office of sheriff and superintendent of education, and the respective fees based on a year's salary of each office. Jones explained

Wilson runs for sheriff

Allen Wilson of Pelham has announced his candidacy for the office of sheriff of Shelby County.

He told the Reporter he thinks Shelby County needs a full time sheriff and he promises that if elected he would serve full time in the office.

Wilson was born in Siluria and has been a life time resident of the county. He has real estate interests, with rental property, a mobile home park and two gasoline stations. He has been in business for more than 20 years.

The candidate is not new to the world of politics. His father, Louis P. Wilson is well known in county Democratic party circles, where he has taken an active interest for years.

The 42 year old candidate is serving his third term as a member of the Pelham Town Council. He has served the town as police commissioner, and more recently as sanitation and fire commissioner.

He is a graduate of Thompson High School and served two years during the Korean War.

He is married to the former Betty Fay Elliott of Pelham. They have four children. They are members of the First Baptist Church of Pelham.

Editors Note: The following statement is by Lynder Henry, County Commissioner of District Two:

To University of Montevallo--

Wallace announces $250,000 grant

The University of Montevallo honored Governor George C. Wallace Tuesday by naming a building for him, and concluded the day a quarter of a million dollars richer.

Speaking to a capacity audience in the University's Palmer Hall Auditorium, the governor received thunderous applause when he told faculty, students and guests of the university that he will appropriate $250,000 to UM from the state's April revenue sharing check.

Earlier, during Governor's Day ceremonies Tuesday, the school's Board of Trustees voted to name the recently completed speech and hearing facility, the George C. Wallace Speech and Hearing Center.

Naming of the center was first announced by University President Dr. Kermit Johnson during an invitation luncheon honoring the governor. Nearly 250 guests, including area mayors, Shelby County officials, and representatives of the UM faculty and student body attended the luncheon held in Main Hall.

The luncheon was highlighted by informal remarks from the governor and an introduction of local officials. Representative Tom Stubbs of Helena who is also a member of the University's Board of Trustees presided at the luncheon.

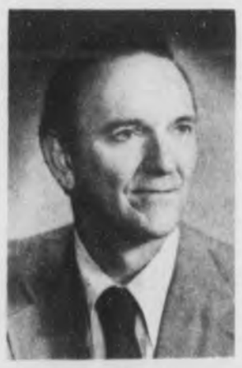
During the official Governor's Day convocation Tuesday afternoon Governor Wallace reviewed his campaigns of 1963, '68 and '72 and called his current administration "an administration of youth" climaxed by the establishment of the state's junior college program and a record shattering budget for public education at all levels.

It was during the afternoon convocation that Wallace announced an additional quarter of a million dollars to UM.

At the conclusion of the afternoon convocation Wales W. Wallace, chairman of the University's Board of Trustees and the University's president, Kermit Johnson, presented the governor with a plaque honoring his contribution to public education in Alabama. The plaque is inscribed as follows:

"Governor's Day, February 12, 1974. Our sincere appreciation to Governor George C. Wallace whose dedication and unyielding support has contributed more to all phases of public education in Alabama than any other man in the state's history. Presented by the University of Montevallo."

Among the platform guests at the afternoon ceremonies were members of the school's board of trustees, Mrs. Cornelia Wallace, the UM band and concert choir.



Greetings to the governor were brought by Dr. Bess Terry on behalf of the Montevallo faculty and by Mark Brandon, the school's student member of the Board of Trustees.

Serving as master of ceremonies at the afternoon program was James M. Tingle, a Birmingham attorney who is vice chairman of the board of trustees.

Alexander on GOP ticket

LESTER ALEXANDER

Lester Alexander, of Birmingham has announced that he is a Republican candidate for the house seat in the new Legislative District 51, which includes Vestavia, Hoover, Bluff Park, Helena, Pelham, and Alabaster.

Twice elected constable of Precinct 25 in Jefferson County, Alexander feels that as a conservative Jeffersonian Republican he has a good chance of winning the house seat in District 51.

Alexander points out that Republicans have consistently had good showings in his area of Jefferson County, and that many of north Shelby County's new residents have voted the GOP ticket.

Alexander is married to the former Betty Colvert. Having children in elementary school, high school, and college, he believes "totally and completely in the support of our local schools." He is employed as an industrial engineer at United States Steel Corporation.

He is a member of St. Mark's Methodist Church, Zamora temple, Jefferson County PTA Council, Alabama Peace Officers Association, American Institute of Industrial Engineers, A.F.S. International, Berry Athletic Association, and other local organizations.

TRUCKERS SHUT DOWN - - Many Shelby County truck drivers participated in a nationwide shutdown last week. These independent truckers were at a picket line between Calera and Montevallo last Wednesday. They told the Reporter that they were only asking for sympathy shutdowns and were not forcing any trucks to stop. (Photo by Rick Moore)

Council nixes cycle track

Montevallo's city council reversed itself Monday night and voted not to issue a business license for a proposed motorcycle race facility.

After receiving a petition containing 80 names and listening to a delegation of nearly 30 persons who attended Monday night's city council meeting, council members voted unanimously to refrain from issuing a license to Mark Davis for a motor cycle race and trail course in Almont.

At a previous city council meeting, council members agreed to issue a license to Davis who is a senior at University of Montevallo. Davis, however, had not formally applied to city clerk Kenneth Bailey for his business license and the license had not been issued.

The eighty-name petition requested council members to vote against issuing a license. Most of the names are of property owners whose land is located near the fourteen acre site where the proposed motorcycle facility was planned.

Persons appearing in person before the council members, Monday night, were unanimously opposed to the motorcycle facility. They represented churches, property owners, the local chapter of the Alabama Conservancy and the American Association of University Women.

In other action during Monday night's council meeting in Montevallo, additional details for the city's proposed fire department building were resolved. It was decided to use a galvanized roof, a brick front and a deep green color for the siding.

Montevallo's fire chief, Dr. S.M. Mahan expressed concern over the safety of five buildings located near the University of Montevallo campus. The buildings are currently being used as fraternity houses and church-related student centers.

According to Mahan the converted dwellings do not provide proper fire escapes and do not meet a variety of safety requirements.

The fire chief was instructed to draw-up a sample ordinance covering safety in such buildings. He will submit it to the council at a later date.

Vanity Fair may revise initial plan

County and municipal officials who participated in a labor survey in parts of Shelby, Bibb and Chilton Counties in December have been informed that Vanity Fair Mills has not reached a final decision on locating a sewing facility in the area.

George Heard, Industrial Relations Manager for Vanity Fair told local officials Tuesday morning that a final decision has not yet been reached.

Heard explained that the labor survey indicated there would not be a sufficient number of potential employees to staff 400 to 600 employee facility. Heard said the survey did indicate however, that a 200 employee facility would probably be feasible.

He told local officials that the company is now considering revising its plans for a smaller operation.

When asked how soon company officials might arrive at a decision, he indicated that too many factors were involved to predict any specific time.

He did say, however, that the Shelby County- Bibb County- Chilton County area is still "very much in the running".

Heard again complimented local officials for their cooperation in making the labor survey.

Gas drought wallops Shelby County residents

LOCKING UP - - Mr. and Mrs. Onnie Glass lock up their service station in Columbiana, wondering what to do until they can get a supply of gasoline.

Shelby County drivers found gasoline in short supply this week, or they didn't find it at all. The independent truckers' strike, yet to be resolved, left most county service stations without gas for several days. The situation began to look critical on Tuesday, February 5th when some stations sold the last gas they had, and others were faced with long lines of panic buyers.

Afraid of threats made by striking independent truckers, many gas distributors were reluctant to send trucks outside of Birmingham onto long stretches of highways in Shelby and other surrounding counties. As a result, a number of county gas stations sold out early last week.

The shortage of gas had direct and immediate effects on nearly all areas of Shelby County life this week, from education, to politics, religion, labor, and law enforcement. Without gas, attendance dropped at work, churches, political party meetings, and other functions. Even police cars and school buses had to take the gas drought into account.

The county school system was not seriously affected, it had appeared that the buses would only make through Tuesday, February 5; however a gas shipment was received at the county bus shop that afternoon. Shcool bus superintendent Sherrell McClure told the Reporter in a telephone interview, "We have temporary relief with the gas we received, hopefully putting us in shape for the rest of the week." McClure stated that the gas situation is "a day-to- day affair" for the county buses. Though supplied by a major oil company, their distributor has no assurance that he will be able to get a steady supply of gas from local terminals.

The problem was not due to a real shortage of gasoline in the state, but mainly to a cutdown of truck deliveries combined with panic buying by drivers with their gas tanks more than half full. According to reports from the terminals in Birmingham, gas trucks were not prevented from filling up, but picketers' threats kept most deliveries limited to the immediate Birmingham area. Frequent reports of violence led some gas truckers to send armed guards with the drivers.

At the beginning of the panic, a number of service station owners reported long lines of cars waiting to fill their tanks. Ronnie Booth told the Reporter that a wave of panic buyers converged on his Shell station in Helena on Tuesday afternoon. When he sold out the next morning his tanks were empty till the end of the week.

A spot check of service stations on Highway 31 in Alabaster and Pelham revealed that most of them had run out of gasoline by Wednesday afternoon, or were on the verge of selling their last gas. Several stations were offering service but no gas, while many closed until they could get gasoline. Even when some stations had gas available Friday, the rule of the day was generally a three-dollar limit.

The gas shortage had its effects on local police departments as well. According to city hall reports, Montevallo's police department had cut out most of their patrols in order to conserve their fuel. Like the Helena police, they were mainly answering calls instead of cruising around. Helena's Chief Seales was quite low on gas until he was able to buy half a tankful to tide him over. Several municipalities reported that they had filled the tanks of their fire trucks and other emergency vehicles before the situation became critical.

Sam Spivey, director of the Alabama Service Station Association, told the Reporter that Shelby County was harder hit than Birmingham because drivers felt "there is less apt to be violence in town" than on the open highway. While shipments began to resume late Thursday and Friday, convoys of trucks proceeded southward with every foreseeable precaution, including men who "rode shotgun."

SORRY, WE'RE OUT - - County gas stations felt the pinch of the independent trucker strike last week. People went from place to place looking for gasoline, often to find the pumps empty. Many stations were out of gas for much of the week. State officials are saying that it may be two more weeks before gas supplies are back to a normal level in local stations.

FAMILIAR SIGHT - - Idle pumps were a familiar sight this past week. Many a driver began to be a trifle nervous after a few scenes like this one.

Owning a home has its benefits

by Fred Cooper

I'm now one of the landed gentry, a property owner, master of all I survey as long as I stand in my yard and don't look too far in any direction.

I though about this as I spent time in my very own backyard Sunday afternoon. After years of apartment dwelling, I finally have a house.

I started to mention this to the Rotor Rooter man who was in the backyard with me but I didn't thinkhe'd be interested. Anyway, he was busy running his Rotor Rooter machine through my drainage system clearing out the roots so the water would run out of my tub.

There are a lot more considerations to being a homeowner than I considered when I took my pension money from my former job and made a down payment on a house. I wanted this house badly for two reasons: one was that I'd never had a house before and the idea of privacy appealed to me and, two, I needed a tax break.

So far, things are working out on both counts. I've had more people trooping in and out of my house in the past two weeks than I had in a year in my apartment including the man next door who has had a key to the place for years so that he could "sort of keep an eye on things". He continually brings his eye inside so he can have a better look.

Also, I've spent so much money in incidentals such as wall-to-wall carpet, shelving, and Rotor Rooter folks that I've probably already gone through whatever additional money I'll get back from income tax next year.

There's a certain pride in owning a home, however. I can look out my picture window and see all the leaves on my lawn that I'll have to rake up before I can cut it. I can pull the handle on my oven door and have it come off in my hand and I can think, no landlord to call on this one, Cooper. It's all yours.

I can try to think of excuses to tell my friends when they start planning all these woderful parties we can have at my house since I don't have apartment neighbors to disturb anymore.

I'm considering it an investment, however. A very valuable one. As a friend pointed out as I prepared to move from my cozy apartment, when I walked out that door after four years of paying rent, I wouldn't have any of that money.

I also never would have gotten to know the Rotor Rooter man. I suppose it's worth it.

Diplomat comments on recent trip home

Letter to the Editor:

I am writing to thank you for your gracious article concerning our experiences in the Neareast. Your understanding of this complicated part of the world is exceptional, and I appreciated your quick and thorough grasp of our role in supporting our policies abroad.

On a more personal basis, we found real emotional satisfaction in feeling welcome at home. Your article did this, and opened many other doors for renewed friendships that we would have missed in our short visit.

We returned to Lebanon following a long trek - - to Washington for Christmas with our two sons and grandchildren, to Oahu for a tour, to Manila for consultation at our similar installation there, and to see old Malaysian and Indian friends in Kuala Lumpur and Delhi. In Manila, we had the chance to get acquainted in a week's stay with our son's in-laws - - the only trouble was that I caught the Asian flu from the Commodore and promptly spread it over South Asia and to my wife.

We find Beirut quiet and peaceful in striking contrast to the mobs, terror, and wars dominating last year. The Arabs (most of them) seem to be following America's lead toward peace. The dangerous exceptions and Palestinians who see their cause going down the drain. Hopefully, they will not turn to renewed terror to achieve their aims.

Again, we appreciate your courtesies, and extend our best wishes.

Sincerely yours,

William C. Holcombe, Director

Communists stir up British labor troubles

LONDON — Just about everyone in Britain is sore at the lowly mine workers for plunging the country into an economic crisis. The miners' vote to strike has aggravated the energy crisis and heightened the hardships of their fellow Englishmen.

Yet deep in the coal pits, there is another side to the story. The miners often crouch on their knees and breathe black coal dust while they dig for coal. Water seeps into the mines and they often wade through water up to their knees.

The work is also dangerous. The coal dust and underground gases have caused explosions. The conveyor belts have sliced off the arms and legs of miners who have lost their footing and fallen against them. There have been cave-ins.

Further, an estimated 40,000 miners in Britain have black lung disease which leaves them wheezing and causes premature death. For all of this, they are paid no more than what a London secretary makes.

In Britain today, the miners are the scapegoats for the nation's economic woes. I have always championed the miners in America. So here, too, I wanted to tell their side of the story.

But their decision to strike has serious international overtones. In private, Prime Minister Edward Heath has complained that the Communists are stirring up the labor troubles. I have seen secret intelligence reports which confirm Heath's complaint.

There is evidence, not only in Britain, that the Communists are trying to exploit the economic turmoil caused by the Arab oil squeeze. Soaring oil prices have thrown the economies of Western Europe into a tailspin. The Communists are trying to take advantage of the unrest to overthrow the old order and to install new, Communist-infiltrated governments in power.

In Britain, the Communists control 10 per cent of the important posts in the major trade unions. The intelligence reports show that the Communist parties in Western Europe received instructions from Moscow to exploit the oil crisis and to stir up class warfare.

But there is new evidence that the Kremlin has now changed its tune. More recent intelligence reports indicate that the Soviets fear the economic dislocations could cause Europeans to turn to the right rather than the left.

Suddenly, there is concern in the Kremlin that Europe's economic troubles could bring right-wing governments to power.

Dark Clouds: Meanwhile, the economic clouds over Europe are dark and ominous. Throughout Western Europe, living costs are soaring and unemployment is rising. Workers, who used to collect for overtime, are now on part-time. Fewer jobs are available for young people leaving school.

The recession, which is building up here in Europe, could be the beginning of a worldwide depression. The tripling of oil prices has caused a severe economic setback in most nations. It has also caused the producers of other raw materials to talk about pulling similar price squeezes.

Many European economists believe that 1973 was the end of the era of plenty. In 1974, Europe may be entering a new era of shortages.

The law of supply and demand, inevitably, will push up prices. This will mean that only the wealthy will be able to afford goods that used to be available to the masses.

But the masses have become accustomed to their TV sets, refrigerators and motor cars. Rather than give up their small luxuries, they almost certainly will demand higher and higher wages.

As many economists see it, the poor either must give up hope of escaping their poverty, or achieve a massive redistribution of income. If these economists are right, the next few years will bring tremendous economic and political upheaval.

What happens in Europe, of course, inevitably will spread to the United States.

Nuclear Sharing: Europe's leaders have other major worries. There is suspicion in London that the United States may break off its nuclear-sharing arrangement with the British.

The two English-speaking nations have been nuclear partners since the end of World War II. But the British now suspect that Secretary of State Henry Kissinger is ready to end this nuclear collaboration as a concession to the Russians.

Washington has been cool to British inquiries about replacing their four Polaris submarines. New developments in nuclear submarine warfare by both the Russians and the Americans will make the Polaris subs obsolete by 1980.

The Btitish were also upset by the first-round SALT agreements, which gave the Russians a 50 per cent advantage in the numbers of missiles. Most of these Soviet missiles are limited by range to European targets.

The clamor in Congress to reduce U.S. troop levels in Europe has added to the skepticism here in London that the United States would risk a nuclear war with Russia to defend Europe.

This has led to quiet soundings in Paris about a possible British-French nuclear-sharing program. There is growing concern here that Western Europe may have to form its own independent nuclear force.

Forest Service wants 80 teen rangers

Forest Supervisor Arthur D. Woody of the Alabama National Forests announced today that applications for the summer Youth Conservation Corps program are available now by writing the Forest Supervisor, U.S. Forest Service, P.O. Box 40, Montgomery, AL 36101.

The Youth Conservation Corps has become a permanent summer program of work for boys and girls ages 15 through 18 years of age. The program is designed as a work and conservation study program of eight weeks on the National Forests. Enrollees are paid a fixed sum of $308 and furnished room and board for the summer's work. A draw against the total pay can be made each two weeks.

The camp, starting on or about June 10 and ending early in August, will be a "live in" or residential seven days a week type camp with counselors. Saturdays and Sundays will be organized and spent with optional church attendance and educational and recreational field trips and activities.

Woody said, "Work projects, such as trail building, roadside cleanup, recreation area maintenance and improvement, tree planting and road bank seeding are in the work agenda.

This year the Youth Conservation Corps is limited to 80 young men and women who will be recruited statewide and include all social, economic and ethnic backgrounds. They will live in separate quarters in the Heflin-Anniston area, performing work on the Talladega National Forest.

Democrats' truce will be tested

by Don Wasson

The "peace" proclaimed last week in Birmingham in the State Democratic Executive Committee is a tenuous peace at best and in the coming months, we might well expect numerous violations of the truce line.

Although the States Rights and Loyalist factions talked of "unity" and "harmony," the real meaning of the sweetness and light session will begin to surface as people begin qualifying for seats on the new committee, to be elected in the May primary.

The old committee, the one which met for the last time in Birmingham last week, had 111 members and one could count only 39 members who follow the Wallace banner.

Of the 111, 106 were elected and the five others were party officials, at-large members.

There will be 105 members elected to the new committee, again paralleling the House of Representatives districts established by the federal court. But 28 at-large members were agreed upon by the Birmingham meeting, and they are about equally divided among Loyalist and Wallaceites.

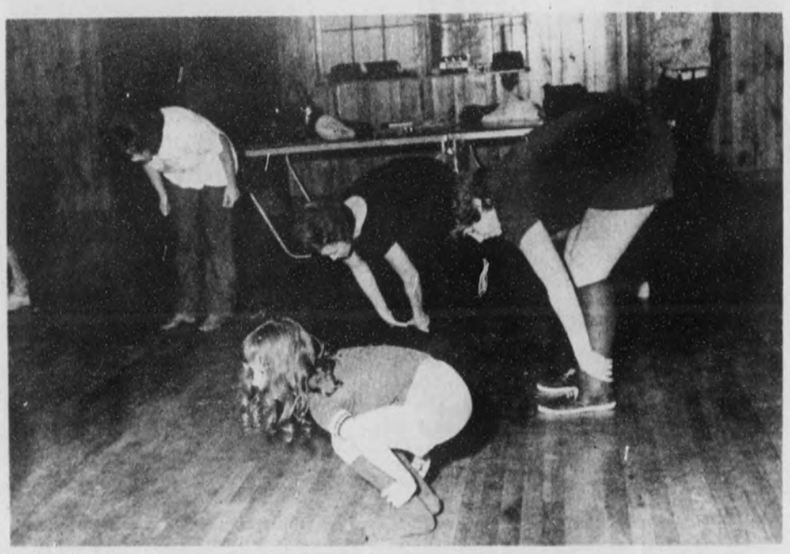
So control of the committee will come down to the election of the 105 and the Wallace people are out beating the bushes for likely candidates. They aren't looking for the hard-line Wallaceite so much as they are for recent conversions, people with outstanding records in their fields and with solid standing in their communities.

Several have already been lined up and the loyalists are in for a real contest.

If Wallace does win control of the committee, the resulting shakeup in party leadership could be traumatic. If Robert S. Vance loses out as state party chairman, it could have a profound effect on the conduct of party affairs in future elections.

Wallace has said that he will work within the national party with an eye toward bringing the party back toward the middle in 1976. That failing, however, he is not ruling out a third party movement and the machinery for such an effort is being kept operable all over the country.

If he does go third party again, what of the state party? It would certainly lose its position in the national party, which would then look toward the National Democartic Party of Alabama (NDPA) or some other loyalist element.



The Wallace philosophy, should he go that route, would be to let the loyalists look after themselves. While another third party effort on his part might have some greater measure of success than it had in 1968, it would be difficult to see other states following his lead, particularly in regard to the election of members of congress on a third party ticket.

Somehow the feeling is developing that the national party will listen to Wallace in 1976, not to the extent that he would wish, perhaps, but to the extent that he could rightfully claim that he turned the party around.

That may or may not include a nomination for Wallace, either as president or as vice president. But it wouldn't surprise many people to see the national party extend to George C. Wallace the chairmanship of its platform committee, or some similar important post.

The state party is in for a traumatic change. If Wallace can capitalize on the organizational and leadership abilities of Vance and same other key loyalists, we may not again experience a divided party.

But is is going to take more meeting of the minds than was exhibited in Birmingham last week. That is indeed a shaky peace.

KEEPING FIT - - Brenda Farmer, Eleanor Vansant, Judy Ingram and her daughter, Tracy Ingram, are among those taking advantage of the Physical Fitness classes taught each Monday and Thursday evenings at the Rec Building at seven o'clock, by Freida Holcombe, a PE teacher in Columbiana Middle School. All participating in these classes state they look forward to this recreational period and agree that "all work and no play is not good for anybody". This is a public service Freida is rendering her adopted town and if you would like to join one of the classes she would be glad to have you.

Area scout units observe anniversary

Last Sunday was Scout unday as the Boy Scouts of merica celebrate their 64th irthday this month. The eporter contacted several :out leaders from across the ounty and found that though scouting has been ound for many years, it is :vertheless very young and gorous in scope.

Local units are very active their programs that help young men to follow the three points of the scout oath: "I promise to be -- physically strong, mentally awake, and morally straight."

Bob Hume is the scoutmaster of troop 560 in Columbiana. Hume has had eleven Eagle scouts in his troop during the last three years Troop 560 has 36 boys.

Some service projects completed by the Columbiana scouts during the past year have been erecting street signs in the city of Columbiana, moving over 100 years of newspaper files from the county courthouse to a permanent resting place in the county library, and taking care of the shrubbery around the courthouse.

The next big service project that Troop 560 wishes to undertake will be numbering the houses in Columbiana.

Last summer troop 560 took a tour of the East covering eleven states, Canada and Washington D.C. The 3,120 mile trip took 16 days to complete. The scouts visited historical sites, shrines, ball parks and other points of interest.

Danny Goggins is the scoutmaster of troop 548 in Alabaster. Outdoor activities for troop 548 have many and varied. Last winter the Alabaster scouts participated in the Vulcan District camporee at Tanniehill State Park. The boys attended summer camp at Camp Sequoia near Talladega last summer. Other weekend trips included trips to Canyonland Park near Ft. Payne, and an excursion to Cumberland Caverns and Fall Creek Falls near McMinnville, Tenn.

The highlight of the year for troop 548 came last summer when Goggins and assistant Scoutmaster Dan Gillis took the senior scouts on a two week canoe trip in the Canadian north woods. The scouts traveled from a canoe base in Ely, Minn.

Working on the city's old train depot was a special service project of troop 559 in Montevallo. When Montevallo's old train depot was moved from the tracks to its present site in the city park, the scouts joined with other civic groups in restoring the building.

Giving the structure a thorough cleaning was the first order of business and troop 559 volunteered to do the job. Many mothers thought that their sons looked like coal miners after the task was completed.

Troop 559 scoutmaster Herbert Milstead commented that troop 559 has also had the usual campouts that accompany scouting. He told the Reporter that the unit will recharter again this month and he plans an enrollment drive for the troop.

Scoutmaster Stephen Jernigan has recently reorganized Calera troop 530. The unit was reactivated last December. The new group was started with only two boys, but had grown to 14 members in a span of five weeks. A membership drive is underway for more boys who want to join the Calera troop.

Jernigan tells that he anticipates an active troop. He is now teaching the scouts basic skills needed in order to earn the various Scout badges and skill awards.

Troop 530 has a Boy Scout bus and Jernigan is planning the unit's first campout shortly.

Jernigan is also the packmaster of newly revitalized pack 530 in Calera. Mrs. S.A. Jernigan serves as den coach. Other leaders of pack 530's four dens include Jean Holcombe, Lalia Horton, Gail Beasley, Earl Beasley, Ernistine Miller and Hazel Ryan.

Jernigan plans a rocket derby for pack 530 in March and a Pinewood derby in April. The 28 cubs in pack 530 will participate in these events.

Bob Hume of Columbiana also serves the dual scoutmaster- cubmaster role. Hume heads pack 560. Pack 560 consists of two dens in Columbiana and one in Shelby. The cub unit has 21 boys.

Bill Allen is the cubmaster of pack 559 of Montevallo. Den leader Mrs. CArol Thompson told the Reporter that pack 559 has 28 members, three dens and a Webelos den. Pack 559 has cubs from Pea Ridge, Dogwood and Wilton.

Past activities of the Montevallo pack include a Thanksgiving church program and collecting for needy families at Christmastime.

On tap for the Montevallo cubs is a pinewood derby, a famous person's banquet and a March walk-a-thon.

hat much of the fee would be sed to finance the candidate's ampaign, so that he would not e losing the fee but saving it.

"The candidates hate to pay ut their own money for ualifying fees and go out to eat the bushes, hoping ightning will strike their pponent on election day," oke Jones. He admitted that erhaps it might take a fluke to in most any county office for Republican, but that this ear may be different.

Jones showed that many of he county's new residents are epublicans or independents, d that a strong candidate uld mean more than party ffiliation. He opined that atergate should not hurt the epublicans any more than ecent disclosures have amaged state Democrats.

Danny Cooper gave an verview of GOP party rength in the new legislative istricts. Several GOP members greed with him when he tated that the three-way split hould help Republicans unning for state house and enate seats. He noted that heir party strength in Chilton ounty could carry District 53, which includes Montevallo, Pea Ridge, and vicinity. He uggested that GOP support to he east and west might also ive the Democrats a struggle n the other two districts.

Chairman Jones spoke of he necessity of a strong wo-party system. "Shelby ounty is the prime example of what a one-party system is ike." He stated that "We eeded a strong Republican arty in the last presidential lection rather than those fifty f sixty lawyers who were out o re-elect the President."

The committee decided to old a party primary rather han to hold a mass meeting to ominate candidates. Few GOP andidates have announced ntentions to run at this time, ut they have until March 1 to ualify.

Phillip May of the state epublican committee spoke o the group about state inances and party policy. He "Shelby County is lucky his year in that it has a chance f having representatives from hree districts in the egislature."

The city apartment dweller was planting a garden for the first time. "When the seeds sprout, how can I tell the flowers from the weeks?" he asked his friend. "Pull them all out," replied his friend. "The ones that come up again are the weeks."

MOTHER SHARES MOMENT OF HONOR - - Mrs. L.H. Ellis (center), Columbiana, enjoys the spotlight with her daughters (l-r), Mrs. Louise Ellis Crammer and Mrs. Evelyn Ellis Mullen of Dothan, as they are honored as the University of Montevallo's 1974 Alumni of the Year. The sisters are co-directors of the women's division of City National Bank in Dothan. They served for many years in the Dothan public school system until their retirement in 1972. Daughters of the late Judge Handy Ellis who was a noted state legislator and Lt. Governor of Alabama during the mid-1940's, Mrs. Crammer and Mrs. Mullen were honored at Saturday's annual College Night - Homecoming festivities on the Montevallo campus.

State Commission - -

Women's group holds hearing

The Alabama Women's Commission will hold a public hearing for seventh congressional district residents on Saturday, March 2 in Tuscaloosa. The hearing is scheduled to be held at the City National Bank of Tuscaloosa, from 9 a.m. until 12 noon.

The hearing, first of several planned to be held throughout the state, will give women of the seventh district the opportunity to express their opinions and concerns to a panel of Women's Commission members and legislative delegates.

Dean Margaret Sizemore is chairman of the Commission.

Mrs. Peggy Hooks, the appointee to the Commission from the seventh congressional district, will serve as chairman of the hearing. Leaders of organizations and individuals living in the district wishing to be included on the agenda should write to Mrs. Peggy Hooks, c/o City National Bank P.O. Box 2509, Tuscaloosa, Alabama 35401. Counties making up the seventh district are Bibb, Chilton, Choctaw, Dallas, Greene, Hale, Marengo, Perry, Shelby, Sumter, Tuscaloosa and precincts 1,2 and 4 of Jefferson County.

The Commission is composed of ten members appointed by Governor George Wallace, three members of the House of Representative, appointed by the Speaker of the House and two members of the Senate appointed by the President pro tem of the Senate.

Act No. 1937, passed by the legislature during the 1971 regular session created the Commission, but it was during the 1973 legislature before they appropriated the money to fund the commission.

The Commission was established to be a continuing vehicle for the determination of effective policy and legislation in the areas which will affect Alabama's women. It's purpose is to study the status of women in this state and make recommendations to the Governor and Legislature for constructive action in the following areas: public and private employment policies and practices; labor laws dealing with hours, wages and working conditions; legal rights and responsibilities; policies and practices with regard to education, counseling and job training; citizen volunteers; and home and community.

News and views from Westover

by Mrs. Elsie Jones

Probably the best news for a lot of people is that the trucks are again running and that gasoline and other necessities are becoming available again. The sun is shining out and we can turn down our heaters a bit and conserve some energy there, also.

The one thing which is becoming more and more apparent is the flood of political aspirants with their promises, promises, promises. I hope that each of our citizens will think that "I" am one person and that "I" am entitled to think and vote as I choose to vote and let the dominant influence upon you be, "What is best for me, my family, and my community?" We are in a strategic position now that we are in the midst of activities which will promote much interest and growth in our vicinity. We are going to have to face these facts with much clear and unbiased thinking. I trust that we shall consider these candidates carefully and say "What do you mean to do that will help us?"

I am very grateful for the response which has been given to the organizing of the Historical Society for Shelby County. Everyone is eligible to become a member, and if I can answer any questions for any of you about it, all you have to do is call me. We do have many things of interest in our County which we would like to preserve and leave as a heritage to our future generations. My phone number is 678-6528, and I shall appreciate a call from you. I have met Mr. Penhale and he is a very enthuriastic young man and he deserves our support.

Mrs. Velma Shaw has returned home from the Eye-Foundation where she underwent eye surgery. I understand that her condition is satisfactory.

We have another new grandbaby in our community. She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. David Eggler, and the granddaughter of Mr. and Mrs. George Eggler. Her birthdate is January 6, and she has been named Kimerly Ann (called Kim), she was born at Shelby Memorial Hospital. She has a sister named Becky.

Mrs. Sarah Eggler continues to be on the sick list since her accident while working at the Community Center for the Senior Citizens.

The courses will be taught one night each week from 7-9 p.m. for periods of eight to ten weeks.

UM ETV shows expansion

Special to the Reporter

Educational television at the University of Montevallo has come of age.

First established in 1970, the Montevallo center is today recognized as one of the outstanding TV centers in the state. Some half- dozen accomplishments account for this increasing recognition.

The Montevallo center recently received color equipment, making it the first color ETV studio in Alabama. With color equipment the center plans to produce specials and documentaries in the near future.

A series of science programs featuring Robert Lightfoot, and entitled Upper Science Series was recorded and broadcast last year. It tied for first place in state wide competiton among programs produced for in-school viewing. This series will run for two more years before being updated.

The Montevallo center is currently producing a lower elementary science series for in-school programming. Included in this series will be muppets, experiments, demonstrations, and special effects for the entertainment and education of students at the fourth grade level.

UMETV occasionally tapes basketball games for statewide playback. The sports programs feature Steve Huffstutler and Leon Davis.

Charles Dickens' A Christmas Carol was read by W.T. Chichester. This was filmed for holiday season viewing. It will be repeated during the Christmas season for an indefinite number of showings.

The UM TV center is under the direction of Karl Perkins who joined the UM faculty in 1970. Larry Smith, assistant director and Ray Sosa, engineer, joined the staff in 1972.

With the acquisition of new equipment, center personnel expect to make great strides and receive additional recognition by being the only ETV center in Alabama with the capabilities of fiiming documentaries and specials in color.

In the Circuit Court of Shelby County, Alabama
TO: The following described land: The E½ of SW¼ of Section 6, Township 20, Range 2 West, Shelby County, Alabama; Birmingham Coal, Coke and Iron Company, a corporation, or a dissolved corporation, and the unknown stockholders of Birmingham Coal, Coke and Iron Company; and the following named persons, or, if deceased, their heirs or devisees; Addie B. Peck, John E. Peck, Robert G. Thatch, John B. Bishop, and all parties who, unknown to plaintiffs, claim an interest in or to the above described property.

Take notice that Harris M. Gordon and Clarice White Luck have this day filed their verified complaint in said Court against the above named defendants and against any and all persons claiming any title to, interest in, encumbrance upon the above described real estate or any part thereof or interest therein, and against all other persons, and against said lands for the purpose of establishing the title of said lands in the said Harris M. Plaintiffs allege in said complaint that the title to said lands stands in the name of the plaintiffs on the records in the office of the Judge of Probate of Shelby County, Alabama, and said complaint further alleges that plaintiffs claim title to said lands through and by virtue of deeds recorded in Deed Book 226, Page 364, Deed Book 226, Page 679, Deed Book 231, Page 112, Deed Book 151, Page 233 and through the Will of Paul O. The plaintiffs and their predecessors in title have assessed said real estate in the Office of the Tax Assessor of Shelby County, Alabama, and paid the taxes on said real estate for each years and that no one else has paid the taxes on said real estate for said period of time except the plaintiffs and their predecessors in title and that no one has been in possession of said lands or any part thereof since 1931, except the plaintiffs and their predecessors in title.

Plaintiffs further allege in said complaint that after making diligent search and inquiry, plaintiffs' only information of the above defendants is:

That plaintiffs after most reasonable and diligent search and inquiry were unable to locate the following named persons to determine whether or not they are living or dead, and if living, what their ages and addresses are at the present time, and if deceased, the names, ages and addresses of their heirs or devisees, and that the same are unknown to the plaintiffs, said persons being as follows: Addie B. Peck, John E. Peck, Robert G. Thatch, John B. Bishop, and that plaintiffs after most diligent search and inquiry were unable to locate the address of Bimringham Coal, Coke and Iron Company and were unable to find out if they are a corporation or partnership and if they are still in operation or if dissolved or discontinued, the plaintiffs were unable to ascertain the names, addresses and ages of the trustees or stockholders or partners at the time of liquidation or dissolution of said corporation or partnership, as the case might have been, and the same are unknown to the plaintiffs; and that the names, ages and addresses of any other parties who, unknown to plaintiffs, may claim an interest in or to the above described property, are unknown.

It is, therefore, ordered by the undersigned Register that publication of this notice be made in the Shelby County Reporter, a newspaper published and having a general circulation in Shelby County, Alabama, once a week for four consecutive weeks, and that all those to whom this notice is addressed and any and all persons claiming any title to, interest in or lien or encumbrance upon, the above described real estate, or any part thereof, or any interest therein, be and they are hereby required to plead, answer to demur to the complaint in this cause within the time required by law, and not later than April 3, 1974.

REMEMBER WHEN? - - Winters weren't always as warm as the winter we're having this year. George Starcher contributes this picture he took of college students near Montevallo in the early 1950's.

Church remodels house

Under construction since last summer, the Mary Forbes House in Montevallo is now remodeled and in use. Sponsored by the Presbyterian church, the Forbes house serves the students of the University of Montevallo.

The Forbes House is open to all university students for meetings or get- togethers. Application forms for reserving a meeting place are avilable at the house.

The house has been completely rebuilt. There is a large meeting and recreation area in the area in the building as well as other smaller rooms. The kitchen area has been redone so that groups or individuals can prepare meals.

The Presbyterian Synod Committee on Campus Christian Life donated roughly $30,000 for remodeling the Forbes House. An air conditioning system for the student center was purchased by the First Presbyterian Church of Montevallo.

The Presbyterian student group, the Westminster Fellowship, meets at the Forbes house at 5 p.m. on Tuesday night. Mickey Duke, minister of the Second Presbyterian Church of Birmingham, meets with the group.

Jack Owen to seek re-election to PSC

C.C. (Jack) Owen has announced that he intends to qualify to seek re-election to his position on the Alabama Public Service Commission.

Owen said that he would run on his record of protecting the interests of the people of Alabama in matters of rates and of insuring the public of adequate supplies of elecricity and natural gas.

"Much has been said about the energy crisis," Owen said, "but the people of Alabama are fortunate indeed. There is no shortage of electric power or of natural gas for heating our homes in Alabama, and I don't foresee any. There has even been some talk about Alabama coming to the aid of some of her less fortunate neighbors in the supply of electric power. This is fine so long as the needs of Alabama citizens are taken care of first."

"Despite continuing inflation, Alabama electric, gas, and telephone rates are among the lowest in America. Actually electric rates in Alabama are 17 percent below the average for the nation, and the cost per kilowatt hour of electricity is lower than it was in 1942," Owen said.

TEACHERS BOARD BUSES - - Due to the gas shortage, Shelby County teachers had to travel to the teachers' meeting however they could manage. Many teachers were forced to ride to Columbiana on School buses. Some came to the February 7 meeting in newly-formed carpools. But teachers must meet, whether there is gas or not.

Busloads arrive--

Teachers hold meeting

Shelby County's teachers met Thursday, February 7th, for their regular monthly meeting. Following a musical and film program, the Shelby County Education Association handled routine business and discussed the gas crisis and its impact on the county schools.

Superintendent Elvin Hill announced that in all likelihood he will be a candidate for re-election for the office of Superintendent of Education.

Teachers from several schools felt the energy crunch this week, causing them to come to the teachers meeting in school buses. Several busloads of faculty members from more distant schools were seen getting onto or off of school buses at the meeting. A number of teachers mentioned that they had formed car pools to get to school and to the teachers meeting.

Hill commented that the bus drivers had reported no discipline problems with their busloads of teachers. He added that the gas situation for the county buses has not yet reached a critical stage. While there are no assurances, "We're hoping we won't have to turn out school, since it would have to be made up in summer or the spring holidays, " stated Hill.

The teacher conclave was entertained by the chorus from Thompson Middle School under the direction of Carlton Reese. The group sang a variety of tunes including "America the Beautiful," "You're a Grand Old Flag," "Oh Happy Day," "Zip-a-Dee Dee-Dah," and others. A film was shown next, entitled "Eye of the Storm, which concerned prejudice in a third-grade classroom.

In the business portion of the meeting, Danny O. Goggins of Helena Junior High gave a report about a teacher convention held recently in Mobile. Other reports dealt with the educational association's state constitutional convention and donations to AEA's political affiliate. The group voted to table discussion of a change in monthly paydays until the next meeting on March 8th.

UM to host Industry Day

Stephen McDaniel, of Alpha Kappa Psi, at University of Montevallo, announces that Industry Day will be held on April 16. This is the day in which representatives from various Alabama Industries are invited to set up exhibits and participate in seminars on the Montevallo campus.

The day will start with a meeting of area businessmen and students, with guest speakers discussing the relationship between business and the economy. After lunch, students will visit the exhibits which businessmen will provide.

The day is being sponsored by the professional business fraternity at U.M. Members of the fraternity are visiting various industries and businesses to invite them to participate in the event.

McDaniel has named Anthony Holmes, chairman of Industry Day. Holmes will be assisted by Richard Prince of Selma, Jerry Yarbrough of Maylene, Barney Finlen of Homewood, and Danny Gallups of Wilsonville.

Firms interested in taking part are asked to call Anthony Holmes at 665-1038 or Richard Prince at 665-4996 in Montevallo.

Industry Day will take place on April 16, in the college Gym.

"SMILE, COACH" - - Tommy Martin, who teaches at Columbiana Middle School, walks into the meeting. All of the county teachers are required to attend. Some like it; some hate it; but most of them accept it as part of the job. The programs maintain a variety to keep interest in the regular meetings.

THE ROOKIES - - Deetsie Spires at Chelsea School joins the throng of other first- year teachers on their way into the meeting. Maybe she's wondering what will happen inside, or maybe she's planning for tomorrow's class. Whatever the case, a teacher's life is a busy one.

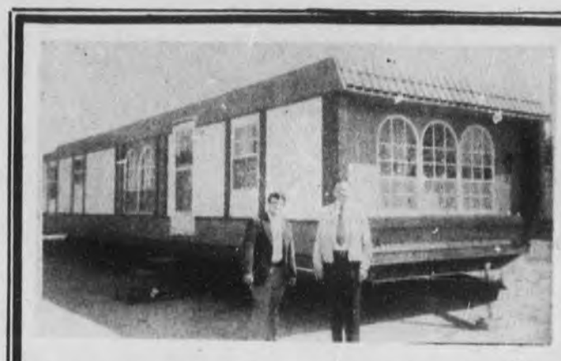
KC profits hit new high



Kimberly-Clark Corporation announced preliminary earnings for 1973 of $77.1 million, or $3.31 a share, a 39 percent increase over the $55.6 million or $2.39 a share earned in 1972. The 1973 figures are before an extraordinary gain of $4.8 million.

Sales increased from $1.0 billion to $1.2 billion. Sales of $50 million for Spruce Falls Power and Paper Company, Limited are included for the first time in the 9173 figures.

Darwin E. Smith, Chairman, reported that "During the fourth quarter, operations outside the U.S. led the way in improved profits; U.S. paper and forest products also increased. U.S. consumer and service products earnings trailed last year.

"Business at the present time is strong in all major areas of the company's business, except for moderate weakening in the market for lumber.

"While we have been faced with a tight supply situation, we believe that our raw material and energy problems are manageable.

February--It isn't so bad after all!

by Mildred White Wallace

February, the shortest month in the calendar year, always seems to get a black eye from everyone. "I hate February" is a common expression and almost a unanimous one. Let's see if the name has anything to do with its unpopularity.

February gets its name from Fabruus, the god of the lower regions -- which naturally, is a bad start to begin with as the Romans identified him as Pluto -- ruler of the lower world. However, we have the consolation of knowing that it is the shortest month and we will have two days less unpleasant to live through.

Another rendition of the origin of February is more pleasant to contemplate -- Fabruus was, according to early records, an epithet for a very agreeable little god named Faunus, the God of Faithfulness who dwelt in the hills and woodlands and was sometimes identified with Pan -- a very charming little god indeed who piped his way through the woods and up and down the streams and who had all the birds and animals following him and his music.

So, Fabruus isn't so bad after all, for it is the "go-between" winter and the "Good Old Summer Time"!

Personal mention

Mr. and Mrs. W.R. Glenn Jr. entertained their son Bruce on his ninth birthday with a stag dinner party last Wednesday evening at Myrt's Cafe. Bruce was allowed to select his guests, (we noticed he did not choose to have any girls around- This situation will, of course, change within the next few years) plan his menu, and have the use of the private dining room. When we peeked in on the Lilliputian group we saw the host, Bruce-reading the menu, and his guests, Jeff Jones, Greg Sigle, Greg Garrett, Don Phillips, Ashley Phillips, Russell Walker and Jason Head throughly enjoying the festivities of this unforgettable birthday anniversary.

As we stood watching them we wished we could be assured that these young Americans, who will be our leaders in many walks of life, in the years to come, might always be as happy and carefree as they were on the evening of Feb. 6, 1974.

The Boy Scouts and their Scoutmaster Bob Hume were honor guests at the First Baptist Church Sunday morning at the 11 o'clock hour of worship. Eagle Scouts were presented and a brief resume of the work having been done by the scouts in Columbiana was given by recently awarded Beaver Scout Bob Hume.

Next Sunday, February 17, the United Methodist Church of Columbiana will celebrate Boy Scout Sunday. The boy scouts of Troop 560 will be in charge of the eleven o'clock worship service and their scoutmaster, Robert A. Hume will bring the message of the morning. Rev. Lamar Davis, pastor of the church, cordially invites everyone to attend this special service.

An interesting phone message came in the office after the purge of the poll list appeared last week, from a citizen who protested against being included with those who have ceased to exist in this world. He says he is "not dead--in fact he is very much alive" and no doubt he will prove it when he shows up at his polling place to cast his vote.

Mistakes will happen-We advise this very much alive gentleman to get in touch with the Board of Registrars and let them get this matter straightened out. Ghost appearances really don't count.

'Quack-quack,' says Pvt. Duck

Did you know that we had in our county the following persons whose names, have at times, caused a bit of explaining? For instance, there is a Billy Graham who resides on Calera Route; a Donald Duck who served through with the U.S. Marines and had quite a few interesting experiences while getting all set in the Navy routine; and a Peter Gunn.

Donald Duck seems to have had more difficulty than the rest in convincing the Navy personnel that his name was really Donald Duck. He quickly acquired the nick-name of "Quack- Quack", he says -- and ordered to "get into trunks and start swimming" he did so and soon was swimming around as naturally as any self respecting Duck should.

This is the second year running that The Living Bible has soared into the rarified number one best seller slot.

One million copies were sold in October and another million went out in November; and a half million by the end of December. According to Dr. Kenneth Taylor, publisher, 7,000,000 copies were sold during 1973. The total Living Bible sales adds up to a staggering 13½ million volumes since it was first published in late 1971. Public acceptance by more than 13 million people foretells continued supremacy for The Living Bible. Dr. Taylor says that the average person's need to understand the Bible has contributed to the phenomenal sale of this translation written into understandable contemporary language.

How will fuel shortage affect today's youths?

A fellow craftsman from another state writes as follows:

"We wonder if the young drivers will know what to do with themselves this winter? There are too many youths he said who have never had a shortage of anything, except maybe trips to the woodshed -- and we figure if they can take a cold floor in the morning, and will drink hot water in the milk for breakfast to get warm, will not watch TV to save on electricity, will get fighting mad if the government tries to take away or register their guns, and will get into politics and business to get rid of our shortage- -' country should be fairly secure. They demonstrated in war for us to get out, so we wonder if they will panic and demonstrate because of this energy shortage? Will they blame the government and parents? Or will they learn from all this and use their education and put it to work? It should be an interesting winter!"

Orphan estate seeks heirs

A genealogist handling an "orphan estate" valued at about $7,000 is searching in northeast and central Alabama for the daughter of John and Belinda (nee Baker) Bradley whose name is Janie (or Gennie) Bradley Lester, or her children, if she is deceased to share in the small fortune.

If any member of the Bradley or Lester families in Shelby County want further information regarding this estate or these families write to Gordon L. Cox, probate genealogist, 302 West Elm St., Tucson, Ariz. He is searching for heirs to the above inheritance.

Counties mentioned where known members of these families once resided include Calhoun, Cherokee, Jefferson.

The communique we have received says: "Janie Bradley Lester appears to have had at least two sons by her marriage to Lester. Her children, if they can be located, would appear to have an interest in the estate of their mother, Janie or Gennie, deceased. If both Janie and her children are deceased, their descendants would be entitled to share in the tidy sum".

Miss McGuffie honored with bridal shower

Mrs. Edward Smith and Mrs. J.O. Page were co-hostesses and assisted in serving.

'You can make it without gasoline'

Lt. James Edwards of the Shelby County sheriff's department was reassuring everybody in the courthouse last week about the gasoline shortage. He says that his great grandfather, Isom Edwards, never burned a gallon of gasoline in his life and he lived to be more than 90 years old. Edwards smiled and said that proves you can make it through life without gasoline.

This drew quite a laugh from bystanders, who know how much gasoline Lt. Edwards must use each week as he makes his rounds chasing assorted lawbreakers, searching for lost people in the woods, and even helping out a newspaper editor whose fan belt flipped on a lonely stretch of road.

It's almost a sure bet that Isom Edwards did not get around as much as his great grandson does. He lived out most of those 90 years on his farm in Chilton County near the Shelby County line.

LT. JAMES EDWARDS

Boll weevils are sleeping through mild winter

Alabama's mild winter weather is helping east the energy crisis but there are some harmful effects, too.

Alabama hasn't had enough cold weather to date, to reduce significantly the number of boll weevils that went into hibernation last fall. It takes cold weather, below ten degrees for at least two consecutive days, to reduce the number of over- winter boll weevils.

Under normal conditions, cold weather reduced the over wintered population of boll weevils by 40 to 55 percent .

Although there hasn't been sufficient cold weather, this doesn't mean that Alabama cotton farmers will have a tremendous number of over-wintered boll weevils this spring.

Last fall, in order to pick as much cotton as possible, growers continued their in-season insect control program later than usual and, in many cases, applied one of two applications for diapausing weevils. Therefore, the number of weevils going into hibernation for the winter was reduced.

Plans for this spring call for monitoring the number of weevils coming out of hibernation. The monitoring will be done by Auburn University's Extension service.

Cotton growers will be informed.

THOUGHT FOR THE WEEK

Every tomorrow has two handles: we can take hold by the handle of anxiety or by the handle of faith.

Alabaster Rotarians to raise money for Y

The Alabaster Rotary Club met Thursday, February 7 for their weekly meeting in Alabaster. According to Jim Campbell, club treasurer, the Rotarians are planning fund raising activities and having a number of civic-oriented programs.

Campbell stated that the Rotary Club is discussing plans for raising money for the Shelby County YMCA, which has its headquarters in Alabaster. He said that at present the club has not decided upon its method of getting the money.

The club has had several interesting programs recently under the sponsorship of program chairman Garland Horton. Former programs featured the Toastmasters and a speech on recycling trash.

VA gives new aid for college finances

An undertermined number of veterans, wives, widows and children eligible for Veterans Administration educational assistance now have greater latitude in working toward standard college degrees.

Administrator of Veterans Affairs Donald E. Johnson said new regulations allow trainees to pursue, along with regular college curricula, independent courses or other external study programs away from parent campuses.

During October, 1.4 million persons trained under VA's three education programs, including 851,000 at college level, but there is no estimate on the number of current or future trainees who may take advantage of independent study programs.

"For more than 10 years now," Johnson noted, "many colleges and universities have provided external degree programs which usually include classroom instruction both at parent schools and other schools."

"A typical independent study program consists of study in the humanities, social sciences and natural sciences, with the school setting a minimum and maximum time for conpletion," the VA head explained. "The student proceeds at his own pace, returning to the parent school campus only periodically for required workshops or seminars."

VA will pay allowances to trainees pursuing independent study if courses are offered by accredited schools approved by their respective state approving agencies. Courses must lead to, or be creditable toward standard college degrees.

The agency determines allowances due trainees on the same basis as other college degree programs, with colleges expected to evaluate external courses in semester or quarter hours or their equivalent, and prescribe program completion dates.

Johnson said trainees attending schools which do not use a standard measurement of credit hours will be paid actual cost of courses, not to exceed $110 monthly.

Full details on independent study programs are avilable at all VA offices.

Area students participate in denistry day

Two Shelby County students, Don Preble of Montevallo and Clark Browne of Vincent, were participants in the University of Alabama at Birmingham (UAB) School of Denistry's recent annual Student Clinic Day.

The competition, held annually in conjunction with the meeting of the School of Denistry Alumni Association, provides an opportunity for students to demonstrate special knowledge in various aspects of denistry and to report on advances in their profession.

First place honors in the competition went to Jeff Carden of Mobile. He won the $100 first-place prize for an exhibit demonstrating an electrical phenomenon in metallic dental restorations.

Second place went to William F. Vann, Jr., of Headland, with an exhibit showing a new diagnostic test for diabetes.

"Cupid"

By: Helen Foster Lewis

Today is the day that Cupid shoots his love arrow, into the hearts of the people, who are willing to let it come in, whether it be young or old.

This day comes but once a year and what is that day, but Valentine's Day. The day you give or receive something special, from that certain someone. Or maybe a day for you, to remember friends or make new ones. Whatever the feeling may be, I hope something good happens, to bring people closer together, and wouldn't it be nice if that feeling could always be present, within ourselves.

So, Cupid do your best and Happy Valentine's Day everyone.

Two journalists named into press hall of honor

Alabama's prioneer journalist and one of its most revered publishers were inducted into the Alabama Newspaper Hall of Honor today (February 8, 1974).

In special ceremonies at the 103rd annual convention of the Alabama Press Association in Huntsville, the late Thomas Eastin, Publisher of the St. Stephens Halcyon, the state's first newspaper, and the late John Glenn Stanley, Publisher of the award- winning Greenville Advocate, were recognized for their contributions to the journalism profession and to their communities.

The two became the 33rd and the 34th Alabama newsmen to be nominated to the Hall

The Hall of Honor was established by newspapers of the state in 1959 as a means of recognizing outstanding former journalists.

Announcement of the nominations was made by Mirl Crosby, Publisher, The Dothan Eagle. Crosby is chairman of this year's HOH Selection Committee.

Serving with him are John Bloomer, Managing Editor, The Birmingham News, and Mrs. Marcia Sears, Editor, The Shelby County Reporter.

Plaques honoring the 32 previous nominees are hung in the North Reading Room of the Ralph Brown Draughon Library at Auburn University, permanent home of the Hall.

The first of the 1974 nominees, Thomas Eastin, came to Alabama from Mississippi with the military in the War of 1812. He was closely associated with Gen. Andrew Jackson at St. Stephens in Washington County after the Battle of Horse Shoe Bend.

Eastin established The Halcyon in March of 1815. It was one of a few newspapers published in the territory and the first one published in Alabama.

moved from St. Stephens to Cahaba, Eastin moved his press to Greensboro and founded the Greensboro Halcyon, the first newspaper to be printed in Hale County.

In addition to Eastin's remarkable career as an Alabama journalist, he also contributed his time and energies to matters relating to civic welfare.

Available records show that he served as Justice of Peace in St. Stephens; that he, with fellow citizens, sought to have St. Stephens made a Port of Delivery so acquisition of badly needed imported merchandise could be obtained more easily; and that he participated in a petition to Congress which resulted in the Alabama- Mississippi line being drawn so that Washington County would be part of Alabama.

Further, as territorial printer, he performed important services to the stateby printing documents such as the Journal of the Legislative Council of the Alabama Territory and the U.S. Laws for 1816, 1817 and 1818.

The second of the Hall of Honor nominees, John Glenn Stanley, has been described as the epitomy of all that is good in a weekly newspaper editor and publisher.

Stanley spent a lifetime at The Greenville Advocate making his newspaper one of the best in the state and giving his city a quality of life that could not be surpassed.

He was the originator of a move to name Greenville the Camellia City and for having the camellia named the state flower.

In civic service, he had no peer. Stanley was a charter member and a Past President of the Greenville Lions Club; a member of the Butler County Board of Education; a member of the Greenville Rotary Club; Secretary of the Butler County Democratic Executive Committee; Past Chairman of the Official Board of the First Methodist Church; a life member of that same board and a member of the VFW, the American Legion and of the Veterans of World War One.

Stanley also wielded a strong voice in the Alabama Press Association. He was a constant fighter for upgrading the strength and character of the organization and he served as its president in 1962-1963.

THOMAS EASTIN

JOHN GLENN STANLEY

The Halcyon's first issue contained the text of the peace treaty between this country and England. It is of further historical significance because it contains the earliest records of events in the state.

Eastin changed the name of The Halcyon in 1819 to Halcyon and Tombeckbe Public Advertiser. The newspaper continued to be published in St. Stephens until 1822.

Bloodmobile drive in Siluria area may provide community protection

Siluria area residents soon will have the opportunity to gain total Red Cross blood protection for their families for a year, and to help make certain blood will be there when needed in Shelby Memorial Hospital.

This opportunity is the scheduled Red Cross Bloodmobile visit to the Shelby YMCA at Siluria Thursday, February 21. The hours will be from 11 a.m. to 2 p.m. and 3 to 6 p.m.

Red Cross donors are guaranteed they and members of their immediate families will receive all the blood needed for medical treatment for the next 12 months, without any charge for the blood itself. Blood given through Red cross is the gift of the donor to the patient who receives it. Red Cross never charges for the blood itself, passing along only the actual cost of collecting, processing and distributing blood to participating hospitals.

The Red Cross guarantee covers the donor, spouse, minor children, parents, parents- in-law, grandparents and grand- parents- in-law.

Shelby Memorial Hospital receives total support for its blood needs from Red Cross. Last May 27 when savage tornadoes struck Shelby and Bibb Counties, the hospital's blood reserves soon neared exhaustion because of the large number of injured persons brought there.

A quick call to the Red Cross Blood Center at Birmingham brought a rush shipment of the blood needed, with a Red Cross staff representative to make certain every further need would be met.

Blood given through Red Cross undergoes around 20 tests to make certain that it will be good medicine for the patient who receives it. One of the most important is a highly effective test for presence of traces of hepatitis, a painful and crippling blood disease.

"Please be a blood donor at Shelby YMCA Thursday, February 21, for your family, and for your neighbors in Shelby Memorial Hospital," urges Frances Wilson, a leader in the blood drive.

Purples win 1974 College Night

PURPLE VICTORY -- Purples whoop it up for a 1974 victory in a play called "Freak Show." Costumes wild and exotic with stage scenery at a minimum. Frantic action and constant contrasts were the trademark of this year's winning show. Opera singers, Indians, pop musicians, rabble rousers - all these and more were featured in "Freak Show."

P V 7 4

"BEAT 'EM, PURPLES" - - Lucky Lady the Purple Cow feels the beat as Purple drummers set the pace for College Night. Drums and cheers give a rousing opening to the annual competition. Without the drummers on both sides, College Night just wouldn't sound the same.

'Freak Show' overcomes Golds

The Purples derailed their Gold team opposition in annual College Night competition at the University of Montevallo this week end, reclaiming the top spot they lost last year in the traditional "clash of colors."

In winning, the Purples continue a see-saw battle that has seen the College Night crown swapped back and forth between the two forces for the past four years. The win also gives the Purples a two-win edge 28-26 in the total count of College Night victories.

The outcome was announced Saturday night after completion of a series of competitive activities extending from the theatre stage to the field of athletics. It climaxed a fiesta- like period that held sway on the Montevallo campus for three days and nights, and highlighted the day-long round of homecoming festivities Saturday.

A panel of visiting judges rendered their decision on stage productions after the Saturday night finales in Palmer Auditorium, points from all other areas of competition were added in, and the Purples got the nod.

Leading the Purples in their return to the winner's circle were seniors Dru Minton, Warrior, and Bill Meitl, Oakley, Kan.

The Purple stage production entitled "Freak Show" was directed by Larry Snipes a fourth- year speech & theatre major from Tuscaloosa. In a wide open, free- wheeling format, the Purple players this year portrayed the whole of mankind as an actor--- one who, by profession, appears in the role of a character not truly his own.

The implication woven through the play is that an individual's nature is not necessarily the image or character he presents, and that although his outward presentation may be appealing for a while it is not lasting--sooner or later he is cut off.

Heading up the Gold cause this year were seniors Diana Durham, Albany, Ga., and Carmon, Dixiana. Directing the Gold production, "Life Is Living," was senior music major James "Bo" Crowe, Birmingham.

The Golds also produced a "sermon of sorts" this year, keying on the introspection of man and the age-old quest for self. Gold players employed the device of humanizing animals to demonstrate their impression of the general nature of society.

Featured creatures in a classroom scene gave an individualized approach to learning, and their individual natures and limitations characterized their conclusions on education as a whole.

College Night 1974 was dedicated to Dr. Ted Pritchett, associate professor of music at U.M. and chairman of the College Night Committee. Also recognized at the Saturday night finales were Dothan sisters Mrs. Louise Ellis Crammer and Mrs. Evelyn Ellis Mullen, the university's 1974 Alumni of the Year.

GOLDEN LION - - The Golds' play centered around the search for fulfillment in a fantasy world. The Golden Lion, Jennifer (Suzy Wade) laments her ill fortune in her barn stall dormitory room. "Life Is Living" featured a large cast dressed in animal costumes. Monkeys, butterflies, frogs, and grasshoppers played selected roles in the Gold production.

CHEERS - - The Purple and Gold cheerleaders meet on stage to set hearts beating faster with their cheers. At the end of the cheering, each side tries to out-shout the other with a thunder of "PURPLE!" "GOLD!" As spirits rise higher the cheerleaders bring excitement to a fever pitch. With Purple cheerleaders in front and Golds in back, both teams literally set the stage for the Saturday night announcement of winner.

National-Standard shows profit

A 60 percent increase in earnings and 17 percent sales increase were part of the first quarter financial results announced by Board Chairman T.H. Pearce at the National - Standard Company annual stockholders' meeting in Niles, Michigan.

For the three months ended December 31, 1973, net sales were $47,172,733 compared to $40,376,407 for the comparable period a year ago. Earnings were $2,563,616 or $0.59 per share, compared to last year's first quarter earnings of $1,599,373 or $0.37 per share.

National- Standard's wire and metal products divisions operated near full capacity in the first quarter, according to Mr. Pearce, and customer demand continues to remain high in these product lines. There were no serious interruptions due to steel shortages. "In most areas in which we operate, there is a considerable growth potential for us," Pearce said. "This is due to the fact that past modernization programs have put us in a strong competitive position."

Commenting on steel tire cord, Pearce said the Columbiana, Alabama plant operations continueto improve, and are marginally profitable. The English tire cord plant is approaching the break- even point, but the energy and economy problems in England have forced the plant into a reduced operating schedule.

"The steel belted radial tire has grown much faster in the United States than in Europe where it was developed," Pearce stated. One of the major factors holding back U.S. radial tire manufacture is the availability of steel cord, according to Pearce. "What's more, radial truck tire production -- which has barely started -- will require greater tire cord volume than passenger tires."

"For these reasons, we are expanding our tire cord capabilities as quickly as possible," Pearce said. A second domestic tire cord plant -- previously announced -- is in the initial construction phase. A considerable amount of time and effort is being spent on pre- production planning and training in order to minimize start-up costs, according to Pearce.

The Chairman also reported that the sale of the Company's interest in three European affiliates had been concluded.

Regarding research, Pearce said the company is still devoting a major effort to the new metallurgical process called Natalite*, but commercialization was still some time off.

Summarizing, Mr. Pearce told stockholders, "we see no major problems that would deter a continuation of the substantial improvement we have made. Our strong financial position will enable us to continue expansion programs in the basic business and in tire cord where the greatest opportunities exist. Barring unforeseen economic and energy problems, 1974 looks very good."

Montevallo Falcons are now 15-8, finish the season on the road

"Three out of four is a bad way to finish up," commented University of Montevallo head basketball coach Bill Jones this week. He was referring to the Falcon's remaining games in the 1973-74 schedule. Three games are on the road and the fourth is with Southern States Conference powerhouse Athens College.

Jones stated that this year has been a disappointing season, if a 15-8 winning record can be called disappointing. However, the Falcons did boast an 11-2 win/loss tally prior to the University's Christmas break. Most of the Falcon's losses have been only by margins of only a few points.

In a see-saw fashion the Falcons defeated Troy State University 81-76 before a Montevallo crowd on Tuesday, February 29. On Saturday, February 4, Montevallo downed William Carey College 80-75 in Hattiesburg, Miss. and then lost 66-77 to Spring Hill College of Mobile.

The most dynamic win for Montevallo lately came Wednesday Febraury 6, when the Montevallo team came from behind to nip St. Bernard College 96-91 in overtime.

Cris Davis of the Falcons was the hero of the St. Bernard game when he plunged the game into extra minutes by hitting two free throws with no seconds showing on the scoreboard.

The Falcons dominated the overtime after trailing the entire regulation game.

Gerald Douglas led the University of Montevallo scoring against St. Bernard with 32 points. He was followed by Dale Hughey with 16. Teammates Charles Averhart and David Porterfield both shot for eleven points.

The Falcons played Huntingdon College Monday night of this week. Due to press deadlines an account of that contest will not appear in this article.

The final games on the Falcon schedule are a home contest with Athens College this Wednesday night; Livingston, there, on Friday night; and the final game with Tennessee Temple in Chattanooga next Monday night.

The final action for the Falcons will be the Southern States Conference tournament played at Huntingdon College of Montgomery on Feb. 21, 22 and 23.

FALCON ACE - - Gerald Douglass goes high in the air for two points in a recent home game. Dougles led the Falcons against St. Bernard College last Wednesday night, by scoring 32 points.

Coaches plan sports events

A host of county sports activities were set by the Shelby County Coaches and Principal's Association in that organization's monthly meeting last Wednesday night.

The Shelby County junior high and B-team basketball tournament will be hosted at Chelsea Wednesday, Thursday and Friday of this week. In the line up for the first round of the junior high games played on Wednesday will be Chelsea vs. Montevallo, Indian Springs vs. Calera and Vincent vs. Shelby County. The Thompson junior high team was awarded a bye.

The Chelsea B-Team takes on the Montevallo B-Team Wednesday, and Thompson plays Vincent.

The winners of the Calera - Montevallo junior high game will play Thompson at 5:30 p.m. Thursday, and the junior high winners of the Indian Springs- Calera game and the Vincent- Shelby County game will play at 8:30.

On the Thursday night B-team schedule, Shelby County will play the winner of the Montevallo - Chelsea game at 4 p.m., and Indian Springs will play the winner of the Thompson - Vincent contest.

All championship and consolation games will be played Saturday night.

The coaches also set April 5 as the date for the Shelby County football jamboree. The games will be held at the Calera football stadium. The jamboree will start at 7 p.m. and paired teams will play for two quarters.

Montevallo goes up against Vincent, Calera takes on Chelsea and Thompson plays Shelby County in the jamboree.

The Shelby County coaches will play a benefit basketball game to raise money for the American Cancer Society on March 21. Coaches from the east side of the county will play those from the west side.

It was also announced at the coaches meeting that the Montevallo Lions Club will sponsor the Shelby County track meet this spring.

In Shelby County or the Smokies--

Backpacking can be enjoyed by almost anyone

by Rick Moore
Sports Editor

The Boy Scouts of America are celebrating their 64th birthday this month. This brings to mind the less publicised outdoor sports. We may not all have the size or physical agility to play football under the lights before the hometown stands or strip the net on the basketball court, but almost every healthy individual can enjoy the physical sports of hiking, camping, canoeing and the like.

Speaking of outdoor sports and Boy Scouting brings to mind my own cultivation of an outdoor sport which was to be my special passion for many years -- that of backpacking.

Backpacking is not confined to the scouts. Anyone can enjoy hiking, and the sport has undergone a rapid renaissance during the past few years. Anyone who has visited our national parks of forests lately will find that wilderness areas are filled with the pureists who are getting back to nature by sustaining themselves solely on supplies they can carry on their backs. Stores selling outdoor equipment have been doing a booming business in back packs, pack frames, lightweight tents, and the like.

Be Prepared

The old scout motto "be prepared" holds true in the realm of backpacking. One shouldn't attempt to rush into the woods on a high adventure trek without some prior practice and aforethought, just as it would be foolish to plunge headfirst into an icy stream.

My own hiking experiencing while involved in the Boy Scouts were two 70 mile hiking trips along the Appalacian Trail. The section of the trail we traveled was through the Great Smokey Mountain National Park. This segment traverses the highest mountains and travels through some of the most remote sections along the whole 2050 mile Appalacian trail.

Prior to this undertaking each scout and adult leader had to walk a total of at least 100 miles on planned weekend ten-milers and longer hikes. On these shorter trips the group practiced campcraft skills and how to quickly set up camp in the evening as well as getting up in the morning, cooking, and packing everything up in the space of an hour.

The result was a well coordinated trip. We had injuries, lost scouts, or stragglers. We finished the seventy mile walk at 10 in the morning on the fifth day out.

Equipment

The equipment used by backpackers is limited in price only by how much money an individual wishes to spend on it, but it needn't be expensive.

I have used the same inexpensive homemade equipment for many years. Some of the key articles are: homemade packframe weighing only ounces more than the most sophisticated frame on the market, a tent made of heavy gauge polyethelene plastic, a durable Boy Scout Canvas pack, and a large vegetable can -- the kind you find in the trash at school lunchrooms--for cooking. A firestarter made of parafin poured over a coiled piece of cardboard in a cut off milk carton bottom makes a fire starter that will help ignite even the wettest wood.

Enjoyment

The best part of backpacking is the enjoyment that comes with it. Any trail or logging road has the potential of a high adventure when it serves as a hikers footpath. State parks and national forests in this area offer a wide variety of hiking trail possibilities.

If you are the adventuresome type who would like to meet the challenge of a long trip on the Appalachian trail which extends from Maine to Georgia, now is the time to start planning your trip. The Appalachain Trail Conference sells several publications on the trail ahd hiking in general. Detailed trail guides are available as well as a booklet "Lightweight Equipment for Hiking" may be ordered from the conference. Booklets and information may be obtained by writing the Appalachain Trail Conference, 1718 North Street, NW, Washington, D.C., 20036.

SPECTATORS ENJOY GAME - - These students and cheerleaders at the Shelby County High School - Bibb County High School basketball game seem to be enjoying themselves. Four scheduled games remain to be played for the Shelby County Wildcats before the state district play-off games held in West Blocton.

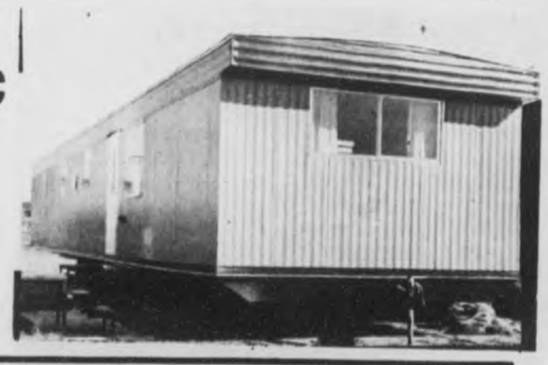
Aaron should set record before hometown crowd

The Atlanta Braves, with the imcomparable Hank Aaron primed to become baseball's all- time home run champion, will lead off their 1974 home schedule with an 11-game stand starting April 8 against the exciting Los Angeles Dodgers.

The Dodgers will be in Atlanta for three more games after that Monday night opener and will be followed by the National League West title-holding Cincinnati Reds in a three- game series and the new-look San Diego Parres for four contests. Opening Night, with several baseball and government dignitaries present, will be dedicated to Aaron.

That means Aaron, who'll be in his 21st and final Major League season at the age of 40, likely will surpass Babe Ruth's 714 record home run total in front of his hometown fans. The Braves open the regular season with a three- gram series at Cincinnati April 4, 6 and 7.

Ticket information may be obtained by calling the Braves' ticket department at (404) 522-7630.



COLLEGE NIGHT ATHLETICS - - A University of Montevallo player (right) scores a touchdown during the annual Purple-Gold football game last Wednesday. This game is one of three athletic contests as part of Montevallo's College Night activities.

YOUTH LEAGUE - - Two youngsters go for the ball in a Montevallo Youth League basketball game last Wednesday. The league is a part of the town's recreation program.

University golf team hits the links

Special to the Reporter

The University of Montevallo golf team, which posted the best athletic record of all university teams last year, is now preparing for the 1974 season in which it should improve on their 18-9 record of 1973.

The only returning letterman is George Walker, a three- letter senior who last year attained All- Conference honors and went on to become first rated in N.A.I.A. District 27.

Although Walker is the only returning letterman, he will not be without help. Among those who will be depended upon heavily are Robbie Tibbs, Terry Reynolds, Alex Morrow, Cal Stanford, and Doug Dortch.

Tibbs is a senior from Hueytown who lettered in both basketball and baseball before turning to golf this year. He is probably one of the most versatile athletes on campus.

Reynolds is a junior transfer student from the University of Western Illinois. Terry has been most impressive in qualifying rounds and will be strong addition to the 1974 team.

Morrow played on the 1968 golf team but has spent most of this time since then in military service. Alex has been a pleasant surprise to all those concerned with the golf team by his consistent play anf ine attitude.

Cal Stanford is a sophomore transfer from Wingate Junior College in North Carolina. Cal is another new face which has livened hopes for this year's golf team. He had the second best scoring average in the four fall matches and is expected to continue this form in the Spring.

Dortch is a sophomore from York but this will be his first year of competition. Doug played junior varsity basketball last year but has decided to devote his energies to golf this year. He will be another new face that will be heavily relied upon.

There are other members of the golf team who deserve recognition here who have worked hard but will perhaps not see as much action as those listed above. Dave Fasler, a Grand Rapids, Mich., sophomore; Charlie Callaghan, a Cheyenne, Wyo., freshman; Richard Duke, a Birmingham junior; Steve Hoffman, a Butler senior; and Bill Null, a Birmingham senior. These men deserve just as much praise as the other six because they have enabled the University golf program to be competitive once again.

There is also another group worthy of mention – those who are not eligible to play this year but who will provide strength in the 9174-75 year. Among these are Bill Conwell, a sophomore from Birmingham; Bill Hairston, a junior from Marion; and Mitch Quinn, a junior from Birmingham.

The 1974 golf team is looking forward to its March 6 opener with Samford and is confident that they will improve on last year's record. The strongest reason behind this confidence is that, for the first time ever, there are six good golfers who may be dependened upon instead of four as has been the problem in the past.

Daytona 500 race fans can buy gas

There is some good news for race fans planning to attend the Daytona 500 stock car race at Daytona Beach, Fla., Sunday, Feb. 17.

Jerry Dorminey, president of Dean Oil company, has made arrangements to have "Dean-O" stations located on Interstate 75 North from Daytona Beach to Atlanta, Ga., open on a 24-hour emergency basis following the famous race.

In addition, Dorminey said that he will have a station open at Commerce, Ga., north of Atlanta, to assist race fans needing gasoline who may be traveling beyond Atlanta into North and South Carolina and Virginia.

"We realize a lot of race fans must return to work on Monday following the face," said Dorminey. "By having stations open every 100 miles along Interstate 75 fans from Alabama, Georgia, Tennessee and the Carolinas should have no trouble. We'll keep them open all night after the race."

Lucas named champ

Mike Lucas of Indian Springs School won the championship of the Southeastern high school chess tournament which was held in Atlanta the first weekend in February.

Lucas and three other ISS students, Steve Knox, Eddy Lyons and Marty Pierson, made up a team whic h placed eighth in the tournament. The team was awarded a trophy.

Knox placed first in the E division and also won a trophy.

The prize awarded to Lucas as champion of the tournament includes an expense- paid trip to New York to compete in the national high school tournament.

Marty Pierson is from Bessemer. The other three participants are from Birmingham.

FFA week starts 16th

Members of the Alabama FFA Association join with over 450,000 other FFA members in the United States in celebrating National FFA Week, February 16-23.

Elton Bouldin, Alabama's youthful FFA President from the Crossville FFA Chapter, announced that "FFA For Tomorrow's Agriculture" has been selected as the theme for National FFA Week activities this year. "Alabama's FFA membership, over 26,000 strong, in more than 347 local chapters of our state, are aiming for something in life", declared Bouldin. "As our official FFA motto proclaims, we are learning, doing, earning, and serving."

National FFA Week always includes George Washington's birthday in observance of his leadership in promoting scientific farming practices.

VOCATIONAL EDUCATION WEEK in Alabama was proclaimed by Governor George C. Wallace to be observed February 10-16. Jimmy Morris, Ohatchee (left) state president, Alabama Vocational Association (AVA) and Randall Peacock, state director, Alabama Chapter, Vocational Industrial Clubs of America (VICA) are interested onlookers.

Banquet

Bobby Blankenship and David Horton were given trophies for being co-captains of the 1973 Calera High School football team and Mike Lewis was honored as team captain.

The 1973 Calera football team has a 9-1 record this season, the best ever in the history of Calera High School.

THE FAMILY LAWYER

Suppose a political activist buys one share of stock in a corporation that makes guns. His purpose is to gain access to a list of shareholders, so he can arouse their opposition to the company's products.

Would the company have to let him see the books?

Most courts faced with this question have said no. True, every stockholder is a co-owner of the corporation. However, say these courts, the relationship is strictly economic, not political. To see the books he must have an economic motive. He must be acting, at least in part, to protect his investment.

The activist shareholder is new but the problem is old: how open should a corporation's books be? Clearly, there has to be some sort of limitation on access. As one judge explained, in barring a stockholder who was "just curious":

"Considering the huge size of many modern corporations and the complicated nature of their bookkeeping, to permit their thousands of stockholders to roam at will through their records would render impossible not only any attempt to keep their records efficiently but the proper carrying on of their businesses."

On the other hand, a stockholder with a legitimate economic motive generally cannot be prevented from seeing the books merely because the management doesn't happen to like him.

One stockholder was refused access to his company's books because he was considered a "troublemaker." He was indeed a troublemaker. But the trouble he wanted to make was getting rid of the management, which he thought was doing a bad job of running the business.

In these circumstances, a court ordered the company to open the books for his inspection. The court said that for a disgruntled investor, throwing the management out was a natural and proper objective.

License required for child care businesses

Licenses are required when persons offer to take care of children. Mrs. Nell Fulton, director of the Shelby County Department of Pensions and Securities, points out that to assure safe and healthy child care, parents should be sure a child care center is licensed before leaving their child there.

More and more women are seeking careers and becoming employed. This is creating an increased demand for adequate child care facilities.

The State Department of Pensions and Securities issues licenses for Day Care Centers as well as Family Day Care Homes for those individuals who wish to care for unrelated children in their own homes.

Alabama State Law, enacted 1971, requires that any person or group of persons, who receive children or arrange for care or placement of one or more children unrelated to the operator shall apply for a license.

The Department of Pensions and Security then examines the premises and investigates the persons responsible for care of children. If, upon such investigation, the Department is satisfied that the facility and the responsible person meets reasonable standards a license is issued designating the number of children to be served at any one time.

The Agency continues supervision of the home to insure that proper standards are met, and to offer consultation to assist the responsible person in meeting and maintaining programs that not only provide adequate physical care of the children but provide social and educational stimulation as well.

Presently there are three licensed day care centers in Shelby County; Green Park South, Siluria Day Care Center and Robbie's Day Care Center. There are also several licensed Family DAy Care Homes, but there continues to be a need for more licensed facilities. Anyone interested in caring for children should contact Shelby County Department of Pensions and Security, 669-2111, Mrs. Fulton said.

Demos to finance rule challenge ads

State Democratic Party Chairman, Bob Vance, said today that the Democratic Party would pay for ads to be placed in Alabama's largest newspapers asking Alabamians to challenge the Democratic Party's Affirmative Action and Delegate Selection Plans.

Vance stated that "This is the first time any political Party has paid to get the people to challenge something the Party has done."

The Affirmative Action Plan and Delegate Selection Plan were adopted by the State Democratic Executive Committee at their meeting in Birmingham last Saturday. The purpose of the Plans is to increase participation by ALL Democrats, especially Blacks, Women and Young People.

Vance said that he thinks the Plans are good ones but that "the people ought to have a chance to say how they feel about them before they become Party law."

The new "Plans" take the place of the McGovern Quota System. Instead of a quota system guaranteeing that a certain number of delegates will be Blacks, Women and Youth, we will be encouraging these groups to try to get themselves elected as delegates to National Conventions, "and to me." Vance said, "this approach is more moderate and more sensible."

County center observing Nat'l vocational week

The Shelby County Area Vocational Center is observing National Vocational Education Week by calling attention to its many programs. Working in conjunction with the county's vocational and technical departments of each high school, the vocational center offers a number of options for its students.

One such opportunity is called the Vocational Intern Program, or VIP. In VIP, students work at part-time jobs in business and industry, having this on-the-job training co-ordinated with their instruction in class. Vocational center director Charles Knowles stated that this program has been well-received by employers and student-trainees alike.

VIP students work in the morning or afternoon and are in class for the rest of the school day. On the job, each student works with one person who is in charge of their training as well as the grading of the student. An instructor from the school periodically checks in at the business to see how the student is progressing. School policy does not encourage the employer to pay the student, but many of them do so.

Knowles said that at present only four vocational areas are represented in the vocational center's VIP program. Horticulture is represented by four Calera girls-- Debra Dawson, Debra Roberts, Jan Clark, and Linda Wilcox, who work alternate days at Jones Flowers in Columbiana.

Two boys from drafting are taking part in the VIP program. Milton Pearson of Shelby County High is working with Modern Handling in Pelham, and Thompson High student Clayton Ellison will begin to work mornings at Moore-Handley.

Five girls in the food education department are working in the cafeterias of their respective high schools. At Vincent's lunchroom is Jeanette Baker. Mary Pearson is learning with Thompson High's cafeteria staff. Marian Mayweather is with Montevallo High, and Delores Woods and Donna Jones are cooking at Calera High School's lunchroom.

Knowles and the vocational center's guidance director, Jimmy Bice, are pleased with the results of the new program. Knowles stated that the VIP system teaches the student more than they could learn as an apprentice and more than they could learn in the classroom alone. He adds that the program is an ongoing thing with more students to be placed at jobs in coming weeks. Students in refrigeration and automotive courses, for instance, will be available for the program very soon.

Allen for date change

A bill to return November 11 for official observance of Veterans Day has been introduced by Alabama's Senator Jim Allen.

Thirty one states have made the change and two had never changed, Senator Allen said. "No other single group of citizens are more deserving of a special day of honor than our nation's veterans. They know that our great American heritage has never been and never will be free of pain, free of struggle and free of individual and collective effort. The least we can do is respect thier wishes and return Veterans Day to November 11", Senator Allen declared.

Jeff State wins all

With the Southeastern AAU Junior Olympic Gymnastics Championship squarely in their sights, Jefferson State's surprising gymnastics team is still sporting a spotless record in meet competition for the season. Their most recent victim was Miss. State College for Women which lost to the Jeff State girls on the first day of February in a match at LeRoy Brown Gym, the Pioneer's home stronghold.

Coach Tom Henderson's Jefferson State Gymnastic team is undefeated through two years of competition having won all of last year's dual competition too.

When is a cord not a cord?

When is a cord, not a cord . . . when it's a firewood cord.

Because of the current energy crisis and scarcity of heating fuels, more prople are buying wood to burn in their fire places.

And, when they buy, they frequently don't know the proper units of measuring wood.

Firewood is usually sold by volume measurement. The basic measure is a cord and a cord is defined as a stack of wood four feet wide, by four feet high by eight feet long.

Since pieces of wood are normally round, this entire volume is not filled by wood. About 70 percent is wood and the rest is air.

Firewood is often sold in units four feet high and eight feet long. This is the so-called firewood cord. It is not a true cord, because the sticks are cut in lengths to fit fireplaces, ranging from 18 to 24 inches, rather than the standard four feet.

Therefore, a firewood cord is equivalent to one-fourth to one-third of a standard cord.

Baby bedbugs

A Mexican rancher was showing a Texas cattleman the progress our good neighbors to the south were experiencing. The Texan refused to be impressed. Texas grass was greener, Texas cattle were fatter, etc. The Mexicans were patient hosts and that night they put a couple of iguanas in their guest's bed. When he turned the covers down he asked what they were. "Mexican bedbugs," they explained. The Texan peered at them for a moment and said, "Well, I'll be damned ... young'uns, too, obviously."

Allen reads to US Senate

Senator Jim Allen has been selected to the yearly honor of reading President George Washington's Farewell Address before the United States Senate on February 18. Selection of Alabama's Junior Senator for this honor was made by Vice President Gerald Ford and announced by Majority Leader Mike Mansfield.

Reading of Washington's Farewell Address has been a tradition in the Senate since 1901.

Seven men arrested in burglary ring

Shelby County Sheriff C. P. "Red" Walker announced Monday that a big burglary ring in Shelby County has been broken.

Walker told reporters Monday that seven men had been arrested and warrants issued for four more in connection with a large-scale theft operation. In all 28 different cases have been charged against the defendants.

Involved in the case were a total of 27 burglaries. Fifteen were in Shelby County, six in the Bessemer area, three in St. Clair County, one in Talladega County and two in Chilton County.

A case has been made in connection with the burglaries against a Walker County man for buying and receiving stolen property.

Sheriff Walker said that the thieves robbed homes from all areas of Shelby County. One was in South Calera, one in Montevallo, two in Elliottsville, three in the Banford-Turner area, one in Pelham, one in Indian Springs, and six in the northeast county area.

Some of the stolen property has been recovered and identified by owners, Walker said. Some of the thefts dated back to last November.

Arrested in the case by Monday afternoon were Troy Thrasher, Jerry Thrasher, Carl Brantley, Dewey Pendley, Donnie Vines, Ray Carroll and Johnny McSheradon. All were Bessemer men except Pendley, who is a resident of Shelby County.

The burglary ring, was cracked by solving two breakins in the Banford-Turner area, Walker said. The Sheriff explained that Shelby County sheriff's officers found a jail release slip on the site of one of these robberies.

The slip had a number on it. Further checking revealed that the release belonged to defendant Pendley, who had been recently discharged from the Birmingham municipal jail.

All the Shelby County burglaries except one took place during the daytime, Walker continued. The sheriff added that more defendants will be arrested and more property is yet to be recovered in connection with the cases.

Working on the case were Sheriff Walker and Shelby County deputies Jack Neeley, Bill Davenport and Joe Roden. Jefferson County Sheriff's Department personnel working on the case were Thomas E. Eddings of the Bessemer division and Clyde Amberson, Robert L. Graham and James O. Butler, Jr. of the Birmingham division.

ESP begins building $450,000 plant

The new headquarters for the Electrical Specialty Products Company is now officially under construction.

Formal groundbreaking took place Monday morning on a 16 acre site on the western edge of Montevallo. The company is now located in Pelham.

"We're keeping up with our timetable", Thomas H. Fox, Jr. ESP vice president told the Reporter. "Wet weather may delay us a few days, but so far we are on schedule".

Heavy equipment is currently leveling and grading the site.

Initial construction will consist of two buildings, the first will cover 30,000 square feet. The second building will be a 16,000 square foot aluminum foundry.

The company's general offices will occupy 4,000 square feet in the larger of the two buildings. Also included in the first building will be an electrical and mechanical laboratory for testing the company's products.

The building housing the general offices and the laboratory will be the closest to State Highway 25. When completed it will be easily visible from the highway.

ESP designs, manufactures and sells electrical power connectors and associated fittings used by the electric power industry. The products are made in a variety of types and sizes from aluminum and copper.

Processes to be conducted in the new Montevallo plant include production of aluminum castings, machining operations, assembly and packaging, warehousing and shipping.

The firm currently employs approximately 50 people at the Pelham plant.

"We plan to have more employees when we move to Montevallo", company president Ben E. Kidd told the Reporter. "Within a few years we anticipate approximately 150 employees."

The new $450,000 project is being financed through the state's Cater act by the Montevallo Industrial Development Board.

Interest free seven percent bonds are being sold. Approximately $400,000 has already been subscribed. The remaining $50,000 is now available for sale locally. Local financing is being handled by Agee Kelly, secretary of the Montevallo Industrial Development Board and by Victor Scott, Board president.

History buffs meet for first program

by Willard Harrison

The Shelby County Historical Society gathered for their first regular meeting with a standing- room- only crowd on February 15. Almost a hundred people met in the Fellowship hall of Helena's United Methodist Church to hear a talk by Warner Floyd, executive director of the Alabama Historical Commission.

Perhaps the biggest news was that the society's membership had passed the two hundred mark and was still climbing. Speaker Floyd said that no historical society in Alabama has grown so fast in its first month. Indeed, the first order of business was to discuss a new larger location for the meeting and to change the meeting time to a Sunday afternoon rather than a weekday night. Both suggestions were almost unanimously approved.

Warner Floyd spoke also of growth and expansion of the society and others like it in the state, pointing out that three other historical societies were formed in the state in addition to Shelby County's. "I hope your society grows so much," he added, "that you put pressure on the state commission to restore old buildings."

Floyd explained that the leading tourist attractions in Alabama are historical rather than recreational. Rather than channel millions into state parks and beaches, he suggested that the state could get more tourism by building up its historical sites.

Alabama's interest in its "historical, archeological, and architectural" heritage is outstanding, stated Floyd. The interest begun by opulent Greek revival buildings in the black belt part of Alabama soon led to interest in the rustic side of Alabama life. Log cabins, grist mills, depots, and storm pits became objects to be preserved and restored. Floyd showed that these unusual features of the state could increase the number of tourists. He stated that "Alabama is the only state that has a monument to an insect, a coondog

Adult classes offer second chance

EARLY ARRIVALS - - Early arrivals for the regular class in Adult Basic Education at Thompson Middle School are from left, Mrs. Belle Donia Felder, teacher; Robert L. Kirkland, Mrs. Hattie Stewart, and Mrs. Evelyn Adams, teacher-supervisor. Classes meet in six locations in Shelby County and the school board wants to interest many more persons in enrolling for the evening and afternoon classes.

Catherine Threatt of Alabaster has come a long way since she dropped out of high school years ago after completing the ninth grade.

She is now a pre-nursing student at University of Montevallo, and alternates one semester at the university with a semester of working at Shelby Memorial Hospital.

She gives all the credit to the Adult Basic Education Program that has operated in Shelby County since 1965. The purpose of the program is to provide basic education in reading, writing and arithmetic, at the level and speed that is best for each student.

When Catherine Threatt heard about the Adult Basic Education Program, she enrolled in night classes at Thompson Middle School.

During her two years of classes she received two certificates from the program and one from the vocational agriculture department on economic and legal aspects of business decisions.

The instructor, Mrs. Evelyn Adams, told her about the G.E.D. test, which Catherine Threatt took in order to receive her high school equivalency certificate. After getting her G.E.D. in May 1969, she enrolled at the University of Montevallo with a major in pre- nursing. "When I graduate," she days, "I hope to attend UAB to achieve my master's degree in nursing."

Mrs. Threatt states that "I owe all of this success that I have achieved to the Basic Adult Education Program, where I got the start to the career I dreamed of as a child." She strongly recommends the program, offering her own example of what the program can help one achieve.

Many others have improved their education through attendance in the Basic Adult Education classes. According to Sherrell McClure, director of the program, there are now 86 people enrolled in the six different classes being held in Shelby County.

Several have passed the G.E.D. test. Many others have attended classes for a specific purpose. McClure tells of one young man who had dropped out of school at an early age. His employer in the forestry business offered him a better job if he could figure costs and sizes on varying kinds of lumber. So the young man attended the classes to learn enough arithmetic to handle the work.

Others attend to improve their reading skills so they can read the Bible better or handle newspapers and other reading material.

The course is technically set up so that a person can make up three grades a year if they attend all the meetings and do a lot of outside studying.

McClure said the program is entirely voluntary. Teachers from the Shelby County system are employed to teach the classes, but the class work is decided by the students and what they want to achieve. Everyone can proceed at his or her own rate. There are no requirements and people from age 20 to 60 and above are presently enrolled.

The six classes are held at Thompson Middle School, Tuesday and Thursdays, Calera Annex School, Tues.- Thurs., and another meets at Vincent, with hours that vary. These classes are held in the early evening, from 6-8 usually.

The only day time class is held at the Almont Child Development Center on Tuesday and Thursdays from 1 to 3 p.m.

Anyone interested in attending these classes is urged to telephone the board of education office, 669=2491 for more details.

graveyard, and five civilized Indian tribes."

Floyd repeated Mrs. Margaret Sizemore's earlier statement about the reason history should be studied: "A person doesn't know where he's going until he knows where he has been." Mrs. Sizemore, from the administrative staff of Samford University, recapped the history of the county from 1812 to recent times, telling of her search for someone to begin a historical society in Shelby County.

Mrs. Sizemore told of her contacts with members of county government and the faculty of the University of Montevallo. It seemed that everyone agreed that there should be a county historical society, but no one would take the initiative to start it. Then Kenneth Penhale contacted her, and in a few months' planning led to the society's creation.

Society president Kenneth Penhale related plans to organize the historical survey and the work that would be done for it by the Birmingham Regional Planning Commission. He urged members to sign up for various committees and to enlist new members before the cost of dues is increased next month. Penhale stated that twenty-six sites have already been selected as of historical interest in the county, including several depots in several municipalities.

Mrs. Carolyn Davidson of Helena was elected historian, joining the slate of officers headed by Penhale, Howard Draper and Linda Hinds Conn.

Named as directors of the society are: Kenneth R. Penhale, Helena; Mrs. James M. Sizemore, Birmingham; Mrs. Frances Saiia, Helena; Miss Lavada Harper, Alabaster; Dr. S.M. Mahan, Jr. Montevallo; Dr. Lucille Griffith, Montevallo; Claude H. Harris, Calera; Thomas A. Snowden, Jr. Columbiana; Mrs. Elsie Archer Jones, Westover and Judge Conrad M. Fowler, Columbiana.

Wallace's next term: Speculations not rosy

by Don Wasson

Gov. George Wallace will announce his candidacy for a third term (a fourth, really) on George Wasington's birthday and the occasion may someday be fixed as the day his power began to wane.

If nominated in the primary and elected in November, the county boy who became a lawyer, a legislator, a judge, then governor and a nominee of the U.S. Presidency will take office in January to begin a term fraught with troubles.

Midway through that term, he may figure again prominently in the quadrennial struggle for the presidency. As of now, it would have to be the best guess that Wallace will be neither a dandidate for the presidency or the vice presidency, but that he may be the most powerful power broker of them all when the Democrats meet in convention.

The strain of the governor's post on a paraplegic is great and thus far, Wallace has coped. His struggle for whatever degree of normalcy he might expect has been a hard struggle, and he has conducted himself admirably well.

But the struggle on a national scale would be ten times as difficult and ten times as taxing on his strength and durability.

So as Wallace prepares to enter a bid for another term, it seems reasonable to believe that in that term, he will be involved in the national picture a good part of the time, but not as a candidate.

There are many people in Alabama who believe that he should not again involve himself in the national political wars. "Leave it to others to complete the battle," might well be their unexpressed advice.

But many of them will vote for Wallace when voting day comes because they can't find it in their hearts to vote against him.

His home front battles are going to be tough enough. A new legislature chosen from districts of an uncertain hue, nobody knowing exactly what to expect.

And very likely, a lieutenant governor who is hostile and who will attempt to make the legislature dance to his tune rather than to the direction of the administration.

The 1975 legislative session will be unlike any we have experienced to date, and it will take an iron hand downstairs to make the legislature upstairs behave.

Besides all this, there have been 12 years of Wallace rule, and as in most such situations, the incumbency breeds enemies. Already some of the lesser administration lights are cozying up to the man who, if he wins re-election as lieutenant governor, will very likely be governor in 1979.

Wallace himself has said it -- that the longer a man stays in office, the more enemies he makes, and even in this year, when he will very likely win re-election, there are many, many people who would vote for another candidate who held promise -- were it not for the governor's disability.

Alabamians feel he received those wounds in their name and while many of them never asked him to go to Maryland, they will vote for Wallace because of his personal sacrifice.

But from the day he is elected, his power will begin to ebb. As the old adage goes, "There is no warmth in a setting sun."

County workers cannot campaign

by Conrad M. Fowler
Chairman, County Commission

County employees are prohibited by law from active participation in political campaigns. Act No. 247 of the 1965 Legislature as amended in 1971 confers restrictions and privileges upon county employees similar to those that apply to state employees. Under this act, a county employee shall not:

1. Be a member of a committee of a political party.
2. Be a candidate for nomination or election to any public office.
3. Or take part in any political campaign, except to exercise the right as a citizen privately to express an opinion and to cast a vote.

The act provides that any employee who violates these provisions shall forfeit his position. A Personnel Appeals Board is provided to conduct appropriate hearings.

There are several important aspects to this legislation. A person who seeks to be nominated or elected to a county office has a right to expect that employees of the county will not be used by an office holder to defeat his bid. In other words, one seeking to defeat an office holder should not have to overcome the resources of the county during a political campaign. Another aspect of considerable importance to the county tax payer has to do with the continuation of skilled employees in the service of the county. A person trained to do the work of the county is a valuable person to the tax payer. County employees, denied the right to participate in partisan politics are, under the Act, protected from arbitrary dismissal for political reasons. They lose the right to active political participation but gain job security.

A third factor in support of the statute relates to the career opportunitites of county employees. Retirement, insurance programs, sick leave, and vacation policies are a part of the vested benefits provided these workers by the County Commission. These job benefits increase with the passage of time. The workers have a right to expect to continue to be county employees even if the voters decide to change the identity of the office holder under whom they work. The Act provides one exception in that the first assistant of each elected official is not included within the provisions of the Act.

This personnel program represents an important transition. In years gone by county employees could campaign without restriction for the re-election of an office holder. Election day was a holiday. County employees could work throughout the day for the re-election of the office holder. But defeat of an office holder could result in the discharge of county employees and the employment of a new group of workers. "To the victor belonged the spoils". Such a policy is no longer a good one for Shelby Count or its employees.

COURTSHIP, MARRIAGE AND THE FAMILY

By Herbert J. Miles, Ph.D.

GOING STEADY AND AGE

Q Dr. Miles, in an earlier column you discussed "casual dating and age." Will you please write a column on "going steady and age." James

A Youth generally enter high school at the age of 14-15 and graduate at age 17 to 18. They usually graduate from college at age 22. There is a major difference between the process of casual dating (dating the field) and going steady. In casual dating, during the high school age, the couple are not in love. They are both free to date others. Casual dating is social fellowship for the purpose of developing social competence and self-confidence in associating with the opposite sex. It is an effort not only to understand the opposite sex, but an effort to understand self in relation to the opposite sex. On the other hand, in going steady the couple are older and more mature. They "think" they are in love with each other. They have a definite understanding that they will be faithful to each other. Neither is free to date anyone else.

Research indicates there are three major differences in going steady in high school and in college. (1) Going steady in high school represents dating security. Both boy and girl can be certain of a date at regular social occasions. Those who are not going steady may or may not draw a date (2) It represents social status. The influence of the peer group is strong. Those who are not going steady tend to envy those who are. (3) Going steady in high school often is not associated with possible marriage.

Going steady in college also involves a degree of dating security and social status, but it is more definitely associated with interest in marriage. It is a committment to study the possibility of whether or not they are a good marriage risk.

In the process of courtship somewhere teenagers should cease casual dating and move to the level of going steady. For a boy to date the field until he is age 21 to 25 indicates the existance of major emotional problems. For children to go steady before puberty (still in childhood) indicates major emotional problems of their parents and may do irreparable damage to the children. There needs to be a middle ground.

It is impossible to set up a specific age where youth begin to go steady. Some are more mature at 15 than others at 20. Some at 20 are less mature than others at 15. Age 15-16 is usually the casual dating period. Some mature youth could safely go steady during the senior year of high school. Others should wait until college age. Most sociologists and parents would object to high school engagements. Many parents think going steady should wait until after high school graduation.

It is a fact that American youth have more courtship freedom than in any nation. In many cultures there is little or no courtship before marriage. This has been true in India. Romance and courtship are not practiced. Marriages are arranged by the parents. Often a boy and girl never see each other until marriage. Some parents allow them to see (not date) each other once before marriage. Some parents allow them to see only a photograph of each other. Girls of India do not object to this. To do so would be bold. In the large cities a few educated parents allow the boys to have veto power. Many parents use the horoscope (location of the stars) in their choice of a daughter's husband. This is pure superstition and "hokus - pokus."

In our society we have personalized courtship. Young people have much freedom in courtship practices and in selecting a husband or wife, and rightly so. But money interests, social climbers, and the propaganda media have promoted such unlimited courtship freedom that it has led to immorality, babies born out of wedlock, divorces and an overemphasis on sex. We need a middle ground, including freedom with some limitations. For parents to force their children to date certain people indicates that parents themselves have major emotional problems and a lack of understanding concerning the needs and rights of their children. For youth in their early teens to demand from their parents complete courtship freedom without any limitations indicates extreme immaturity on their part Most teenagers need and welcome some mature adult guidance in their courtship practices.

Dating security and social status are not sufficient grounds for going steady. Going steady is an important and essential part of youth selecting their marriage partner.

No oil shortage

by Jack Anderson and Les Whitten

(Copyright, 1974, by United Feature Syndicate, Inc.)

WASHINGTON — Contrary to the tale being told by government and industry on the energy crisis, the Arab oil embargo has nothing to do with America's fuel shortage.

The truth is that an analysis of the industry's own statistics makes it clear that we have enough oil to last almost eight years, even if the petroleum under Alaska's north slope is never produced.

The real problem is not oil supply, but refinery capacity.

Although the oil giants knew the demand for their products was increasing dramatically in the United States over the past 15 years, they built virtually no new U.S. refineries. It was more profitable, they found, to build refineries abroad, to supply foreign markets where demand and prices were growing even faster than in the United States.

To supply these markets, the oil companies used crude oil from the Mideast. This production was subsidized by billions of dollars in tax loopholes granted by the U.S. government.

In short, the American taxpayer has been taken to help the oil companies make billions in the production and sale of oil everywhere but in the United States.

The major loophole the big companies have used to pile up the profits is the so-called foreign tax credit. This tax break, like other government policies favoring the oil companies, has been justified as necessary for America's national security.

But it resulted in the oil companies neglecting to build the refineries that this country so badly needs, and thus made the shortage of gasoline and other petroleum products inevitable. This is the opposite of national security.

Although the shortage has been a hardship for the people of the country, they have proved to be a bonanza for Big Oil. With the shortage, the prices have gone up and so have the profits.

The oil barons have been getting other government help, too. Although energy czar William Simon talks tough in public about cracking down on the oil companies, his behind-the-scenes dealings with the biggest companies are far more gentle.

A few weeks ago, Simon announced that he would send teams of federal investigators out to check the actual petroleum supplies on hand at all the nation's refineries. The idea was to assure the public that the oil companies weren't holding back.

Sources inside the oil industry, however, have told us the Simon announcement did not come as a surprise. A week before the public announcement, the biggest companies received a letter from Simon asking for their opinion of the plan.

Some responded negatively, some others did not answer at all. Their opinion, however, was not important.

The key to the message was that the oil barons knew a week in advance that the government was planning to bring its own dip-stick to their tanks.

When we asked a spokesman for Simon for a copy of the letter, he confirmed its existence, then added: "You're working with us, aren't you? The Anderson Co.?"

When we explained which Anderson was calling, the spokesman was silent for a moment, then groaned, "Oh," and his interest in helping us get a copy of the letter vanished.

Simon, nevertheless, hardly deserves some of the things that have happened to him lately. It seems that some Americans, crumbling under the psychological strain of the change in their lifestyles caused by the gas shortage, are blaming Simon personally for their troubles.

Some cranks have even gone so far as to threaten Simon's life. The hate mail that comes to his desk is so virulent, in fact, that some of Simon's associates are worried that someone might actually try to attack him.

Our sources say that Treasury Secretary George Shultz may well order Secret Service protection for the energy czar.

Ominous Signs: There are ominous signs in Latin America, where the extreme right and the extreme left struggle for power.

In Brazil, where American arms and training have kept the military dictatorship in power, there are new moves against freedom of the press. The editor of Rio de Janeiro's leading paper, Jornal do Brasil, has been abruptly fired in hopes of appeasing the Arab oil moguls.

The editor, Alberto Dines, made the mistake of trying to report both sides of the Middle East conflict. He was sacked by his publisher, Francisco Brito. When another paper hinted this was an anti-Jewish move against Dines — who is Jewish — that paper was suppressed.

Behind it all is Brazil's need for $2.6 billion worth of oil. Freedom and truth, to the dictators, is far less important than the fuel to keep the nation turning, and national discontent low.

School chief proposes new goals

Lengthening of the school days is just one of the goals for education, Dr. LeRoy Brown told educators attending the Alabama Council for School Administration and Supervision Leadership SEminar held at The University of Alabama Continuing Education Center, Sunday through Tuesday, Feb. 10-12.

Dr. Brown, state superintendent of education, said that Alabama has one of the shortest school sessions of the states and he proposed that the school season be lengthened to 180 days instead of the present 175 days.

He also said that in the future teachers will work from ten to 20 days longer in order for planning and inservice education.

Among other educational goals Dr. Brown told the educators about are (1) More autonomy of the school systems in Alabama (2) More citizen and professional involvement (3) Extending the opportunities for education to include more kindergarten and adult education.

(4) More relevant curriculums (5) A decrease in emphasis on minority groups and an increase in quality education for all (6) Betterment of teachers' salaries and working conditions (7) The contribution of educators to society such as helping solve the energy crisis.

(8) Further reduction in the pupil- teacher ratio in addition to better teaching materials (9) More competent teachers (10) Accreditation of all schools (11) An increase in cooperation between the various branches of education in the state.

Sparkman answers citizens' questions

DEAR SENATOR SPARKMAN: In recent news reports you indicated your optimism about the success of the Volunteer Army. What is the status of the Volunteer Army at this time? C.K., Dothan

SPARKMAN: I just received a letter from Mr. Howard H. Callaway, Secretary of the Army, in which he outlines the success of the new volunteer system. According to Secretary Callaway "the Volunteer Army concept is not an impossible dream, but a workable idea which can be accomplished." He pointed out that monthly goals for recruitment have been met and that recruitment trends are up. Even morale is up. One high Army official told me recently "Our new Army is full of men who are willing to face the task." He confided to me that one of the reasons for the success of the volunteer program is the new emphasis on career objectives of soldiers. In the past there was an emphasis on "what the soldier could do for the Army." Now the emphasis is "What can we do for the soldier."

DEAR SENATOR SPARKMAN: Many people feel that the so-called energy crisis is a hoax. Do you think it is? L.A., Daleville

SPARKMAN: I would not call the energy crisis a hoax. I do not think it is as severe as many people think it is. I realize many people will say "haven't you seen people lining up to get gas?" I think this is a result of having overplayed it. Our energy consumption is definitely more than our production. We have known this for a long time. Nevertheless, there should be enough to go around, especially in niew of the nationwide cutback in the use of energy. However overbuying or hoarding makes the situation look worse than it really is. During the crisis many people seem to be buying more gasoline than normal for fear of running out. This creates an abnormal demand, and a resultant scarcity which would not otherwise exist.

SEAR SENATOR SPARKMAN: My two boys, age 18 and 21, were convicted for the sale and distribution of drugs. They tell me they are innocent and I believe them. Would you be so kind as to ask the judge to reconsider his decision in this case?

SPARKMAN: As a United States Senator, I have no jurisdiction over the judicial system. IN fact, by law our government is constitutionally separated into three branches: the legislative, the judicial, and the executive. As a Federal legislator it would be highly improper for me to intervene in a court case at any level. As much as I would like to help, I must suggest that you obtain competent legal counsel to assist you in this matter. Please let me know if I can be of assistance in any other way.

DEAR SENATOR SPARKMAN: I urge you to consider introducing legislation which would authorize automobile manufacturers and dealers to remove anti-pollution devices on automobiles. I am sure you are aware that these devices cause very poor gas mileage. Their removal could save millions of gallons of gasoline and help alleviate the fuel shortage.

SPARKMAN: You may be interested in knowning that a number of my colleagues are planning to introduce a measure which would authorize the removal of emission control devices on new automobiles used in relatively unpolluted areas. However, restrictions would remain in effect in severely polluted areas. Naturally, I shall study this and similar proposals closely as we go into this new session of Congress. It is indeed very unfortunate that present pollution control devices for automobiles are so inefficient that they reduce gas mileage.

DEAR SENATOR SPARKMAN: As a real estate salesperson I would like to know what you are going to do to end the present crisis in our industry? As you may know, buyers are faced with a lack of mortgage money, the fear of a recession, and now we've got a fear of the energy crisis. The result of all this is that many of our homes are going unsold. It is difficult if not impossible for me to sell new homes in todays market.

SPARKMAN: My Housing Subcommittee is working on an omnibus housing bill consisting of some 300 pages. It is my hope that this measure, which will be reported out sometime during the month of February, will help alleviate the current crisis.

DEAR SENATOR SPARKMAN: May I use the same kind of loopholes and deductions that President Nixon used on his income tax returns? J.L., Decatur

SPARKMAN: To determine what you may or may not deduct you should contact the nearest office of the Internal Revenue Service. The IRS is making a special effort this year to assist taxpayers by having a toll-free statewide number taxpayers may call for assistance. As for the President's tax returns, it is my understanding that the IRS is going to make an announcement which should clear up the question as to whether or not the average citizen may use certain "loopholes" and whether or not these loopholes are in fact legal.

Subscriber knocks "obscene" hunting

Letter to the Editor:

I have not lived in Shelby County in several years but I am still interested in what happens there. I was saddened but not surprised to read in a recent Reporter story that the deer population in Shelby County is seriously endangered.

As long as our society regards the killing of innocent animals as a sign of virility, we will continue to have our woodlands violated by armed men (and I use the term men loosely).

I find the photographs you publish almost weekly, of men grinning obscenely over the body of a dead deer equally offensive.

The Indians owned this land before we took it and we could well take a lesson from them. We failed to realize until it was almost too late that it is necessary to conserve wildlife, but as far back as history can trace the Indians were aware of that need.

They killed only what they needed for food. Many hunters today kill for the sordid pleasure derived from destroying life. Nature provided and flouished for untold centuries unchanged by the Indian. If only we could say the same for the white man.

Thank you for letting me express my views.

Beats need candidates

The Shelby County Democratic party is looking for a large number of good men and women.

According to Democratic Party Chairman, L. C. "Curt" Payne, only four Democrats had signed up for beat committee members at press time Tuesday. Every beat in the county may elect five members to the Democratic Party Committee. There are 22 beats, which means there are 110 places to be filled.

A few years ago the party designated Place Four on each beat committee as being for women only. Recently Place Five was set aside for young people between the ages of 18 and 25, according to Payne. Yet, there has been very little interest from young people, Payne says.

Payne has qualified from Beat 7; F.D. Elliott from Beat 12; J.A. Lowe from Beat 16 and W.B. (Bill) Vernon from Beat 19.

The Committee may nominate persons to fill vacancies on the beat committees, and has done so many times in the past. But the proper time to run for the office is now.

Briarcliff drops medicare program

Briarcliff Nursing Home at Alabaster has decided to discontinue its participation in the Medicare program.

According to D.L. Hyche, administrator, there is too much paper work involved in the program and the per diem rate does not make it worthwhile.

He stressed that this move will in no way lower the standards at the nursing home, and will in effect give the staff more time to devote to nursing care with dignity.

Briarcliff's per diem rate is set by Medicare at $16.75, whereas Birmingham nursing centers have rates as high as $35, Hyche said, indicating that patients receive the same care at Briarcliff or better care than in Birmingham centers.

Hyche said that Briarcliff will continue participation in the state Medicaid program.

A new civic club, entitled "Northern Shelby County Civic Group" got off to a good start last week at its organizational meeting at Valleydale Baptist Church.

The group elected a slate of temporary officers, headed by President Erwin Howell. Ron Ewing was named vice president; Sherry Milliard accepted the office of secretary and Frank Hughes is the treasurer.

Directors named by the group are Benny Bumpas, Bill Milliard and Martha Stevenson. Rev. Larry Dill of the United Methodist Church presided at the meeting.

Among those who worked to get the club started are Ron Ewing, H.M. Bonner and F.L. McDaniel. The group is now waiting for formal papers to be recorded in the Shelby County probate office before calling a second meeting.

LEGAL NOTICE
Notice of Pendency of Complaint
In the Circuit Court of Shelby County, Alabama
Civil Action No. E-189-74
TO: The following described land:

The SE¼ of the SE¼ of Section 12, Township 20 South, Range 3 West, Shelby County, Alabama; and the following named entities and persons: R.L. Hill and his heirs or devisees, if deceased; Brown Landone and his heirs and devisees, if deceased; Landone Villa Lands, a corporation, or a dissolved corporation, and the unknown stockholders of Landone Villa Lands; Sales Exchange Corporation, a corporation, or a dissolved corporation, and the unknown stockholders of Sales Exchange Corporation; and all such persons and the heirs or devisees of such persons, if deceased, and all such associations, partnerships, corporations or other entities who unknown to the Plaintiffs claim or are reputed to claim any title to or interest in, or lien or encumbrance upon, the land made the subject matter of this action of any part thereof.

Take notice that Clarice White Luck and Ruth Luck Gordon, on the 12th day of February, 1974, filed in the Circuit Court of Shelby County, Alabama their verified Complaint, pursuant to the provisions of Sections 1116, et seq, Code of Alabama (1940) (Recompiled 1958), against you and the above described land and against any and all persons claiming any title to, interest in, or lien or encumbrance upon the above described land or any part thereof or interest therein, and against all other persons, and against said land for the purpose of establishing the title of said land in the said Clarice White Luck and Ruth Luck Gordon and to clear up all doubts and disputes concerning the same and that said suit is not pending in said Court.

Plaintiffs allege in said Complaint that the title to said land stands in the name of the Plaintiffs on the records in the Office of the Judge of Probate of Shelby County, Alabama based on the following facts and circumstances: On June 20, 1938 the Tax Collector of Shelby County, Alabama sold said land at a Tax Sale to the State of Alabama for non-payment of taxes for the Tax Year 1937, which constituted a valid lien against said land, as shown by Tax Sale Record 13, at Page 146, in the Office of the Judge of Probate of Shelby County, Alabama; pursuant to said Tax Sale, a Certificate of Purchase was issued to the State of Alabama and thereafter on June 12, 1941 the State of Alabama transferred and assigned said Certificate of Sale to Paul O. Luck, as shown by the instrument recorded in Deed Book 111, at Page 498, in said Probate Records; subsequently, and on June 24, 1941 the Judge of Probate of Shelby County conveyed said land to Paul O. Luck, as shown by Tax Deed recorded in Deed Book 111, at Page 514, in said Probate Records; and subsequent to the execution, delivery and recordation of said Tax Deed, the said Paul O. Luck has died and according to his Last Will and Testament said land was devised to his widow, Clarice White Luck, as shown by the Decree of Final Settlement recorded in Will Book 13, at Page 117, in said Probate Records, and thereafter the said Clarice White Luck conveyed an undivided one-half interest in and to said land to Ruth Luck Gordon, as shown by deed recorded in Deed Book 218, at Page 199. And Plaintiffs further allege in said Complaint that Plaintiffs are in actual, peaceable possession of said land and the Plaintiffs and their predecessors in title have been in such possession of said land for a period exceeding the 10 years next preceding the filing of this Complaint, and no other person, firm, corporation or entity has been in possession of said land or any part thereof during said period. The Plaintiffs and their predecessors in title have held color of title to said land for a period exceeding the 10 years next preceding the filing of this Complaint and have assessed said land for taxes and have paid taxes thereon for and during each of the 10 years next preceding the filing of this Complaint.

Plaintiffs further allege in said Complaint that after making diligent search and inquiry, Plaintiffs were unable to locate the following named persons to determine whether or not they are living or dead, and if living, what their ages and addresses are at the present time, and if deceased, the names, ages and addresses of their heirs or devisees, and that the same are unknown to the Plaintiffs, said persons being as follows: R.L. Hill and Brown Landone, and that Plaintiffs after most diligent search and inquiry were unable to locate the address of Landone Villa Lands, a corporation, and Sales Exchange Corporation, a corporation, and were unable to find out if said corporations are still in operation or if dissolved or discontinued, the Plaintiffs were unable to ascertain the names, addresses and ages of the stockholders of said corporations at the time of liquidation or dissolution of said corporations, as the case might have been, and the same are unknown to the Plaintiffs; and that the names, ages and addresses of any other parties who, unknown to Plaintiffs, may claim an interest in or to the above described land, are unknown.

It is, therefore, ordered by the undersigned Register that publication of this notice be made in the Shelby County Reporter, a newspaper published and having a general circulation in Shelby County, Alabama, once a week for four consecutive weeks, and that all those to whom this notice is addressed and any and all persons claiming any title to, interest in, or lien or encumbrance upon, the above described land, or any part thereof, or any interest therein, be, and they are hereby required to answer the Complaint in this cause within the time required by law, and not later than April 8, 1974, and serve a copy thereof upon Plaintiffs' attorney or suffer a judgment by default to be rendered against you.

Westover news--

Music brightens Valentine banquet

by Mrs. Elsie A. Jones

The younger couples of the Prospect Baptist Church entertained the members of their families and some visitors with a Valentine banquet on Saturday night, February 15. The basement of the church was tastefully decorated with symbols of valentines and bouquets of flowers. Each place had a valentine for a marker. A delicious meal was served by the hostesses, the young matrons of the church.

Music for the occasion was furnished by the "Doubtful Four" Quartette who were visitors from Pleasant Grove area. "Tiny Tim", of the quartette, gave a hilarious rendition of "Tip Toe Through the Tulips". Anyone who may be thinking the "Tiny Tim" has disappeared from the music circuit has only to engage this man to perform for them. Even down to the long, black wig, the imitation is almost perfect.

A regular quartette of the church entertained with some gospel songs, and an impromtu quartette appeared from the children's area when four young ladies presented their song which they had learned in Bible School. This went over practically without a flaw, and was throughly enjoyed by everyone.

The writer received a most welcome letter from Mrs. Iris Spearman Morton, of Raleigh, N.C., who stated that she had been a reader of the "Westover News" column for years, and ended by remarking that Shelby County is surely growing and "isn't the Reporter an interesting newspaper!" It's just letters like this one which can bring out the sunshine on the rainiest day. She also requested some help and information which just fit into the initial projects which we had agreed upon at the meeting of the Shelby County Historical Society last Friday night.

As we watch two of our old log homes being torn down by the Highway Department, we realize that we have waited too long to get a Historical Society working in our County, and that we are regretting the loss of some of our old heritage already. I hope that we can all just get together and help preserve a lot of our historical places for our future generations.

The week of Feb. 3-10 was a busy one for one of our eldest citizens, Mrs. Mary Lula Belew, known to the community as "Granny Belew". On Tuesday, February 5, the WMU of Mt. Zion Baptist Church met at the home of Mrs. C.A. Belew, with a covered dish luncheon honoring Granny Belew's 90th birthday, Mrs. George Collin's 84th birthday, and Mrs. Elmer Garner's birthday. (She wouldn't tell us her age.) There were eighteen guests at the luncheon, which was followed by a Bible Study.

Friends of Mrs. Ella Lybrand will regret to learn that her condition is considered critical at this writing.

Mrs. Velma Shaw is recuperating nicely at her home in the Union Community.

Our sympathy is extended to the family and realtives of Rev. A.C. Acton, in the death of his brother during the past weekend.

Funeral services were conducted by the Rev. J.D. Denny, of Mt. Tabor Methodist Church and Rev. E.W. Gardner, Gadsden. Interment was in Mt. Tabor Cemetery.

On February 10th, a tea honoring "Granny Belew" was given at the home of Mrs. C.A. Belew and 50 guests registered; others came who failed to register. It is really a wonderful attitude of our people who are so thoughtful of our elder citizens and show to some of them, at least, that they are loved and respected for all those years gone before in loving and caring for us.

I dropped by Boozer Kelley's home on Sunday afternoon and he told me that he is thoroughly enjoying just as many visits to the Senior Citizens' meetings at Columbiana, Vincent, and Mt. Tabor as he possibly could. He is an enthusiastic booster of the Senior Citizens' programs.

Give school kids a fun lunch

by Doris Davis

There must be 101 different ways to make peanut butter and jelly sandwiches depending on whether you use crunchy or smooth peanut butter, one of many varieties of jellies, jans, preserves or a fruit butter such as apple butter.

Scarcely a child has been born since the sandwich was invented who didn't just love peanut butter and jelly sandwiches. By the way, it is quite true that the sandwich was invented by an English nobleman, the Earl of Sandwich, of the early 1700's. While playing cards he ordered a servant to bring him two slices of bread with a piece of roast meat between them. Since that notable day practically everything edible has eventually found itself poked between two pieces of bread.

One of the main uses of the sandwich is in the preparation of school lunches. But by this time of year the old standby, peanut butter and jelly must be growing less and less appetizing for the many Shelby County students who carry their lunches from home.

Let's explore the many possibilities available to us for dressing up the school lunch, making it more attractive, more nutritious and more appetizing.

The main part of the sandwich, the bread, offers many possibilities for diversity. Plain white, whole wheat, roman meal, french and rye are only a few of the different varieties available for sandwich making. Since most children adore anything homemade who not try your hand at home baked bread. If bread prices rise as predicted this will soon be a must in the culinary art of every household anyway.

The fillings used to make sandwiches may be somewhat limited for a child's taste but besides the prepared fillings and meats that can be bought on the market, homemade spreads are especially good. A child who would not like pimento cheese from the store might be very fond of the kind mother makes. Chicken salad, ham salad, egg salad, tuna salad and even mayonaise can be made at home with very little difficulty.

Banana sandwiches are very good and the bread can be spread with either mayonaise, salad dressing or peanut butter for three different varieties. Another fruit, pineapple can be substituted for bananas.

The cook's ingenuity can turn last night's leftovers into very appealing school lunches. Sliced chicken on white bread spread with mayonaise and garnished with lettuce is a delicious meal or use roast beef instead of chicken or venison if you are lucky enough to have some. Sliced meat loaf makes a good cold sandwich with ketchup, mayonaise or mustard as a spread.

Sausage and biscuits is still as good today as it was back when our parents had to walk so many miles to school -- the length of the walk and severity of weather increasing with each telling of the tale, so it seemed.

The school lunch of course does not have to include a sandwich. The main course could be a cold piece of chicken or a warm thermos of soup or homemade stew. A number of homemade dishes can be put in a wide mouth thermos; for example weiners and kraut; rice, meat and gravy; or your child's favorite casserole.

Fruits, desserts and salty snacks can be added for both nutrition and quick energy. Apples, oranges or bananas add appetizing color to the school lunch. Children especially like something baked or cooked in mother's kitchen because these treats include a generous portion of love detectible by even the smallest offspring. Besides it's more economical to make them at home rather than buy them readymade where a portion of the cost includes packaging not to mention labor and middleman.

Cookies, brownies, cakes and candies are just the basics. Add your own ideas and favorite recipes to make the school lunch more delicious and nutritious.

For homemade salty snacks include popcorn or try making your own potato chips. Slice the potatoes tissue thin, dry them off and drop into deep oil. Cook until crisp. Place on paper towel to drain.

Then, as little fingers keep reaching for the chips, rap across the knuckles lightly with a very thin hickory so the children won't get burned.

When the potato chips are thoroughly cooled, salt, remove enough for school lunches to a safe hiding place, allow the children to dig in and watch the chips vanish into appreciative little tummies.

Include a thermos of lemonade, fruit juice or punch or if you prefer rather than sending milk from home which could spoil in a warm schoolroom. Let the student purchase his milk at school to top off a school lunch fit for a gourmet.

PUTTING THE SANDWICHES TOGETHER - - Mrs. James T. Cutcliff shows how she gets school lunches. started every morning, bringing out the bread and fillings for sandwiches. Corned beef sandwiches are the favoriets at the Cutcliff house. The family lives in Indian Valley Estates just north of Valleydale Road.

HERE'S HOW - - Chris Cutcliff fills up his thermos as his part of getting his lunch ready to take to school. Packing school lunches is becoming increasingly popular in Shelby County these days, with children of all ages.

AND OFF THEY GO - - Criag, Chris and Cathy Cutcliff get ready to take their packed school lunch boxes with them as they catch the bus which takes them to Valley School.

Local students join business honor society

Four Shelby County residents have been elected to the national honorary, Beta Gamma Sigma, at the organizations Birmingham chapter at the University of Alabama in Birmingham.

The four are Charles R. Attaway, a junior from Alabaster; Joan S. Davis, a senior from Sterrett; William G. Rassmussen, a senior from Vincent and John D. Williamson, a senior from Harpersville.

They are among 35 new members who will be inducted into the chapter at a ceremony and banquet in Birmingham on March 30.

According to Dr. Joseph G. Van Matre, Birmingham Chapter secretary, the honorary is limited to schools accredited by the Amercican Assembly of Collegiate Schools of Business.

Beta Gamma Sigma was founded in 1907 to encourage and reward scholarship and accomplishment in the field of business studies, to promote advancement of education in the science of business, and to foster principles of honesty and integrity in business practice.

Political fever runs high in Shelby County

by Mildred White Wallace

Everywhere we have been this week, we have heard nothing but that one little work - - Politics! Around the coffee tables, in the cafes, and even in the curbstone circuit, you will hear only this one topic for conversation. We have heard just one person say they were "not the least bit interested in politics."

As far as this pilot of an errant penpoint is concerned, I can say I have heard and seen many things in which I was more interested; and yet, those eight little letters should furnish an interest for every man and woman who will have the privilege of casting his or her vote in the upcoming May Primary Election.

The political fabric, judging by the canditorial lineup, is already being woven into a colorful pattern by the ambitious politicos now out covering the county in an endeavor to meet the people who will render the verdict declaring victory or defeat for their political careers.

Since last week's edition of the Reporter, in which several candidates were pictorially presented as aspirants for various offices, the colorful fabric they are weaving has been taking shape and the unique design is creating quite a bit of interest and enthusiasm. One thing for sure, all these political candidates realize the fact that there will be many, many more people to contact as they seek "votes and influence". They won't know everybody as heretofore has largely been the case. Hundreds of new citizens have moved into the county and there is a mad scramble to get to these newly acquired citizens and interest them in Shelby County's political picture.

Looking back a few years before mi-lady had a say so in the political forum, the writer recalls some bitter fights that were waged in this county as Republicans and Democrats met in a head on collision seeking political power and prestige. Since the voting privilege has been extended to the feminine contingent, the writer believes that every woman should make a careful study of the situation and exercise this privilege according to her best judgment. Voting is not only a responsibility it is the duty you owe to your county, state and city to be interested in the men and women who are making these races.

Politics keeps alive the interest in public affairs. Often times, it is true, this interest or enthusiasm runs riot and appeals to the imagination rather than to reason. Often, long time friends have become embittered and estranged when politics is mentioned and issues and candidates cannot be intelligently discussed without a temper flare up. I have known -- in years past -- several friendships that have been irrevocably broken due to political differences which, if they had been boiled down intelligently, instead of viewed emotionally, would have amounted to less than zero. Yet politics could be a most interesting and highly entertaining subject if only intelligence could replace the personal prejudice engendered, usually instigated by unreliable Dame Rumor or senseless gossip. Both should be tabooed!

The inalienable right of personal preference for each individual voter should remain intact. The recognition and respect for the other fellow's viewpoint should never be questioned. Thats only a fair and square deal -- and that is all anyone should expect.

After all, we are here -- mere puppets on a stage. Some people, have already made up their minds on the political issues involved and have chosen the candidates; and if they were called on to say why -- on a cross examination -- they could not to save their lives tell you why - yet they will argue for hours on the subject.

We overheard a coffee confab of this kind this morning and it furnished the inspiration for the above "political pop-off".

However, seriously speaking, I do believe everyone eligible to vote should exercise this right, and I hope I shall never become so biased in my views so wop-sided mentally, so prejudiced, that I cannot -- at least -- risk one eye on the other fellow's platform -- fact is I may just take a step up there with him and look around at the planks -- If I do not like what I see -- no harm done in looking them over and weighing the "timber".

It's a funny old world and when the high tension and the emotions that are wasted over political arguments have subsided, the calm level of judgment reached and your vote has been tabulated -- then -- and only then will you realize what you have done with your little cross mark.

Public service is a public trust and you have the right, by your vote, to place this trust in the hands of the ones whom you, as an individual believe to be most worthy of that trust. So - this is just a reminder that it is time to put on that proverbial little old time-worn -- but still useful -- Thinking Cap!

Personal mention and local news

by Mildred White Wallace

Friends of Mr. and Mrs. Norman Anderson (Glenda Davis) will be glad to learn that they have purchased a home in Virginia Beach, Va. They have moved from Philadelphia into their new southern surroundings, have found friendly neighbors; and keep up with friends and loved ones in Shelby County through the Reporter each week. All of this naturally, pleases the writer. Their interesting letter reached us on Valentine's Day and made this "special day" happier for the thought which prompted their message across the miles.

* * * *

In circulating around the courthouse this morning we had the pleasure of meeting two additional secretaries who have been added to the Tax Assessor's official staff. They are Emily Morris of Wilsonville; and Jimmie Ruth Watts of Calera.

Speaking of changed titles or names - we learn that "Senior Citizens" is no longer proper when referring to the over 65 group of Americans. We now refer to them as the "mature citizens" - So, we report that the mature citizens in the First Baptist Church in Columbiana were distinguished guests last Sunday at the eleven o'clock hour of worhsip and following the service were honorees at a banquet in the Fellowship Hall hosted by the younger matrons of the church.

* * * *

In the old days -- George Washington's birthday was observed on Feb. 22 -- the historic day of his appearance on this earth; but in this mixed up - crazy- topsy-turvy ball of confusion in which we now circulate, we changed all this. We now take a long week end off and observe the occasion at a time nearest this date. So came Monday morning when folk lined up at the post office waiting for the morning mail. No mail was forthcoming due to this change in dates for the fellow who cut down the cherry tree, who would not tell a lie -- and who tossed dollars nonchalantly across the Potomac; and what's more important was the first President of the United States.

Just could not help but wonder what George Washington - "first in war, first in peace and first in the hearts of his countrymen" would think about all this switch-e-roo were he still here to have his say so.

Nordans announce daughter's troth

Mr. and Mrs. Clayton Oscar Nordan, of Montevallo, announce the engagement of their daughter, Judy Carol, to William Douglas Trotter, of Eufaula. Mr. Trotter's parents are Mr. and Mrs. William Earl Trotter, of Eufaula.

The bride elect is the granddaughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. William McDaniel Wyatt, of Montevallo, and the late Mr. and Mrs. Charles Jackson Nordan, of Abbeville. She is a graduate of the University of Montevallo and is employed with the Shelby County Board of Education. She is also a teacher of dancing.

Mr. Trotter's grandparents are Mr. and Mrs. Nolin Trotter, Mrs. James Allen Downs, Sr., and the late Mr. Downs, of Rome, Ga. He is a graduate of the University of Montevallo, where he is also enrolled in graduate school. He is employed with the Shelby County Board of Education.

The wedding will be on June 1, at the Montevallo Presbyterian Church.

Baptist plan Focus Week

Focus Week was observed by the Women of First Baptist Church in Columbiana on Feb. 13 when another historic chapter of the W.M.U. was written into the annals of important events in this church.

There were seven past presidents of the W.M.U. who participated in this meeting. They included Mrs. J.F. Thompson, Mrs. W.B. White, Mrs. C.O. Foster, Jr., Mrs. Leon Wallace, Mrs. Bob Upton, Mrs. Ruby Calloway and the current president, Mrs. Otha Cagle. All were presented with red and white carnations.

Following the presentation Mrs. Luther Curlee gave a brief history of the U.M.U. This organization was first called "Ladies Aid "and Missionary Society". It was started in Columbiana on April 24, 1899 with nine menbers. Mrs. W.G. Parker served as its first president. The purpose was to spread the Gospel at home and abroad. The dues were ten cents per member.

Other members gave a few highlights of events which occurred while they were members. Mrs. L.F. Vershot stated she had joined the organization in 1918.

After the meeting adjourned a covered dish luncheon was served to 40 members and their guests.

Up and down Main

A friend of mine in the radio business tells me that the recording of the Lord's Prayer in the modern beat by "The Singing Nun" has topped the million mark. Isn't this going a bit too far even in this crazy-mixed- up ear- splitting noise-filled world we are putting up with today?

Another friend writes from Europe and says the Europeans have done something about the loud music so frequently played. Their juke boxes have a slot on them for "silence" -- and he states, the required amount to assure silence while enjoying a meal is being gladly contributed.

* * * *

On the evening of Feb. 22, members of the S Club at Shelby County High School will be sponsoring a dance. The Cross-Tie orchestra from Macon, Ga., has been engaged to furnish the tempo for this eventful occasion. So, make a ring around your calendar for Feb. 22 and be present to whirl-a- round with your partner at this terpsichorean festivity.

Proceeds will go toward purchasing uniforms needed in the athletic department. It won't be long now until the crack of the willow stick against the horsehide pellet will be in vogue and the baseball niners need some new uniforms. The proceeds from this dance might just put the fund needed to procure the needed equipment to make a "home run". The club will appreciate your cooperation and your presence.

* * * *

Bike Rides here and yonder are getting to be the most popular way to raise money for various projects on the summer agenda. Had an over the coffee cup chat with Lee Glass today and he tells me he and his R.A. boys are enthusiastically supporting a proposed sponsored bike-ride to Clanton sometime in March. The proceeds will be placed in the treasury for the annual mission work done among the Mexican migrants by the Acteens from First Baptist Church. Lee is in charge of the R.A.'s who will participate in this endeavor. Details later. But -- get ready to sponsor the free- wheeling brigade.

* * * *

As swallows return to Capastrono so, it is said martins return to their gourds in Shelby County. One day last week a gentleman from Westover called in to say martins had returned to gourds he had prepared for them and that they were busily engaged in selecting their "future home". So, as purple martins and springtime are synonomous terms, we are disregarding the prediction of the ground- piggy on Feb. 2 -- hoping these heralds of spring are more accurate in their timing of the vernal season than was indicated by the underground fuzzy- wuzzy.

* * * *

Mary Largin is currently acting as City Clerk for Columbiana due to the illness of Kathryn Franks. Mrs. Franks has returned to her home from the hospital and is resting for a few weeks before returning to her official post.

* * * *

Members of the Sanctuary Choir from First Baptist Church went to a Birmingham church Wednesday evening to hear John Peterson direct his new cantata -- "Jesus is Coming". This event cancelled the regular weekly choral rehearsal.

* * * *

A kindergarten Committee has been appointed at First Baptist Church to look into the need for a Kindergarten in the church. There is also on the agenda of activities a Building Planning Committee who are studying plans for a new building that will serve the need for recreational and educational expansion for this church.

* * * *

Lanice Wood has returned to Columbiana after enjoying a visit with her daughter Mrs. Joe Holmes (Lynn Wood) Mr. Holmes and their quartette of girls in their Carolina home.

* * * *

More bike riders are appearing on the streets in Columbiana; Mary Barrett and Jeanette Niven are the latest devotees of the bi-pedaling brigade I have seen in motion.

* * * *

Rick Moore, our sports writer, spent the weekend in Kingsport, Tenn., as the guest of his parents Mr. and Mrs. R. T. Moore. Rick says this is his first "break-a -way" for his home town since last summer. When we said "so long" Rick was worried about how this scarcity of gas would affect his travelling arrangements and get him back Monday in time to begin weilding his penpoint on the Scoreboard. County producers rap dairy situation — prices, production and profits

by Rick Moore
Shelby County Reporter

Dairying was once a large and profitable business here in Shelby County. Now, with the rising cost of production and the low price of milk, most county dairymen are not so optimistic about the future.

This week the Reporter interviewed several dairymen from different parts of Shelby county. They described their dairying operations and commented on the current bad times milk producers have experienced over the past year.

"Figures supplied by W.M. "Buck" Clark, Extension AGent, show that in 1952 Shelby County boasted 88 dairy farms. In 1958 that figure had dropped to 73 dairies. Today, 29 dairies are operating in Shelby County.

Despite this drop in the number, Shelby County is second only to Montgomery County in Alabama milk production.

The latest agricultural figures show that the average investment on a modern dairy can be figures at $2,500 per mature milking cow.

The price of grain used as feed for dairy cattle is soaring according to Clark. Market reports show that a bushel of number two yellow corn cost $2.88 at the Decatur market last December 19. A month later, January 18, the Decatur corn price was quoted at $3.11 a bushel. A Jan. 25 market report showed this price has risen to $3.13½ a bushel.

The December 19 price for a ton of 44 percent soybean meal at the Birmingham market was $210. A year earlier the same meal cost $189.90. The January 25 price for this meal had dropped some to $182 a ton. In January 1973 this price was $200 a ton.

The latest market price report dated last Friday showed that number two yellow corn at Decatur cost $3.25 a bushel, or $1.94 more than at the same time the previous year. Forty four percent soybean meal cost $174 at the Birmingham market on February 15.

Because of these high feed prices -- not to mention scaring equipment and fertilizer costs -- 150 of the Associated Milk Producers member dairys closed down in 1973.

Even though farming reports are sometimes gloomy, county agents report a large number of young people from Shelby County going into agribusiness.

Howard Green who owns a dairy at Moore's Crossroads near Montevallo has been in the milk producing business since 1956. He explained that since that time all areas of farming have made some drastic changes.

For example, Green said that in the 50's and the 60's dairymen would get excited if feed prices rose to where it represented 25-30 percent of their milk sales. Now feed costs take 50-60 percent of Green's total sales.

Farm equipment prices have also skyrocketed. Green explained that during the 50's a tractor would cost $6,000. Today a tractor of the same size and horsepower costs $12,000.

When Green started dairying in 1956 he had 40 cows. He had to milk them in a barn and feed the animals manually. Now he has 125 cows, has an automatic feeding system and milks twice a day in a milking parlor.

Green is also in the beef and poultry business. He went on to say that hardly any phase of farming is good right now. Speaking of his different farming interests, Green says "it takes one to scotch the other."

John Lamar Hinds, a Vincent dairyman gave the Reporter an idea of the amount of money needed for a good physical dairy plant. The price of Hinds's milking parlor building cost $55,000 he said. Hinds also told that he had three stainless steel milk storage tanks of various sizes costing seven, five and four thousand dollars each.

Hinds said that the milking system in his parlor cost another $5,000 and the electrical system cost $28,000.

Hinds milks his cows three times a day at 2:30 a.m., 9 a.m. and 4 in the afternoon. He stated that he has had to cut his production in order to stay in business. Hinds has reduced his herd from 137 to 80 top producing cows.

Larry Farr owns and operates a dairy in the Kingdom community. He is concerned over the price of milk in Alabama and attended the latest dairy commission hearing in Montgomery.

He said that the commission listened to facts and figures concerning all aspects of the dairy industry. Yet dairymen did not get an adequate price increase to operate profitably.

Farr explained that a recent survey conducted by the Auburn Agricultural Research Department showed that a dairyman's time was worth $1.76 an hour. This figure only takes into account a dairyman's return on milk sold and not the investment he has in land, dquipment or animals.

Farr spends 11 hours a day milking. Then he must find time to do the other chores necessary in running a farm. Farr has cut his milking cows from 134 to 100 animals by drying out every cow that does not produce at least 20 pounds of milk a day.

Farr says he does not want to get out of the dairy business since it is his profession and life's work. He will, however, if the dairy situation does not change.

He says that every product has gone up in price and people do not complain. But when the milk price needs to rise to stay in line with other items such as the dairyman's cost of production as well as his cost of living, the consumers try to block it.

The result, if nothing is done to relieve the financial burden of the dairyman, will be that many will simply switch to a more profitable form of agricultural production. The already 20 percent milk deficit in the state will soar. Consumers will not be concerned with the high price of milk imported from other states. Rather, the concern will be whether they can find this commodity at all at their supermarket.

To be continued in a later issue with comments from other Shelby County dairymen.

DAIRYMEN COMMENT - - Dairymen Howard Green (top) of Moore's Crossroads and Larry Farr (left) of the Kingdom Community both agree that the present milk price raise will not provide adequate revenues for milk producers in the face of soaring operational costs. Shelby County Dairymen are second only to those in Montgomery County in Alabama milk production. (Photos by Randie Sears and Rick Moore)

IT'S MILKING TIME - - A dairy cow walks into a milking parlor for the second time in a day. Cattle must first be washed clean before the milking begins. Daries must be kept spotlessly clean. They are inspected periodicly by county and state health departments.

Tennessee firm buys county pulp

Pulpwood purchased by Hiwassee Land Company brought Shelby County tree farmers and loggers some $99,800. in 1973, according to Jack Greer, the company's district forester.

The wood was purchased for Hiwassee's parent company, Bowaters Southern Paper Corporation, to be made into newsprint paper.

Shelby County's share in Bowater's wood supply was especially important in 1973 due to near-record rainfall throughout the Southeast, Mr. Greer said.

"The rain severely hampered logging operations, forcing some mills to slow down to shut down equipment," he explained.

He added that Bowaters Southern did not have to curtail production, although there were days when the stock of wood at the mill was critically low.

Two locations to pay bills

Homer L. Morris, president of the Bethel Water System Inc., announces that users of the water system may pay their monthly bills at two locations: Sammy's in Wilsonville and A and L Hardware in Columbiana, or they may pay their bills by mail at P.O. Box 101, Wilsonville, AL 35186.

The water system went into service on January 1, serving an extensive area east and north of Columbiana. It includes parts of the Kingdom Community, Bethel Four Mile and Old Chapel communities, and adjoining areas.

Morris announces that monthly bills are due on the first of each month and become delinquent on the 11th. A penalty of ten percent will be added to delinquent bills, Morris said, and service will be discontinued after the 30th if bills are not paid.

Sport of skindiving aids West Shelby rescue unit

by Willard Harrison

Scuba divers and pilots have been added to the volunteer staff of the West Shelby Rescue Unit.

The Helena-based unit sent out a call for these specialists recently to help in the many emergency situations that arise within the county.

Four intrepid men answered the call to be scuba divers, and some of them took specialized training at the Birmingham YMCA to qualify. Randall Johnson, Billy Price, Ronald Price and Ricky Price are the four men qualified to take on jobs of under- water search and rescue work.

When the unit saw the need for airborne searchers, Bobby Fortenberry of Pelham volunteered his services and his airplane.

They join a well organized team that has already been instrumental in saving lives and searching for several lost persons in the eight months of its existence.

Working on major emergencies, they often join the Harpersville Rescue Unit and Shelby Unit One in providing aid and assistance.

West Shelby unit commander Rev. Fred Holmes stated that the rescue squad is considering other training courses to add to their roster of specialists. At present three of their divers have passed an emergency driving course at the University of Montevallo's Institute of Environmental Safety.

Eight members are studying emergency medical treatment at Shelby Memorial Hospital.

Plans are underway for a group of members to receive training in the mountain-climbing techque of "rappeling" up and down steep inclines.

Holmes added that the group is also involved with a course in cardio- pulmonary problems. After finishing this course, they will have men trained to give first aid to heart attack victims. Special equipment can be brought into the victim's home to give him aid before they take him to the hospital.

Besides special training, the rescue unit is also constantly adding to or refining their equipment. At present the group is involved with equipping their emergency vehicles with two -way radios. The rescue unit members in the immediate vicinity of Helena also man the town's volunteer fire department; they will be in charge of the new Helena fire truck now ordered, plus the town's present two trucks.

The West Shelby Rescue Unit is also forming a ladies' auxiliary for the wives of members. The women are not only making themselves useful in such capacities as fund-raising and communications from headquarters: they are also taking part as EMT's, which is similar to paramedic training.

Another fairly new service of the squad is a free ambulance rides for indigent patients. The squad carries indigent patients from Shelby Memorial Hospital to another hospital, home, or whatever they have to go. Working in close conjunction with the hospital's social service, the drivers perform the service without charge. Holmes admitted that if the person wanted to give the squad a donation, they would gladly accept it.

The rescue unit depends on contributions from the public rather than from governmental sponsorship. Although it is incorporated, chartered, and certified by the Alabama Association of Rescue Units, it must still support itself. Most of the money comes from fund drives, one of which will be coming up soon, Holmes said.

Financing is one of the more important considerations of the unit, with a committee devoted to finance alone. The twin committees on training and equipment are also of prime importance to the function of the West Shelby group.

SQUAD BOAT - - The West Shelby Rescue Unit will probably accept this boat offered to them by the Civil Defense. CD's Homer Walton says that this "squad boat" is the type the army has often used. The heavy metal boat has a flat bottom and a pointed prow, and can be carried by sixteen men. At present the boat is upside down behind the county highway department headquarters. Walton says he has no official word as to whether the squad will take the boat, but no doubt this business will be attended to in the rescue unit's February meeting.

The fourth committee, which screens prospective members, also performs a vital task at the monthly meetings. Holmes stated that the unit tries to retain a top strength of twenty-five men from the north-west area of the county. The screening committee checks out each man's qualifications before he is accepted. If he does not fulfill his duties, one of the unit's three lieutenants has him brought before the executive board, who can ask him to resign.

Holmes said that this procedure is necessary to maintain the dedication of the members to the job. He stated that much of the time, a person who was asked to quit had been tired of the job and waiting to be relieved of duty. In keeping with the strictly-business policy, each potential member is required to pay five dollars to apply for membership, plus a dollar per month dues.

While one of the membership requirements is dedication, this does not discourage would-be members. In fact, Rev. Holmes said, there are several people on the unit's waiting list. Three members are expected to be inducted this month to bring the squad's roster to full strength.

Unit officers under Holmes are vice-president Keith Campbell, Randall Johnson, Ray Parrish, and Donald Price.

The rescue unit is also expanding into boating for their rescue work. The county's Civil Defense department is donating a boat to the West Shelby Unit. According to squad member Kenneth Mullins, the flat-bottom boat is eight feet wide and about 20 or 30 feet long. He stated that the unit will be receiving the boat shortly to aid them in their rescue work on the county's lakes and streams.

In the meantime the West Shelby Rescue Unit is keeping busy. The group has participated in eleven major searches or emergencies in its eight months of existence. In addition they handle non-emergency tasks such as their hospital charity work. When a crisis arises, the unit is capable of handling nearly any task in the county or the state.

Plastic tent costs little and is simple to assemble

by Rick Moore

Last week the Reporter ran an article of backpacking. In it I mentioned using home-made camping equipment. Because of requests, I obtained the plans of a lightweight tent that can be made very cheaply and requires no special skills to construct.

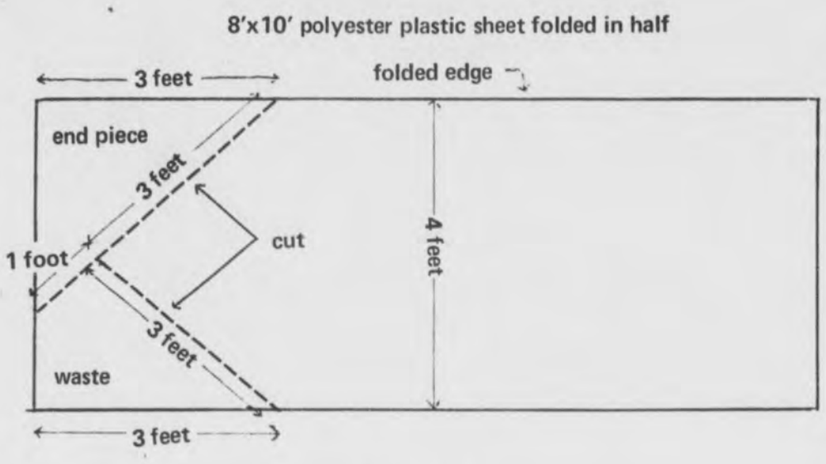
The raw materials for this tent are a ten foot by eight foot rectangle of heavy gauge plastic sheeting, a roll of wide electrician's tape, and an eyelet puncher -- the kind a seamstress uses to make the metal rimmed holes in a cloth belt.

The 8' by 10' plastic sheet should be folded in half as shown in the diagram and the two cuts made.

The next step is to tape along the edges of the tent flaps and the sides of the tent as shown by the thick dotted lines in the diagram. Also the long side of the triangular end piece should be taped.

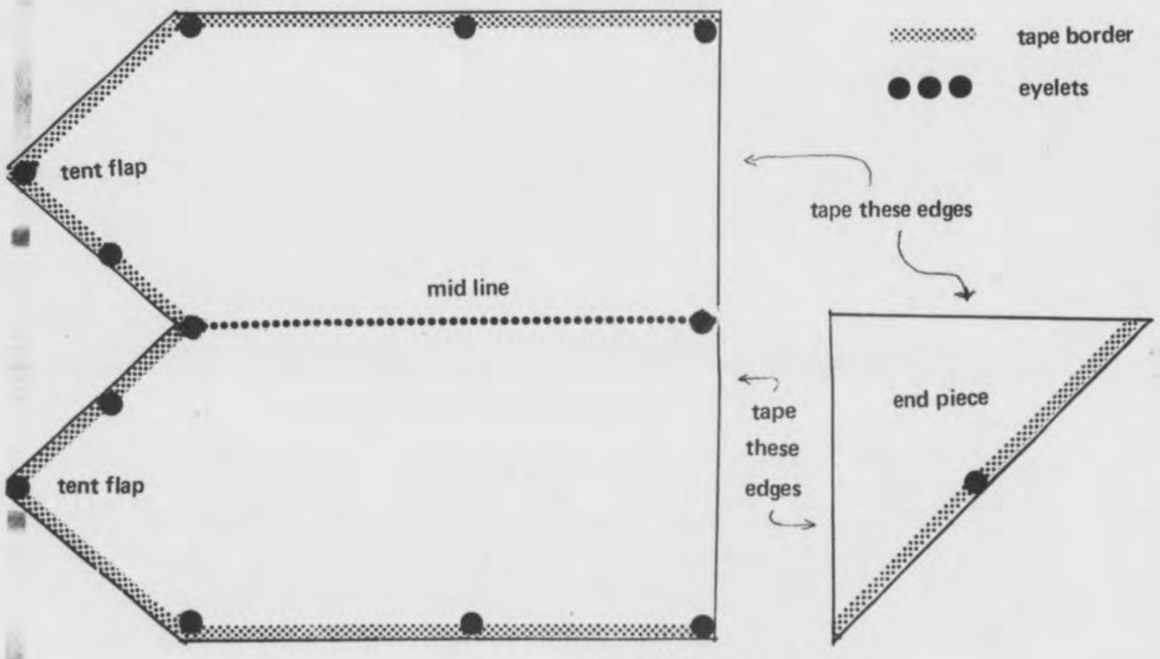
When taping the sides, let half the width of the tape hang over the edge of the plastic. Then fold the tape over and stick it to the other side of the plastic.

Punching the eyelets is the next step. They should be punched in the positions indicated by the large dots on the diagram. Loops made of heavy twine should be tied through the three holes along either side of the tent and in the one on the back. These loops are used to stake the tent down. The two eyelets on the inside of the tent flaps are used to tie them shut.



These eyelets should only be punched through tape reinforced areas of the tent! Be sure to reinforce the mid line eyelet at the end of the tent.

A long length of nylon twine should be inserted through one of the two holes at either end of the mid line. Then it is run along the inside of the tent and out through the hole at the other end of the midline. Each end of this line is tied to a tree trunk, pole, etc. to hold the tent up. A large knot should be tied in this line on the inside of the tent next to the eyelets so that the line will not slip.



The last step is to position and tape the triangular end piece of the tent as shown in the diagram. Care should be taken so that there are no folds in the plastic under the tape.

This tent will weigh approximately two pounds. It can be folded into a small bundle that will fit neatly into any pack.

"Baseball Days" slated at UM

The how's and why's of winning baseball as told by four former major league greats, and a round robin series among four top small college teams will highlight action at the first annual Baseball Classic- Clinic to be held Mar. 12-16 at the University of Montevallo.

Host coach and clinic director Bob Riesener released details of the five-day program this week, and named special guest lecturers on the clinic staff: Joe Sewell, brothers Frank and Milt Bolling, and former pitcher- manager Luman Harris.

In addition, Riesener and Birmingham Southern College baseball coach Roy Mewbourne will serve on the staff.

Riesener said the clinic is the most extensive program of its kind in Alabama in the past ten years. It is aimed primarily at high school, junior and senior college coaches, he said, but noted that coaches in Summer Youth Programs throughout the state are also being invited to attend.

Clinic sessions featuring the special guest speakers will be held nightly from 6:30-9 p.m. Tuesday through Friday, Mar. 12-15.

Sewell will be the clinic keynoter, lecturing Tuesday evening on "Hitting," to be followed Wednesday by Frank Bolling on the topic "Infield Play," on Thursday by Milt Billing with "Offensive Stretegy," and on Friday by Luman Harris with "Pitching and Catching."

Filling out the clinic program will be Coach Riesener on "Batting" and "Defensive Stretegy," and Coach Mewbourne on "Outfield Play."

Sewell is well known as a former major league player and scout, as a Crimson Tide baseball coach for six years -- his 1968 team captured the SEC crown -- and as a member of the Alabama Hall of Fame.

Frank Bolling played 13 years in the majors as a second baseman with the Detroit Tigers and the Braves of Milwaukee and Atlanta. He led both leagues in fielding in four different seasons, and was recipient of the Gold Glove Award in 1959. He was second baseman for the National League in the All-Star games of 1961 and 1962.

Milt Bolling spent five years as a shortstop with the Boston Red Sox, later going with the Washington Senators, Cleveland Indians and the Detroit Tigers where he teamed on the infield with brother Frank.

Luman Harris is an ex-major league pitcher as well as manager. He was on the hurling staff of Connie Mack's Philadelphia A's for some six years, later coaching the Chicago White Sox, the Baltimore Orioles and Houston.

The Baseball Classic will run Wednesday through Saturday and will feature round robin play between the University of Montevallo, Birmingham Southern, Huntingdon College and Illinois Benedictine.

Game time is 10 a.m., 1 p.m. and 4 p.m. daily.

Preceding all clinic activities will be a Press Day Golf Tournament and luncheon on Friday, Mar. 8. Riesener said sports writers and broadcasters from throughout the state have been invited to attend.

Clinic sponsor is the Montevallo Rotary Club; the Montevallo Jaycees are sponsoring the baseball classic.

Overnight accommodations are available on campus at a nominal cost, Riesener said, and Classic - Clinic participants wanting reservations should contact him before Mar. 1.

The Clinic registration fee entitles participants to attend all clinic sessions and all Classic games. Baseball team members will be admitted to all sessions and games if accompanied by their coaches, Riesener said.

Electric heating. How to use it this winter for all it's worth.

The ideas we're about to give you aren't really limited to electric heating. If you'll put them into practice, they'll help you make better use of the electricity that's involved in whatever kind of heating system you've got. And they'll help your whole system work at maximum efficiency.

It is generally accepted in the heating industry that your home heating system will operate at its maximum efficiency if you set the thermostat at the minimum comfort level and then leave it alone.

You'd also better be sure you're not heating the great outdoors, instead of the living room. Seal cracks around doors and windows, close dampers and block flues in unused fireplaces, and be sure your house is completely insulated. And, if you think you can't afford storm windows and doors, just remember that they can reduce heat loss by as much as 15 percent. But there's one part of the great outdoors you don't have to keep out, and that's the sunshine. Throw back the drapes, and let it in. On the shady side of the house, though, and at night, drawn drapes will help insulate your windows.

Now that we've given you some ideas, we'd like to give you some more. Not just about electric heating, but about using electricity better all around the house. Because electricity is energy derived from natural resources. And like all energy, it shouldn't be wasted. Just send the coupon for our free booklet. And learn to make electricity work more efficiently for you. Twelve months a year.

Two well known Main Streeters were chatting near my office window this morning. The subject was Labor vs. Capital. Finally one challenged the other to state the difference between capital and labor, the challenge was equal to the occasion.

The difference between labor and capital is this he said: "If you borrow $10 from me, that would be capital; if I tried to get it back, that would be labor" -- then, the two old cronies walked on up Main Street, one smoking his ever present pipe -- the other carrying the biggest umbrella we have ever seen.

Moonshiners improve skills

Moonshining has entered the age of technology. When federal agents uncovered a still near Ila, Ga., they were surprised to discover how complicated the operation was. "It takes a guy with an engineering degree to know how to set up one of these things," said one. "There can't be more than 20 persons anywhere in the area who could operate this thing, and half of them are already in jail."

Gamma rays are new weapon against crime

Police scientists, working on an assault case, checked the gamma rays emanating from a bit of dirt taken from the victim's sweater. Then they checked the gamma rays from dirt on the suspect's trousers.

The rays matched – and the evidence later helped to send the man to prison.

The case illustrates a potent new weapon ("neutron activation analysis") in the fight against crime. Gamma rays, under proper conditions, can reveal whether any two objects – no matter how small – came from the same source. The gamma rays are brought into action by "charging" the objects with radioactivity.

Already, the method has been used to track down the source of everything from paint to pipe fittings, from oats to heroin, from hair to moonshine.

THE FAMILY LAWYER

Nevertheless, like any new technique, it must be used with appropriate caution in order to qualify the findings as legal evidence.

Thus, in a murder case, comparisons of blood made with gamma rays were held not admissible because technical difficulties made these particular tests less than convincing. The court warned against "the misleading aura of certainty which often envelopes a new scientific process."

In one unusual case a taxpayer, claiming a refund from the government, staked everything on a scribbled notation in the margin of his checkbook. The government retorted that he might easily have inserted the notation years after the date of the original entries.

To settle the matter, scientists compared gamma rays from the ink in the notation with gamma rays from the ink in the rugular entries. The similarity of the rays convinced the government that the taxpayer was indeed telling the truth.

Result: he collected his refund in full.

New gasoline rulings cited

Gasoline and diesel fuel retailers may not modify their normal business practices to sell gas and diesel fuel only to regular customers, Dwight T. Baptist, District Director of Internal Revenue for Alabama said today.

Under regulation issued Feb. 12, 1974, by the Federal Energy Office, petroleum suppliers, including retailers, may not discriminate among purchasers of allocated petroleum products, Baptist said.

The regulation also prohibits new preferential arrangements involving volume sales by retailers, Baptist said. For example, it is illegal for a gasoline retailer to sign up a customer to purchase 1,000 gallons, $50 worth or a month's requirements in advance, he said.

Violations of this regulation could result in a civil penalty of $2,500, or a criminal penalty of $5,000, for each violation, Baptist said.

Baptist said that if after calling the regulation to the attention of the retailer, a customer is unable to resolve the matter, he should contact his local Internal Revenue office. The toll-free telephone number if 1-800-292-6300.

Fertilizer shortage causes record prices

"Some fertilizers are in short supply, but shortfalls are slight," said Clyde P. Mahaffey, Chairman of the Alabama Agricultural Stabilization and Conservation Committee. "Transportation and proper distribution, rather than supply, may become the real problems".

Shelby Countians intend to plant more corn, cotton, spring wheat, and other crops, and they will likely use record amounts of fertilizer on them Mahaffey said. Shipping record amounts will strain already overloaded transportation facilities, causing tight supplies and spot shortages.

Mr. Mahaffey outlined the supply situation in light of the latest preliminary estimates.

"Farmers are expected to use all available nitrogen fertilizers this spring", he said. "Supplies are larger than in 1973, but many more acres will be planted to corn, wheat, cotton, and other nitrogen users". Preliminary estimates are that the nitrogen available will fall five percent under what farmers want.

"Nitrogen prices have skyrocketed lately - a factor that may curb overuse", Mr. Mahaffey added. "For example, Anhydrous Amonia prices jumped 71 percent nationally between October 25 and January 21. Urea, because of its use as a feed and as an ingredient in mixed fertilizer, rose 69 percent nationally in the same time.

Phosphate rock supplies are tight, and in light of expected planings a ten percent phosphate shortfall could be in sight. Again, recent price jumps may cut into use - reducing shortfall. Prices for concentrated Superphosphate and Diamonium phosphate jumped 42 and 41 percent, respectively, between October 25 and January 21.

Potash is in adequate supply. Any shortage on farms are due to transportation difficulties. Potash prices paid by farmers increased 26 percent nationally between October 25 and January 21.

"Many fertilizers will bring record prices. Because of high prices and the tight situation, fertilizer conservation management is essential", Mr. Mahaffey advised. "Besides making maximum use of manure and crop residue, check the acidity level of your soil. And don't just stop with a soil test. Find out how much fertilizer your crops really need after the test."

Saving heat makes sense

by American Gas Assoc.

While government and industry are working on the costly job of making America "energy self- sufficient," the American public can do its part of the job - - and save money in the process.

The need for conserving energy -- winter and summer -- cannot be over- emphasized. And the important thing to remember about energy conservation, according to the American Gas Association, is that so much of it is common sense.

The natural gas industry has many suggestions to help conserve energy nationwide, and to help the average consumer minimize the effects of rising energy costs. Almost all of the following suggestions, provided by the experts at A.G.A., are small, everyday things that are easy to do.

One of the main concerns of the energy conscious home-owner should be thermostate control ... and location. Set your thermostate at the lowest comfortable setting, because each degree above the normal home comfort zone increases heating costs and energy usage significantly. Thermostat location is also extremely important. Make sure the thermostat is located where it's not unduly influenced by heat or cold.

Be sure the winter warmth and summer cool are kept circulating by leaving registers and cold air returns uncovered by furniture or draperies. If your home is not properly insulated, do it yourself and save money! Your hardware or building supply dealer can be helpful in recommending materials to meet your needs. Do-it- yourself instructions can be found at most public libraries. Caulking and weatherstripping are also important to keep cold drafts out of your home. Caulk the cracks between window and door frames, and weatherstrip spaces around doors and windows.

If you can afford the initial cost of storm windows, they certainly pay off in the long run, since you may be losing as much as 20 percent of your heat without them. Also, if your fireplace has a damper, be sure it's closed when not in use.

COMPUTER–AIDED STUDIES - - Computer terminals such as this one have been important study aids to engineering students at Auburn University, and they will be demonstrated Friday as a part of the university's E-Day observance of National Engineers Week. Nominations open for non-polluters

The City of Birmingham's Environmental Improvement Awards Selection Committee is seeking nominations of industrial firms in the Birmingham Metropolitan Area that have made significant efforts in the area of pollution abatement and environmental quality improvement. The area includes Shelby County.

The committee, which was created by Mayor George G. Seibels, Jr. and the Birmingham City Council, has mailed out letters and nomination forms to area industries. However, the committee is also seeking nominations from the general public. Nomination forms are available from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. MOnday through Friday in the City Council Office on the third floor at City Hall. The deadline for nominations is 5 p.m. March 1.

The names of the winning firms will be announced at the city's Second Annual Environmental Improvement Awards Dinner at 7 p.m., April 4, in the Exhibition Hall of Municipal Auditorium. The featured speaker at the dinner will be Oregon Governor Tom McCall, a leader in the field of improving environmental quality.

Last year's winning firms were: Connors Steel, Griffin Wheel Company, Swift Agricultural Chemical Corporation, Cleveland Metal Abrasive Company and Harbison- Walker Refractories Company.

Graphic art sale and show set at UM

An exhibition and sale of original graphic art by contemporary and old master artists will be held at the University of Montevallo on Friday, Feb. 22.

Sponsored by the university's College of Fine Arts, the event is scheduled from 11 a.m. to 5 p.m. in the lobby of the Student Union Building on the Montevallo campus.

Arranged by the Ferdinand Roten Galleries of Baltimore, the exhibition includes over 1,000 original etchings, lithographs and woodcuts by some of the world's most renowned artists.

Among those whose works will be featured are Picasso, Chagall, Miro, Dali, Goya, Renoir, and Kollowitz. Also included are works by contemporary American, European and Japanese printmakers.

I-65 bridges are contracted

The Insterstate 65 project between Alabaster and Pelham is moving ahead. Governor Wallace has announced that contracts will be let February 22 for the construction of bridges on I-65 near Alabaster and Pelham.

Eighteen other counties will also be involved in the $14 million in contracts that will be let by the Alabama Highway Department. Another interstate project is in the air as I-59 is to be extended from 19th Street to Tallapoosa Street in Birmingham.

Other major projects to be let include construction in Baldwin and DeKalb counties, plus work on the Governor's Death Trap Elimination Program calling for resurfacing and reconstruction of various roadways in the state.

Proper diet prevents many tooth disorders

Tooth decay, one of the commonest of all human diseases, can be greatly reduced by the use of one of the simplest preventive remedies known to man -- good nutrition.

A proper diet geared for general good h alth and started in infancy, including proper pre-natal care, will provide all the nutritional needs for developing, and maintaining oral structures, including teeth.

Studies have indicated that the most damage is done within 15 or 20 minutes after eating decay- causing foods. The person who eats many between- meal sweet snacks exposes his teeth to the full effects of the bacterial acids repeatedly throughout the day.

Sweets are not the only villains contributing to tooth decay. Gummy foods cling to the teeth and pack between them until the next brushing and flossing.

"Empty calorie" carbohydrates, such as unenriched white bread and certain breakfast cereals, provide little protein or iron needed for building body tissues and resisting infections. They also lack the important vitamins and minerals found in fresh fruits, vegetables and meats.

The rules governing the prevention of tooth decay can also be applied to the prevention of periodontal disease:

--Limit the intake of carbohydrates, especially sweets. Where possible, substitute fresh fruits and vegetables like carrot sticks, cucumber slices and celery for snacks rather than candy or cookies. An occasional sweet snack won't reverse the prevention process, but serve it after a meal and clean your mouth afterward, if possible.

--Learn the basic foods your family needs every day and plan family meals accordingly.

--Daily, serve enough fresh fruits and vegetables and other fibrous foods to give your family's chewing muscles a good workout.

--Set up a plaque control routine where everyone brushes and flosses regularly.

--Arrange periodic professional checkups for the whole family.

Since 1968--

UM doubles enrollment

Enrollment at the University of Montevallo is at an all-time high, according to university administrative officials, with a current registration of some 3,648 students.

This figure reflects a 16 percent increase over 1972-73, and is double the 1968 enrollment.

Of the current figure, nearly 3,000 are in degree- granting programs. In addition, some 670 students are enrolled in course work at the U.M. Traffic Safety Center, including a number of law enforcement personnel working in non-degree programs of skills improvement.

Substantial enrollment increases are noted by admissions officials in traffic education, speech pathology and audiology, social work and business courses. They also pointed to a significant increase in graduate enrollment, especially among teachers seeking master's degrees and AA certification.

University President Dr. Kermit Johnson attributed the increase largely to a sizable population increase in south Jefferson County and north Shelby County.

"Because of the tremendous increase in population in these areas," he said, "the University of Montevallo looks forward to continued growth in the future."

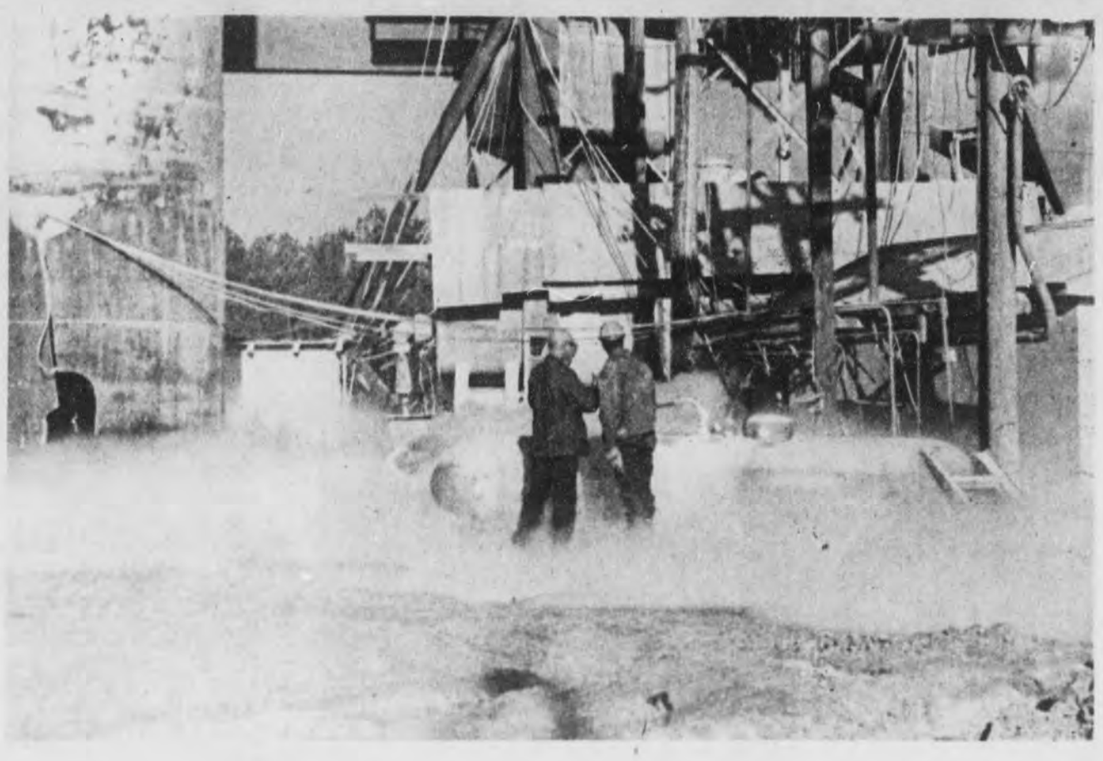
Boundary changes race



The new boundary lines brought on by the court ordered reapportionment of Alabama, have already caused one candidate to withdraw from a race for the state senate.

Jack Farmer of Alabaster, formerly mayor of Siluria, qualified last week to run in the 18th district of the senate, against the incumbent, Obie Littleton of Clanton.

At the time he qualified, Farmer was told he resided in the 18th senatorial district by the state attorney general's office. However, after filing, it was discovered that Farmer's home is just across the line in district 17. He is withdrawing as a candidate because, in his words, he does not know the majority of the people or the problems of the 17th district.

The 17th district includes north Alabaster, Helena, Pelham, and the Cahaba Valley in Shelby County. It also includes a heavily populated section of Jefferson County and a large part of Tuscaloosa County. Tom Stubbs of Helena has filed papers to urn in this district. Eddie Gilmore has also filed.

The 18th district is composed of the remainder of Shelby County, south Talladega County, a portion of Leeds, and all of Coosa and Chilton Counties, and this is the district Farmer wanted to represent.

A SPARK IS ALL IT TAKES - - Fog? no, gas. A very dangerous situation developed at Montevallo Limestone Company last Wednesday morning when a 5,000 gallon tank of propane gas was ruptured by heavy equipment. Donald Green and Tommy Oglesby check to see that additional tanks have been closed off. The road was blocked, homes were evacuated and the Montevallo fire department stood by as the propane blanket finally dissipated. Plant operations resumed a few hours later. Rural pickup starts on Friday, March 1

The long-awaited county wide garbage pickup service gets underway March 1. It will serve everyone who resides outside the city limits of the ten municipalities.

The County Commission signed the necessary agreements at its Monday meeting with four private garbage collection businesses.

Under the franchise agreements, the collectors will have the responsibility to notify the residents of every dwelling and every business within their jurisdiction. As quickly as possible, exact routes and days of service will be worked out and customers notified.

Any person who is not willing to subscribe to the service of the company assigned to that area will be reported to the county health department. Such persons may get a permit to haul their own wastes to the county landfill, but no other collector will be licensed to operate in each of the four franchised areas.

Franchise Area 1 will be served by J and J Garbage Service Collection, 665-7739; Area 2 by dependable Garbage Service, 786-3424; Area 3 by N.E.C. of Alabama, Inc. 595-1183; and Area 4 by Whitfield Garbage Service 663-0086. These are the companies already serving the greatest numbers of customers in the areas, and this will lessen the number of households changing collectors.

Area One extends from east Calera west to Pea Ridge, south of Highway 25. Area Two is north and west of Alabaster and includes most of the high-growth area of the Cahaba Valley.

Area Three is the big eastern section of the county.

Area Four is the area north of Montevallo and Calera but south of Alabaster.

Maps are available in the county highway department, the county health department and the county commission office.

James L. Ray, Jr., said this program culminates several years of steady, carefully studied progress to bring the county into full compliance with state law. He said it is far more effective than other types of collection and entails less effort on the part of the householder. He added, "This program, though thoroughly thought out, depends upon full participation and cooperation if it is to work. And it must work if a more costly and possibly less satisfactory solution is not to be substituted."

If conditions permit, special additional services other than collection at the curb may be offered by the collectors. However, the agreements executed this week require only that the collector pick up waste material in standard garbage cans up to 35 gallons capacity placed at the curb or roadside.

Collection must be once per week except in certain highly developed areas where twice per week collection must be offered for $5.40 per month. The basic once per week service at $3.90 per month must be provided to any occupied home or business anywhere in Shelby County, outside of city limits and not within Oak Mountain State Park.

CLAUDE FORE

Claude Fore seeks coroner's office

Claude Fore, who served nine years as Montevallo chief of police, four years as sheriff of Shelby County, and served as chief deputy under three sheriffs, has qualified to run for Shelby County coroner.

Fore came to Shelby County in 1925. He lived in Boothton and Montevallo before moving to Columbiana.

He was a deputy under all the sheriffs of the county from 1925 through 1942 when he entered the Navy as a personnel investigator.

He was sheriff from 1935 to 1939. Following his Navy service, he served as chief deputy under Sheriffs W.B. White, A.E. Norwood and C.P. Walker.

Fore told the Reporter that if elected Coroner, he would "be as fair as I know how to everybody, and treat everyone equally."

Fore is married, and has two children, a son in electronics in Ohio, and a daughter who is a medical doctor in Birmingham.

AFTERMATH - - Much of the Harold Miller dairy farm near Vincent stands damaged or destroyed after a tornado touched down there Thursday night. The broken silo in the background was completely ruined and will have to be torn down. See section B for the story.

Water line becoming reality

City water may soon become a reality for Shelby County residents who live on Lay Lake. The Spring Creek Water Authority is proposing to build a water line to serve lakefront residents living in the area between Shelby Shores and Waxahatchee Creek.

George Eller, the secretary-treasurer of the water authority, told the Reporter that 603 subscribers are required by a loan company before the Spring Creek Authority can borrow funds to construct the water line. The number of subscribers is based on a figure needed to begin paying on the interest and the principal of the loan. However, Eller stated that the water line could serve over 1,000 customers if needed.

Eller disclosed that enough subscribers have already signed or are expected to sign up for water in all the proposed service areas except Shelby Shores.

Residents of this lake area desiring a water hook-up may apply either at Spring Creek Grocery on the lake or at Columbiana Drug Company.

Eller said that the water authority has extended the deadline for signing up for water until March 4.

After that, Eller projects that the contracts for construction of the new water line will be awarded in early April.

The 'bug' strikes students and teachers

Shelby County schools are being hit hard by the new strain of influenza. Large numbers of absences plagued the county's public and private schools last week, as teachers and students missed class with the sickness. Shelby Academy closed because of the flu on Friday, February 22.

During the week as many as twenty-two per cent of the Academy's students were sick, according to the school's Mr. Baker. He said that when one third of the teachers missed school Thursday, it was decided that they would close to give everyone a long weekend to recuperate. Since they had an extra day in their calendar, the private school chose to take a day off.

The public schools in the county were affected in varying degrees by the flu epidemic. Columbiana Elementary School reports better attendance this week than they had had for the week of February 11 through 15. They had nearly one hundred students absent out of four hundred, though not more than two teachers were out at the same time.

Thompson High School has passed its flu crisis, according to principal Allen Fulton. He said that Thompson was hit hardest in the first week of the month, with 160 to 200 students absent each day. Fulton added that the situation was much worse that week when six to seven teachers were absent daily. He stated that though absenteeism is still unusually high, Thompson High has passed the most severe part of the wave of influenza.

The past few days have been the worst at Chelsea School, with numerous absences in all grades, one through twelve. Up to 20 percent of the students have been missing school since last Thursday the 21st. According to the principal, not many teachers are missing however.

Montevallo was among the first places for the flu to gain a hold. Montevallo High School's principal W.C. Corbett stated that more than two weeks ago

In north Shelby County--

Jack Vaughn enters District 51 race

Jack R. Vaughn a Vestavia pharmacist, will seek election to the Alabama House of Representatives from District 51. This district includes the northwest section of Shelby County and parts of south Jefferson County.

Vaughn is a Samford University graduate. He and his wife are co-owners of Bluff Park Pharmacy. They have four children, all of whom attend public school in Vestavia Hills.

A conservative, he says he is opposed to special interest groups and big business being represented in the legislature.

He believes more citizens should take a greater interest in local government and also should speak out.

He says he will work for well planned and continued industrial growth of the district and the entire state, providing more jobs and income.

The 34 year old candidate holds membership in several fraternal and civic organizations. He is a member of Dawson Memorial Baptist Church.

WRECKAGE - - Onlookers watch as a state trooper examines the wrecked car driven by Harpersville resident Paul Butler. The accident occured on a windy Wednesday afternoon, Feb. 20, as Butler hit a pickup truck and rolled off the road. He was taken to the Brookwood Hospital.

Harpersville man injured

Paul Butler of Harpersville was badly injured in an automobile wreck which occurred at about 3 p.m. February 21 a few miles south of Harpersville on highway 25.

Butler apparently tried to pass a truck making a left turn, when he grazed the truck's rear end. His car then rolled end over end, and a couple of rolls sideways. Butler was thrown from the car into a roadside field where the car stopped on its side.

The driver of the truck, J.T. Spates of Harpersville, was not injured when the car bumped him. Spates said that young Butler sped past him as he made the turn. The slight collision and stormy winds on Thursday afternoon combined to overturn the car.

Police and ambulances arrived within minutes, and Butler was taken to Brookwood hospital with apparent leg and shoulder injuries. Paul Butler is the son of Mr. and Mrs. James A. Butler of Harpersville. He was listed in satisfactory condition shortly after he was admitted.

Train strikes truck in county accident

Some 200 vacation bound midwesterners were inconvenienced Saturday evening in an accident that miraculously ended with no injuries.

Amtrak Train 52, the crack passenger train known as the Floridian running from Chicago to Miami, struck a huge tractor trailer rig amidships Saturday night. The accident occured at an L a& N crossing on County Road 26 in South Alabaster. The crossing is next to Alabaster Lime Company's quarry.

Greg Barnes, of Fultondale, driver of the truck told WBYE, "It was the most horrible feeling I've ever had". Barnes went on to explain that he was returning to the quarry after taking a load of unprocessed limestone to Alabaster Lime Company's plant in Alabaster.

Barnes stated that as he came down a rather steep hill and approached the grade crossing he applied his brakes, but nothing happened. He then saw the approaching fast passenger train. He tried to swerve and at the same time get across the crossing.

He was successful in getting the tractor almost across when the front end of the passenger train's engine struck the tractor's rear wheels.

The impact unhitched the trailer from the tractor, slung the tractor into a nearby ditch on one side of the tracks and threw the empty trailer some 180 feet down the tracks on the opposite side of the tracks.

G.F. Southerland, the train's conductor told the Reporter that the train traveled a quarter of a mile before coming to a stop. Southerland, whose home is Columbia, Tennessee said the train was carrying approximately 200 passengers.

Juan Sala, of Miami, the train's service director, said most of the passengers were from Chicago and most were vacationers with Miami as their destination.

Sgt. Leroy Davis of the Alabaster Police Department indicated the accident occured at approximately 5:45.

The passenger train was operating on the L&N line and was detained for more than three hours while L&N officials, State Trooper Burk, and officials of the Keith Williams Trucking Company make their investigations.

A heavy metal plate, presumably a part of the tractor-trailer rig became lodged under the front of the train's engine and also contributed to the delay.

FHA changes loan rules

Good news comes out of the Farmers Home Administration office this week for persons who want to build new homes.

The regulation of adjusted family income has been increased from $8,700 to $10,300 by the FHA. This means that families who earn up to $10,300 are now eligible for a low-cost loan through the FHA.

According to Roger Traywick, FHA administrator for Shelby County, this change will enable many more Shelby County residents to finance adequate housing facilities.

Housing loans are available through FHA for the purchase, construction and repair of homes and related facilities.

The loans are repayable over a maximum period of 33 years and the interest rate at present is 8¼ percent per annum.

Anyone interested in obtaining information regarding the loan assistance program should contact the county office of the FHA in Room 207 of the courthouse in Columbiana. The telephone number is 669-6211.

Airing their views--

Streakers are off and running

by Fred Cooper

They're off and running!

Well, something's off and everybody's sure running. I'm referring, of course, to the latest fad among students--Streaking.

According to semi-reliable reports, these being the only kind I ever get, some area schools are planning to field teams in the Streaking category and set up a league. It would really be a worthwhile sport, since both men and women could participate and the cost of uniforms would be negligble.

For those of you who may not be familiar with the art of Streaking, the procedure is as follows: the person, either male or female, who is designated as the Streaker or Streakette, dons a ski mask, sock pulled over the head, or goggles, and usually tennis shoes.

That's about it in the dressing department.

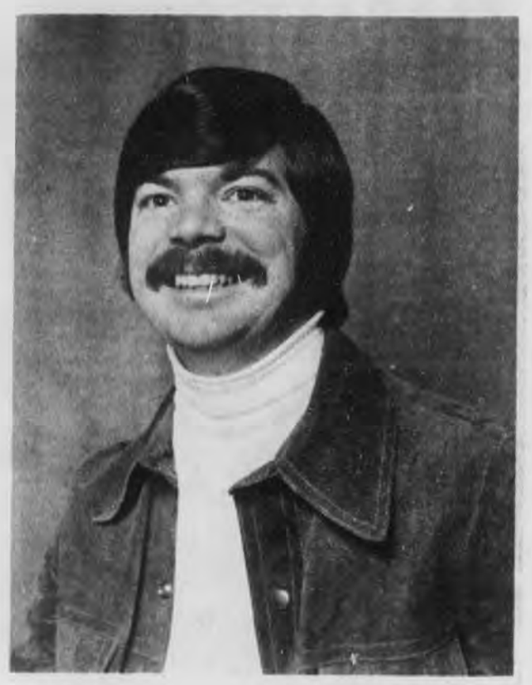
Having modestly covered these strategic areas, the Streaker then finds a good starting and finishing point and goes rapidly from one to the other. Generally, it's a well-travelled route.

This sort of thing has just recently cropped up on campuses in Alabama but Steve Huffstutler claims the original Streaker was at Auburn way back when he was in sc'.ool. He points out that the beginner of the movement did not actively seek out the honor, however. He was taken from his dorm room by some fun-loving classmates, stripped, and driven to the crowded student center area.

Once there, he was let out of the car and left to his own devices.

He immediately developed Streaking.

Since word moves pretty slowly out of Auburn, nobody heard about it until two weeks ago.



I think that there's a lot of good that can come from this. First, we're going to see more students jogging around in order to get in shape for the mad dashes. No Streaker wants to get halfway to his objective, run out of wind, and fall on his .....ummm ..... well, fall. Cigarette smoking well be cut back. Those wishing to Streak but who are overweight will trim down. Nobody wants to watch a fat Streaker. In fact, a whole new era of body- building may begin.

There are also the obvious benefits of being out in the fresh air, mingling with your peers, and Belonging.

The one bad aspect of Streaking is that it will almost have to be confined to the young. Somehow I can't imagine Ralph Sears or Chuck King or Mike Mahan Streaking about the countryside.

I think that I'm going to have to pass, too. I was intending to try it the other day. I was going to Streak through the building to my office until I considered that my office is on the seventh floor and the inadvisibility of Streaking on the elevator. So I called it off.

It was just as well. I forgot to bring my equipment.

Teacher thankful for help from pros

Letter to the Editor:

During the past four weeks the First Grade classes at Thompson Elementary School have been actively involved in the study of Public Service Careers. The study has been prompted by our participation in the Shelby County schools pilot project in Career Education.

Our current study has met with so much success in great part because members of our own community have willingly and enthusiastically shared with us information about their own careers in public service. I wish to thank them in behalf of the 230 children in the first grade, their teachers and our principal for their thoughtful participation in this program.

Sincerely,
(Mrs.) Mary T. Gleason

COURTSHIP, MARRIAGE AND THE FAMILY

By Herbert J. Miles, Ph.D.

MARRIAGE COUNSELING

Q. Dr. Miles, a couple who are close friends of mine, are having marriage problems. I have encouraged them to see a marriage counselor. They are both tempted to do so, as they both want to save their marriage. But they are not familiar with marriage counselors, or what to expect concerning counseling expense and procedure. Will you write a column on marriage counseling. (Mrs. S. E.)

A. A marriage counselor always welcomes clients when both husband and wife want to save their marriage. It is better to seek help before problems become critical. Your friends seem to be asking: Who? What will it cost? What procedures can be expected?

WHO? The clergymen (Pastors, Priests, Rabbis) of the United States probably do more marriage counseling than any other group. I recommend them. There is usually a marriage counselor on the staff of the local Social Welfare Department or The Mental Health Clinic, or they will make referrals to professional counselors. There are many individual marriage counseling agencies such as Concordia Counseling Center, 2919 elborn, Dallas, Texas .5219 (Lutheran), Crane Pastoral Counseling, Willowwynde, Beech Haven, Athens, Georgia, 30601 (Presbyterian), Hudson Counseling Center, 800 West 47th Street, Kansas City, Missouri 64112 (Baptist), and Jones Counseling Service, 405 South Washington, P. O. Box 177, Seymour, Texas (Methodist), to name only a few. Each agency may have several counselors on their staff. There are two national organizations of marriage counselors in the United States of America. The American Association of Marriage and Family Counselors, 225 Yale Ave., Claremont, California, 91711; and the National Alliance for Family Life, 10734 Paramount Blvd., Dawney, California 90241. Many of the above counselors belong to one or both of these national organizations.

WHAT WILL IT COST? Individual professional marriage counselors and those on the staff of private agencies make a living from fees as do doctors and dentists. They usually spend an hour at each session with clients. Fees may run from $10.00 to $20.00 or more an hour. The local Social Welfare Agencies normally charge a fee on a sliding scale according to ability to pay. Although cost must be considered, other factors are more important in selecting a marriage counselor. Dr. Paul Papenoe says "Do not pick from a phone book, or any other advertising medium . . . It is important that you get a marriage counselor who is happily married, preferably also has a family, and who has unimpeachable character and personality . . . Only a counselor who is warm, understanding, and energetic is likely to help. This matter of personality and character is more important than prestigious college degrees or membership in professional organizations." In many communities it is difficult to find an acceptable marriage counselor. "In that case" Dr. Papenoe says "Your best guess is likely to be a clergyman who is well-known and esteemed." When both husband and wife want to save their marriage, and when they have a warm understanding counselor the results should be favorable.

WHAT PROCEDURES CAN BE EXPECTED? The procedures will vary with counselors. A counselor may want to see both husband and wife separately for one or more sessions each and then see them together in one final session. If the counselor is a clergyman, one will expect the counseling to involve some religious principles and prayer. The counselor will give support to both husband and wife without taking sides. He will avoid blaming either but will try to help both to understand themselves and each other. (Usually the responsibility is about fifty-fifty.) He may point out that marriage problems occur in such conflict areas as money, in-laws, sex, religion, child training and social life. The counselor usually wants clients to talk. He listens and guides the conversation by raising questions.

Many counselors follow the procedures known as "Reality Therapy," popularized by William Glasser. During the sessions the counselor will point out the essential human needs such as (1) the need for social acceptance, (The feeling of being an outcast is painful.) (2) the need to love and be loved, and (3) the need for self-expression, that is, the need to succeed as a person and be a part of the on-going of society. When any person is unable to meet these needs in society he feels insecure and begins to deny reality. The wise counselor will, by listening, attempt to locate the unrealistic behavior of each counselee and will skillfully suggest alternative ways, better ways the husband and wife can fulfill their individual and marriage needs within the reality of their total situation.

Political races and alignments shaping up

by Don Wasson

Political activity reached the high-intensity level last week, with Gov. George Wallace embarking on a third-term campaign and Atty. Gen. Bill Baxley announcing for his second term.

Indicative of the intensity that prevails at this level of state politics was the announcement by Court of Criminal Appeals Judge John DeCarlo that he would seek a full term of that bench, thus squelching rumors that he would run against Baxley for attorney general.

Those rumors were started in the first place by those in the Wallace camp who owe their loyalties to the governor's brother, Gerald Wallace, and it was their way of saying to Bill Baxley, "Get off Gerald's Back."

Baxley has been pushing the investigation of a fraudulent scheme in the State Highway Department and it has been reported that Gerald Wallace is involved in that scheme. He has denied any involvement and Gov. George Wallace says he believes his younger brother.

Evidently the political ploy involving Judge DeCarlo rubbed the governor the wrong way and DeCarlo was called off. Either that or the Gerald Wallace plotters discovered what a lot of people have come to realize, and that is that Bill Baxley may be a lot stronger politically at this moment than George Wallace.

At this writing, he is unopposed for renomination. And with the DeCarlo threat staring him in the eye, Baxley let it be known to the Wallace camp that if DeCarlo wanted to be attorney general, then he, Baxley, just might decide to make the race for governor this year rather than four years from now.

In a head to head race, Wallace would very likely beat Baxley. But it would be a tough, grueling race and as the governor's race stands right now, Wallace will breeze to victory.

It also appears that as of this time, Baxley has a much better leg up on the 1978 governor's race than does the lieutenant governor, Jere Beesley.

It was thought for a while that Beasley might make the race this year but he has discovered that discretion IS ths better part of valor and is seeking a second term as presiding officer of the Senate, which he has made a full time job, regardless of what the Constitution and statuatory law say.

He has the advantage of having a job which makes no real demands of his time except when the legislature is in session and having a pretty good sized staff with which to campaign for the next four years.

That staff has been working for three years and one month promoting his image and after four more years, it should be pretty well promoted. As far as voter identification goes, there won't be a voter in Alabama who doesn't recognize the Beasley name.

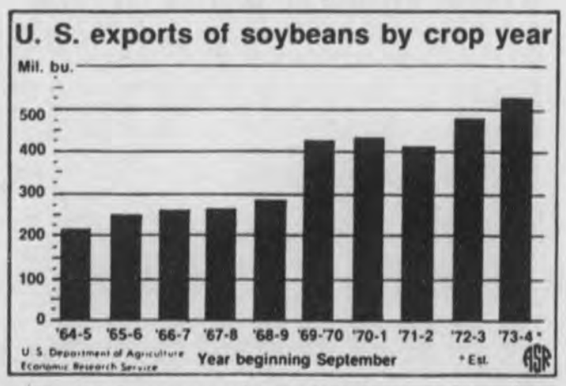
The conduct of the 1975 and 1977 legislative sessions may have a lot to do with how that name is identified – good or bad but everybody will know Beasley.

As for Baxley, four more years of taking on the Big Mules and of actively enforcing state laws which have, in the past, been largely ignored or openly flaunted, Baxley is not exactly going unnoticed, either.

Demos attempt party unity

Louise Lindolom, coordinator of the newly formed "Affirmative Action Committee" of the Democratic Party today urged "all Democrats" who feel they have something to contribute to the party to run for party office, particularly for delegate to the National Democratic "Mini" Convention.

The first job of the "Affirmative Action Committee" is to encourage "all Democrats, especially those groups of Democrats that have been traditionally underrepresented within the party's decision- making circle, to run for office", Mrs. Lindblom said.



The 1974 National Democratic Charter Conference, or "Mini" Convention will perhaps be the most important gathering of Democrats ever to assemble since the decisions made at the conference will determine the future course of the party.

The delegate race is the only race which does not require a qualification fee. All that is required to have one's name on the ballot is that the person must fill out qualifying papers and have them filed before the deadline, noon, March 1st.

Mrs. Lindblom declared that "anyone who is dissatisfied with the way our government is being run, or who feels that he or she has something to contribute to the Party, should run for delegate or some other Party office".

Residents of Shelby County would run in District 5, which is composed of Shelby and St. Clair counties and the portions of legislative districts within Jefferson County: 15, 31, and parts of 51 and 52.

Booming Export Markets Assure Strong Soybean Prices

The U.S. Department of Agriculture forecasts that soybean exports during the 1973-74 marketing year will total around 525 million bushels, compared with 480 million in 1972-73. Soybean meal exports are also expected to rise by around 17 percent, to a total of 5.5 million short tons. Increasing world livestock and poultry production practically assure a steadily growing need for soybean meal, according to the Department of Agriculture.

Despite this strong demand situation, January planting intentions show a decline in 1974 soybean acreage from 57 to 54.9 million acres. The combination of strong demand and lower production should result in another excellent year for growers who maintain soybean acreage and take the care required to get good yields.

The Watergate trail leads to Middle East capital city

by Jack Anderson

(Copyright, 1974, by United Feature Syndicate, Inc.)

RIYADH — I have followed the Watergate trails all the way to the Middle East. Witnesses have told the Senate Watergate investigators that millions were funneled into President Nixon's campaign from such Middle Eastern potentates as the Shah of Iran and the Saudi Arabian royal family.

The name of Adnam Khashoggi has been mentioned in the secret testimony. He is a mysterious man-about-the-world, who has excellent contacts in the ruling Saudi circles.

I tracked him down to his home in Riyadh, the remote capital of Saudi Arabia. He also has an office in Riyadh under the name of the Triat International Marketing Co.

But Adnam Khashoggi is never in one place for long. I reached his brother, who said Adnam was in Khartoum. No one seemed to know where he would be heading from there.

According to the secret testimony, Adnam Khashoggi delivered the Saudi money to the Nixon campaign. So far, however, I have been unable to catch up with Khashoggi. And the Senate investigators haven't gotten as close as I have.

It is not Khashoggi, but Saudi Arabia's King Faisal who can do the most to help Nixon now. Faisal, the absolute ruler of the world's largest oil reserves, will make the final decision whether to relieve America's oil shortage.

He is intensely anti-Communist. Therefore, he lined up solidly behind the United States and against the Soviet Union during the cold war.

But he is also intensely anti-Zionist. He finally shut off oil exports to the United States in retaliation for U. S. arms shipments to Israel during the October war.

No one can be certain what goes on in the mind of the brooding, hawk-like Faisal. Those who are close to him say he has a strong sense of honor and of loyalty to his friends.

They say he still regards the United States as a friend, despite its aid to Israel. He cut off the oil, partly to strengthen his voice in the Arab world, partly to remind the Americans not to take him for granted.

But quietly, he is using his new prestige in the Arab world to argue for moderation. He is also trying to persuade other Arab oil producers to hold down prices.

In the end, say those who know Faisal, he will still be in America's corner.

Other powers are also lusting for Faisal's oil.

The outer office of Sheik Ahmed Zaki Yamani reveals, in a glimpse, the world's changing power patterns. Yamani is Saudi Arabia's oil minister. Saudi Arabia's sea of petroleum under its hot sands makes Yamani one of the world's most powerful men.

In his outer office, a gruff American oil baron almost groveled before Yamani's appointments secretary. A rich Lebanese businessman, whose aides scurried to make him comfortable, did the scurrying when Yamani's deputy entered the room. Three Japanese, who had just arrived from Tokyo, bowed lower than usual when they approached the appointments secretary.

They all knew that Yamani has them over the oil barrel. He spoke to me softly and thoughtfully about the world oil shortage. It was better for Saudi Arabia, he said, to hold down production.

But to ease the crisis, he said, Saudi wells will soon be producing nine million barrels a day. It will take a few years and millions of dollars in development, he said, to reach the 20-million-barrel output he has promised.

Meanwhile, he believes continued exploration will double Saudi Arabia's already vast oil reserves.

The money pouring into Riyadh could create other problems.

There is ominous talk in Saudi Arabia of using some of the nation's oil billions to purchase nuclear weapons. Responsible Saudi leaders told me they may have to acquire a nuclear arsenal for the Arab world to counter the Israeli nuclear threat.

They are convinced that the Israelis are building nuclear warheads. As the Saudis see it, if peace should fail, another Arab-Israeli war is inevitable. Next time, the Saudis believe, the Arab armies will do better. The Israelis, as a last resort, might use their nuclear weapons.

It is this possibility which has the Arabs worried. Today, the Saudis have the money and their oil gives them the clout to arm the Arab side with nuclear weapons.

No overtures have yet been made, according to my Saudi sources, to obtain nuclear arms. But the idea has been seriously discussed in the Arab capitals.

The approach is more likely to be made to the French, or perhaps the British, than to the Russians. The Saudis believe the French would sell nuclear weaponry, if necessary, to keep their oil pipelines filled.

Clearly, another blow-up in the Middle East could be catastrophic.

Treaty would have grave implications

Dear Senator Sparkman: I want to express my displeasure at the thought of giving away the Panama Canal. The Canal was completed by the U.S. at a tremendous expense of lives and money, after other ventures failed, and at a time when Panama's only hope for some semblance of success in its economy was the thought of a U.S. built canal. In return for certain benefits, including a much higher standard of living, Panama contracted to hand over its former territorial rights in the Canal Zone to the United States. Whatever you may do to protect our interests there will be greatly appreciated.
P.K., Linden

Sparkman: Over the years I have had grave misgivings about the possibility of "giving up" the Canal Zone. In addition to foreign policy considerations we must look into the military implications of such a treaty. While I have not had an opportunity to study fully the provisions of the proposed treaty you can be assured that it will receive very careful scrutiny in the Foreign Relations Committee, of which I am a member.

Dear Senator Sparkman: What is the procedure for an individual wishing to make use of the dollar checkoff on income tax use in political campaigns?

Sparkman: On the regular 1040 and 1040A Federal income tax form, line 8 is entitled "Presidential Election Campaign Fund." Taxpayers wishing to direct one dollar of their taxes to the fund simply check the box on that line. If it is a joint return, there is a second box for a total of two dollars.

If the taxpayer did not make use of this option last year (1972) return) he or she may now do so by additionally checking off a second set of boxes in the line entitled "Note" directly above the signature line at the bottom. This will direct an additional one dollar (or two dollars in joint returns) from the paid taxes to the fund.

Thus, in 1973 a taxpayer may direct a total of two dollars (or a total of four dollars in joint returns) to the fund by checking off both line 8 for 1973 and the additional line at the bottom, in order to retroactively checkoff for 1972.

Booklet gives tips to prevent burglary

Preventive measures to protect your home from burglary and fire and to protect yourself from home accidents are outlined in a free "Guide to Home and Personal Security" prepared for persons in the 50-plus age group by Action for Independent Maturity (AIM).

Noting the increasing rate of home burglaries, particularly in the suburbs, the Guide points out that burglars tend to look for "easy pickings." By providing basic information on locks, lights, burglar alarms and automatic timers, the Guide can help "make your home a more difficult and unattractive target for thieves."

Also highly recommended is an identification program now established in a number of U.S. cities in which a citizen engraves his valuable objects with an identification number that is known to the police.

The greatest threat to your life and well-being in the home is the common home accident, according to the Guide, particularly accidents caused by the careless handling and misuse of electrical appliances. A checklist designed to help you check safety standards around the home and "think safety" is included.

In a section on fire prevention, the Guide points out that most home fires can be prevented if families are aware of "principle risk" areas in the house and of how to safeguard them.

Also included is a section which explains the different types of homeowners insurance and suggests how much coverage your home should have.

The Guide to Home and Personal Safety is one of a series of booklets published by AIM to help pre-retirees plan for successful living in their mature years. A division of the six-million-member American Association of Retired Person, AIM also provides budget stretching insurance, pharmany and travel services and publishes Dynamic Maturity magazine bi-monthly.

For a free copy of the guide, please write: Home and Personal Security Guide, AIM, 1909 K Street, N.W., Washington, D.C. 20006.

When you don't pretend

One of life's most pleasant moments is when your children get to the age where you don't have to pretend any longer that you know everything.

A four-year-old girl was explaining a bathroom scale to her friend. "All I know is when they stand on it, it makes them angry."

The only reason you don't send a boy to do a man's job is because you never can find him.

USDA briefs stores about new food stamps

Grocery store owners in Shelby County will be briefed on the simple procedures involved in the new food stamp program at a meeting in Alabaster Monday.

USDA's Food and Nutrition Service is scheduling the meeting to inform Shelby County's 100 grocers of the Food Stamp Program which begins in this county soon.

"We want to stress how easy and simple it is for the grocery stores," said M.L. McKinnon, a representative of the Food and Nutrition Service, who will be at the meeting Monday at 2 p.m. at Thompson High Auditorium in Alabaster.

"Is it important that all retail and wholesale food merchants in the county attend this meeting to find out how they can apply for participation in the food stamp program," the official said.

Grocers must be authorized before they can accept food coupons, explained McKinnon. At Monday's meeting he explained the procedure for becoming authorized and handed out application forms to the grocers.

"Grocers who do not participate in the stamp program will find that they lost several food sales and sometimes permanent customers," said McKinnon.

He advised them to become authorized before the program starts, although it will be possible to do this anytime afterwards also.

"If they are not ready to accept coupons on the first day of the program, the grocers may still lose some business," he said.

After the application forms are given out Monday grocers can begin the next day to become authorized.

Shelby County has about 100 grocery stores and supermarkets that could participate in the program, said McKinnon.

Representatives of the Food and Nutrition Service will be at the meeting Monday to explain the program fullly and advise grocers how they can apply for participation, what their responsibilities would be, and the benefits ot the program.

Certified families exchange the amount of money they have been spending on food each month for coupons. Depending on the size of the family and other factors, they receive an additional amount of coupons free to supplement their food budget. The amount of free coupons varies from family to family.

The coupons, about the size of a dollar bill, are spent like cash for the purchase of food at authorized retail stores.

Food coupons will be issued only to families determined by the Department of Pensions and Security to be in need of food assistance.

Eligible families include those receiving public assistance, such as persons with dependent children, the aged, the disabled and the blind.

By Montevallo council--

New traffic rule adopted

Montevallo has joined the growing list of cities and states allowing motorists to turn right on a red traffic light after a full stop.

By a resolution passed on a unanimous vote, Montevallo's city council made the new ruling Monday night to become effective tomorrow, March 1. In passing the resolution Councilmen Grady Parker and James Seaman noted that many other communities across the nation have similar rules. The new ruling should conserve gasoline and speed up the flow of traffic. At the same time no reduction in safety is anticipated according to Troy Kirkland, Chief of the city's Police Department.

Montevallo's merchants and business men have been invited to a special meeting of the City Council next Monday night, March 4, to discuss ways and means of increasing the efficiency of picking up refuse in the business area of the town.

The 7:00 p.m. meeting Monday night will be held in the Alabama Power Company auditorium.

Montevallo's fire chief Dr. S.M. Mahan called the council's attention to a growing hazard in the form of empty cartons and empty bottles that are frequently found around doorways to some businesses in Montevallo. Mahan pointed out that the empty cartons create a dangerous fire hazard and the empty bottles could prove to be a menace to fire fighters should they be called to a fire.

Another topic expected to be on Monday night's agenda, is the practice of displaying merchandise on sidewalks and streets.

Montevallo's councilmen heard a petition from Ronnie Allen, a 21 year-old Pea Ridge resident. Allen's request is for a licnese to operate a recreation hall in a house now vacant, located at the corner of Shelby and Island Streets.

Montevallo's City Clerk Kenneth Bailey and City Building Inspector Thomas C. Latham were requested to inspect the property to see if it meets provisions of the city ordinance regarding off- street parking and to see if the building meets recently adopted fire codes.

Chief Kirkland informed council members that the city's recently employed police woman, Mrs. Letti Johnson has resigned. She is moving to Georgia.

Another visitor appearing before Montevallo Council Monday night was Allen Wilson, a member of the Pelham City Council. Wilson is now a candidate for the office of Sheriff of Shelby County.

Flu in schools

attendance began dropping, with the flu incapacitating up to a hundred students and faculty members. Students began getting sick at the high school, and substitute teachers began filling in here as they did around the county. Corbett stated that the absentee rate is now back up to the five per cent figure, normal for the season.

The flu epidemic is having effects on most of the county schools, with the crisis over in many schools. The epidemic is just beginning to affect some localities, as absences start to mount. Although there has been speculation about closing the public schools, superintendent Elvin Hill was out of town and unavailable for comment. Maybe, as some principals are hoping, the influenza wave will do its damage and disappear.

STREAKER PEEKERS - - A crowd of several hundred gather on the University of Montevallo campus Wednesday night after several "streakers" appeared. This activity led to a mass meeting of university students Thursday night who voiced desires for abolishment of the women's curfew and for dom visitation.

UM students hide and streak

Last Thursday's series of "streaking" incidents on the University of Montevallo campus have led to several meetings of the student body.

The meetings, most of them held in the school's Palmer Hall auditorium during evening hours, have been for the purpose of abolishing the curfew regulation for women students and for establishing a limited schedule of visitation hours in dormitories.

Some 700 to 800 students gathered in Palmer Hall Thursday night to verbally make their requests to Dr. Kermit Johnson, president of the school and his assistant James Chasteen.

Monday night, two meetings were held and a resolution was adopted which will be forwarded to the institution's Board of Trustees. The resolution formally requests the abolition of a women's curfew and sets suggested hours for interdormitory visitation.

A University spokesman indicated the executive committee of the board of trustees is expected to meet in the near future to consider the students' requests.

The practice of streaking that flourished for a 24 hour period has not been repeated since early Friday morning.

One campus observer noted that the recent low temperatures had no doubt contributed to the lack of streaking.

No streaking incidents have been observed since a young man from the Birmingham area was apprehended by campus police early Friday morning. He was personally suspended from the University by President Johnson.

Books read

People are reading bushels of books in Shelby County, according to statistics compiled by the county library board. In a four-month period of October through January, 148,107 books were checked out of county libraries and the bookmobile.

Figures show that check-outs increased from October to November, reaching a high of over 42,000 books in December, followed by a drop in January. While the majority of books were checked out at the bookmobile, municipal libraries accounted for quite a number of books. An additional 436 members were registered, 64 percent of whom were adults.

VOCATIONAL CONTESTANTS - - Jack Taylor (left) of Montevallo and Donnie Seals (right) of Columbiana compete in a national trade skills contest sponsored by the Vocational Industrial Clubs of America. Save old county courthouse

W. Warner Floyd, the executive director of the Alabama Historical Commission, has recommended that the city of Columbiana preserve and restore the old Shelby County Courthouse. The building now serves as Columbiana's city hall.

In a letter addressed to Columbiana mayor Robert N. Bolton, Floyd states that if the building, built around 1850, were restored, it would attract tourists as well as serve as a shrine to Shelby County.

Floyd also stated in his letter that the Alabama Historical Commission is considering the old Shelby County Courthouse for nomination in the National register of historic places.

Copies of the letter were sent to Probate Judge Conrad Fowler, Representative Tom Stubbs and Shelby County Historical Society president Kenneth Penhale.

IRS reminds fishermen

Farmers and fishermen may have to file their Federal income tax return and pay that tax by March 1.

Dwight Baptist, IRS director for Alabama, said that farmers and fishermen who did not file a declaration of estimated Federal individual income tax by January 15 should file their 1973 tax return band pay all tax due by March 1 to avoid a penalty.

Farmers and fishermen are defined as those persons who earned at least two-thirds of their 1973 gross income from farming or fishing.

At five locations--

Free shots for children are available

Many children in the county have not had their baby shots for immunization against childhood diseases, according to the county health department. The health department assumes that many parents do not know about the health department's free immunization clinics around the county. Shots are given to vaccinate against polio, measles, diptheria and other killer diseases.

Public health nurse Judy Bentley, R.N., reports that immunizations are given free at five locations every week. Every Thursday shots are given at the Columbiana Clinic from 8 to 11 a.m. and from 1 to 4 p.m.

Nurse Bentley also gives the immunizations Wednesday morning at the Harpersville medical clinic from nine to eleven, and from one to three at the Vandiver Missionary Baptist Church on every Wednesday afternoon.

Rhonda Johnson, R.N., also performs the same duties as a public health nurse. She gives shots at the Alabaster City Hall from nine to eleven every Friday morning, and from one to three on Friday afternoon.

Nurse Bentley recommends that parents brings their babies at the age of three months to begin their shots. At three months, they give the polio vaccine and the DPT shot for diptheria, pertussin (whooping cough), and tetanus. The two-in-one measles vaccine is given at age one, boosters for polio and DPT are given eighteen months after the child's first shots.

The immunization clinics are not just for infants and children. Nurse Bentley stated that tetanus shots are available for anyone, and that they give the TB skin test to people of all ages. She pointed out that everyone should have the tuberculosis test each year, although many people have never had it.

Mrs. Bentley pointed out that the health department does not have enough personnel to give shots at elementary schools as they did years ago. But, with the many locations they now use, she says there is no excuse for a child to fail to receive his shots. Without immunizations, polio and the other diseases are not gone. They remain a constant danger to the unvaccinated child.

ONLY SIX WEEKS' LITTER - - Only six weeks after a roadside dump near Waxahatchee was cleaned up by Shelby County Highway Department workers it looks like this. This is the type of waste the new Shelby County Collection System can eliminate if every citizen cooperates.

News notes from all around

Approximately 225 Shelby County cattlemen and their guests attended the annual cattlemen'sdinner held at Coosa Valley Academy last week.

W.M. Brown from Atmore, past president of the state Cattlemen's Association, addressed the group. He told them, "Alabama is one of the few states you could put a wall around, and the state could still exist. "He pointed out that Alabama has more water than any other state in the U.S. He said that because Alabama can grow good grass it will be of tremendous importance to the state cattle industry. He said that the goal for Alabama cattlemen should be to raise cattle to bigger sizes and process them here rather than sending them west for the final feeding and processing.

Re-elected as president of the Shelby County Cattlemen's Association for another year was Wayne Archer of Wilsonville. Sonny Thompson of Vincent was named vice president and Albert Scott of Montevallo will serve as secretary. Mrs. Archer and Mrs. Thompson will head up the CowBelles organization and Mrs. Kay Clark of Columbiana will serve as secretary.

The first theatre production at the newly renovated depot in Montevallo's City Park will draw sell-out audiences this Friday and Saturday nights. The Shelby County Community Theatre is presenting Lillian Hellman's "The Autumn Garden."

The audience will enter the depot at the side entrance and the cast will use the proposed library as a dressing room.

Chairs will be arranged to accommodate an audience of 75 to 80 persons. Volunteers have been working feverishly in recent weeks to wire the depot and prepare it for the first scheduled production. The building will not be heated, however, and the audience is advised to dress accordingly.

The play is under the direction of Charles Majure of the University of Montevallo foreign language faculty. The play will be performed in other communities if enough requests are received.

The Montevallo production was already sold out at press time.

Vote for Allen Wilson for full-time Sheriff of Shelby County

A Note to the People

I would like to try to influence the people of Shelby County who are not registered, to go register and vote. Vote for the man or woman of your choice, because when you are not registered you are not qualified to vote in any city election, town, state or presidential election. Look in the county paper and see when you can register.

I have met lots of friends and nice people while campaigning in Shelby County and I would like for them to know that I am financing my own campaign so I can help one person as well as another.

I would appreciate your support and influence among friends in Shelby County to vote for Allen Wilson on May 7 Democratic Primary.

Pd. Pol. Adv. by Allen Wilson, Pelham, AL.

Nurses injured in auto accident

by Elsie Archer Jones

Three nurses of Shelby Memorial Hospital, who were returning from their duties on the 11 to 7 shift, were involved in an auto accident early last Monday morning as they were stopped on Highway 280 for the school children to board the bus for school. Mrs. Mae Kelly who was driving the car stated that the impact knocked her car the full length of the school bus. She was coming from Chelsea, the bus was headed for Chelsea, and the driver of the other car which was involved was coming from Birmingham. The name of the driver of the other car is unknown to the writer, but his car bore a Louisiana license plate. All three nurses were rushed by ambulance to Shelby Memorial Hospital where they underwent extensive X-rays and examinations. Mrs. Carrie McClinton was able to return to her home in three days. but Mrs. Mae Kelly and Mrs. Gladys Moore are still in the hospital. Since Mrs. Kelly has other complications, her condition is considered most serious.

A fortunate incident happened at the time of the accident as W.L. Kelly, husband of Mrs. Mae Kelly, was going to work and came up on the accident just moments after it happened and was able to accompany his wife and the other ladies to the hospital and notify relatives.

The driver of the other car involved stated, according to reports, that during the early morning hours and the curves on the unfamiliar road, that he was unable to stop his car when he saw that the traffic was at a standstill at the time. This statement is written as a by-word by the author to call attention to the hazards of sending our children off to school in the early morning hours.)

Would you believe it, but "goats" have been put on the "hard-to- find" list of food items? It just seems that you are not on the "IN" list, unless you are searching for substitutes for these items which have so suddenly disappeared from our grocery shelves. I would appreciate it if anyone has a good recipe for cooking beavers. They seem to be very plentiful in this area. I don't know if there is a "season" limit for killing or trapping them.

Walker to run for PSC

Tom Walker has announced that he has qualified to run for a seat on the state Public Service Commission in the May 7th Democratic primary. The University of Montevallo student plans to run for the seat held since the 1940's by C.C. (Jack) Owen. Walker terms the election "one that offers the people of Alabama a clear-cut choice."

TOM WALKER

Owen announced that he is running on his record, and Walker stated that he too is running on Owen's record, because as Walker says, "That record has not provided public service." Pointing out that Owen voted for every utility rate increase but one since 1954, Walker notes that utility rates have risen over $100 million in the past three years.

In the interest of consumerism, Walker has been active in seeking what he termed fairer rates for the average Alabamian. For over two years he has been involved himself with cases concerning the Alabama Power Company and South Central Bell, even bringing the phone case before the country's Cost of Living Council. Soon he will be bringing the power company case before the State Supreme Court when it sets the date for the hearing.

In outlining his campagn program, Walker said: "The PSC can be a positive and vital force for upgrading rural phone service, increasing calling areas, and providing for plentiful power supplies at reasonable rates. It can aid the governor's development office in attracting new industry and more and better jobs in Alabama. It can see that money that has previously been spent on such wasteful things as European vacations and some advertising be used instead for more beneficial things such as research and development and expanded service."

Vincent branch bank names new officers

Jerry W. Wright has joined the Vincent Branch of the First National Bank of Childersburg as assistant vice- president and manager according to an announcement Wednesday by First National President Robert Cleckler.

Cleckler also announced Assistant Cashier Ron Webster has been assigned to the Vincent Branch to assist Wright in his new position.

Wright brings 14 years of Birmingham banking experience to the Vincent operation. He has completed 14 courses in banking with the American Institute of Banking and is currently studying for a degree in finance at Jefferson State College.

He has been a member of the Jaycees and the Civitan Club and is the teacher of a Young People's Class in the Sunday School of Mineral Springs Baptist Church in Jemison.

He is a native of Chilton County and is married to the former Janice Davis. They have three children.

Wright assumed his new duties in Vincent Monday. He pointed out the business hours for the Vincent bank are somewhat different than those of the main bank in Childersburg. The Vincent Branch is open from 9 a.m. until 2 p.m. each week day except Wednesday when the bank is closed all day. The Saturday hours are from 9 a.m. until noon. In addition, the Vincent bank re-opens on Friday afternoon from 3:30 until 5:30.

BANK OFFICIALS - - Jerry Wright, left, has joined the Vincent branch of the First National Bank of Childersburg as assistant vice president and manager. Ron Baxter, assistant cashier of the Childersburg bank, has been transferred to Vincent to assist Wright in his new position.

Recycling meet set

The Montevallo Chapter of the Alabama Conservancy is embarking upon a new program for recycling trash. Because of shortages of paper, metal, and other recyclable materials, the group plans to start recycling programs similar to those held in some Alabama cities.

Chapter president Richard Cummings announced that the ecologically- oriented group is planning an organizational meeting to kick off the program on February 28. He said that the Conservancy is seeking the co-operation of other civic groups and community leaders in the area.

The first phase of the program is a paper recycling drive. Cummings stated, "Paper recycling is relatively simple to begin with and could provide the interested groups with enough income to expand the recycling program to other areas."

Guest speaker at the upcoming meeting is Dr. Cameron McDonald, who is largely responsible for the recycling programs in Birmingham. He will discuss the recycling project at the meeting with all those concerned. The meeting is set for 7:00 p.m. in Room 103 of the University of Montevallo's science building, Harmon Hall. Cummings urges, "We especially need the attendance and assistance of all residents of Montevallo, and other interested groups."

Wilsonville church calls Wayne Ozment

Dr. Wayne Ozment began his duties as pastor of the Wilsonville Baptist Church Wednesday evening, February 20.

He is a graduate of Samford and receiived his B.D. and Th.D degrees from the New Orleans Baptist Theological Seminary.

He has served churches in Reserve, La. and in Brent, Cuba and Rockford, Ala.

He was a charter member of the Rockford Jaycees serving as chairman of their committee on the High School Programs for Football Games.

He and his wife, Martha Tipton, are natives of Gadsden. They have two children, Kristi, six and Chuck, 19 months.

CARD OF THANKS

We desire to express our heart's deepest gratitude to our friends, loved ones, neighbors and professionals who so generously came to offer their help through the dark hour of sorrow we have experienced in the passing of our loved one.

We want each one, who so thoughtfully came, and who assured us, in their own way, that they too, shared our loss, to realize how very much we do appreciate the kindness and sympathetic understanding shown us at this time.

May God bless you.

Thursday night storm brings tornado to Miller dairy

STORMY - - Nicknamed "stormy", this calf was born Thursday night at the Miller dairy when the tornado struck. No cattle were killed or injured in the storm, but the Millers are expecting a cut in milk production due to the storm's effect on their dairy cows.

by Rick Moore

Eight years ago, on June 2, 1966, the Harold Miller dairy in Vincent was virtually blown away by a devastating tornado. History repeated itself last Thursday evening when another violent twister struck the Miller farm.

As a result of this latest Shelby County tornado, one of the best dairy dairy operations in this area lay crippled.

Last week the Reporter outlined some of the financial and economic problems facing local dairymen. The tornado at the Miller dairy graphically illustrates problems caused the most basic factor that dairymen as well as other agricultural producers have to face - - the weather.

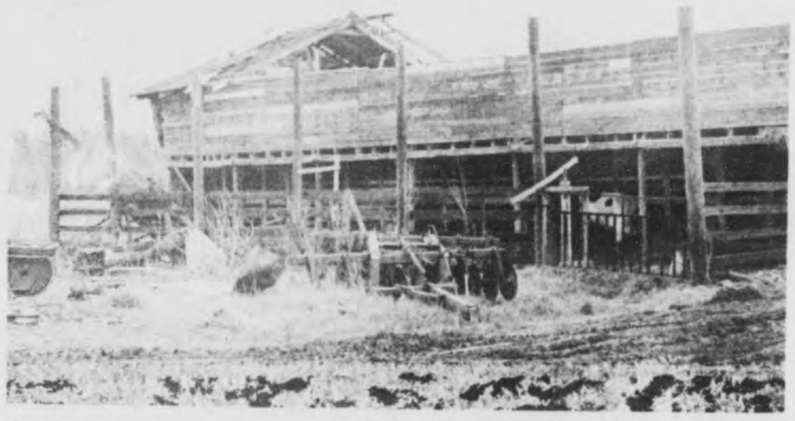
Judy Miller talked with the Reporter on Friday afternoon. The windstorm hit at 9:10 Thursday night, she explained. A stopped electric clock left a record of the exact time.

Mrs. Miller went on to say that her family was not in the house when the bornado struck their dairy. The Millers left for the safety of a nearby storm shelter when the storm approached. They could hear the twister plow through the dairy as they drove away from the house.

In all, the storm damaged or destroyed a hay barn, a calf barn, the farm workshop, an old dairy barn, a seventy foot silo, and several utility buildings and feed bins.

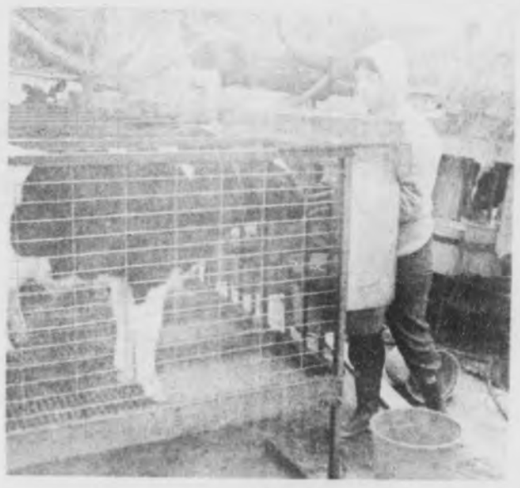
Fortunately, the tornado did not damage the milking parlor or kill any animals so that diary operations could be continued.

The wind blew away 50 percent of the dairy's fences and scattered debris through the pastures. For this reason the cows will not be able to graze.



Friends and neighbors from all over the county arrived at the Miller dairy Friday morning to assist in clean-up operations. Mrs. Miller estimated that at least seventy-five persons came to help. A work crew from the Shelby County jail also assisted clean-up operations.

The volunteers picked up debris, gathered hay bales blown across the fields and repaired damaged equipment. One of two large silos equipped with an automatic feeding system was rendered workable by 4 p.m. Friday.



With all the extra help, Harold Miller was able to milk his cows on Friday, but he was six hours late. The Millers expect a drop in milk production, but will be able to remain in business.

TORNADO DAMAGE - - A broken silo stands as a testimony to the destructive force of a tornado that struck the Harold Miller dairy near Vincent last Thursday night. The broken structure contained no silage when the twister struck. It was cracked beyond repair and will have to be torn down. The silo on the left was full of feed, but suffered only minor wind damage. It's feeding system was quickly repaired and by Friday afternoon the second silo was providing supper for Miller's hungry dairy cattle.

HAY BARN - - Tornadic winds ripped off the roof of Harold Miller's dairy barn scattering hay bales for some distance. Volunteers worked all day Friday helping to gather the hay and store it in another barn so that it would not be ruined by the rain.

CALF STALLS - - Mrs. Harold Miller (left) checks on several calves located in the stalls of what was once the dairy's calf barn.

Rabbit lovers set to enter Southern show

Interest is high among Shelby County rabbit breeders for the rabbit show on Saturday, March 9.

The show is an All-Southern show, sponsored by the Alabama Rabbit Breeders Association. Rabbits from five states will be entered.

The show will be held at the state fairgrounds in Birmingham at the rabbit house.

Among Shelby Countians who are making plans to enter rabbits are Elmon Cunningham, of Columbiana, Anne Hughen, David Hughen, of Helena, Joe Winslett, of Valleydale Road, Tom Green, Harpersville, Roger Dailey, Montevallo, and Donald and Kenneth Horton of Columbiana.

Entry blanks and fees must be in by March 4.

Rabbit breeders in Shelby County are taking initial steps to form a county association. Nominated to head up the new organization is Joe Winslett. Further information on the local association may be obtained from Winslett or at the All-Southern show at the Fairgrounds.

THOMPSON BRIDGE PROGRESSES - - County highway crews are moving rapidly on completing the bridge which will give Thompson Elementary and High Schools a new access road. (Photos by George Starcher)

Bridge nears completion

The 135 ft. long reinforced concrete bridge being built near Thompson School will soon be completed.

Norrell contractors of Georgiana, Alabama poured the third span of the four 34 foot long spans last Friday.

The $50,000 bridge will open the two and a half mile road connecting state Highway 119 at the school with the fast growing Navajo Hills section of Alabaster. The bridge is being paid for by the county. The cost of the $160,000 road is bieng borne jointly by the state and the county.

Use of this road by school buses will lessen the need for them to cross railroad tracks at several points. It will also provide access to the Alabaster Park.

REv. Kenneth Clement, pastor of New Hope Baptist, joined other pastors in the Association on a ten day trip to Seattle, Wash., to take part in the Simultaneous Revival Crusade for that area. We are hearing good reports from there.
